Felicitates PLA on 96th Anniversary PLA, Pakistan Army brothers in arms: COAS

Pakistan-China relationship is unique & robust that has proven its resilience in the face of all challenges; Friendship stood test of change of int'l landscapes: Chinese diplomat

ISLAMABAD (APP): Chief of Army Staff (COAS), General Syed Asim Munir on Wednesday said the People's Liberation Army (PLA) of China and Pakistan Army are brothers in arms and our relationship would continue to contribute towards safeguarding our collective interests. He made these remarks as Chief Guest during the 96th Anniversary of the founding of the People's Liberation Army (PLA) of China commemorated here at General Headquarters (GHQ), an Inter-Services Public Relations (ISPR) news release said.

Republic of China, Pang Chunxue, Defence Attache', Chinese Embassy Major General Wang Zhong, officials and Officers from tri-services of Pakistan attended the event. Speaking on the occasion, the Chinese Charge' d'Affaires thanked COAS for hosting the event for the 96th anniversary of the founding of the PLA.

"This all-weather strategic cooperative partnership between China & Pakistan has stood the test of the time and change of international landscapes", the Chinese Charge' d'Affaires remarked. "China & Pakistan have just jointly celebrated the 10th anniversary of the launch of CPEC and in the past months, COAS and other military leaders paid successful visits to China, which has strongly promoted the relationship between the two militaries", the Chinese Charge' d'Affaires endorsed.

The COAS felicitated the PLA and lauded the PLA's role in China's defence, security and nation-building. While highlighting various facets of the deep-rooted ties between the two states, militaries and the people, COAS said that the "Pakistan-China relationship is unique & robust that has proven its resilience in the face of all challenges."

Rejects IK's request to stay Toshakhana trial

We cannot interfere in trial court proceedings: Supreme Court

ISLAMABAD (Online): Supreme Court (SC) while rejecting PTI chairman petition filed against High Court (HC) order in connection with Toshakhana trial has remarked supervisory jurisdiction on trial courts is of high court only. "We cannot interfere in proceedings of trial court at this time. Let Islamabad High Court (IHC) decide. Possibility is there high court gives order for stopping trial tomorrow, the SC further remarked. The matter came up for hearing before a 3-member bench of SC presided over by Justice Yahya Afridi Wednesday. During the hearing of the case Justice Yahya Afridi inquired the case is fixed for hearing in High Court on what date.

Khawaja Haris told the court the case is fixed for hearing tomorrow in high court.

Justice Yahya Afridi remarked what relief you had sought we had given. It is surprising that even then you resorted to SC.

Khawaja Haris took the plea the real question is of jurisdiction.

Justice Yahya Afridi remarked your petition had become in-fructuous. Even then we heard it and gave order. We are understanding the situation. We had thought high court would give you better order. We had written in the order the high court should hear the petitions together. May be what relief you are demanding high court gives that decision.

Khawaja Haris told the court high court did not give stay. Therefore, we have come to SC.

The SC maintained let high court decide first. If you don't get relief then the case is pending hearing in SC.

The court while rejecting Chairman PTI plea for immediate relief adjourned the hearing of the case till August 04. The court also issued notices to the respondents.

Caretaker PM: Shehbaz contacts Nawaz, Zardari on proposed names

ISLAMABAD (INP): Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif contacted Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) supremo Nawaz Sharif and former president Asif Ali Zardari and held consultations on the proposed names for the caretaker prime minister and the caretaker set-up.

During consultations, the leaders agreed to complete the process of appointing the caretaker prime minister according to the Constitution and the law. Nawaz Sharif and Asif Zardari also agreed to present all the proposed names before the leaders of allied parties.

The leaders also agreed to deal with the issue of formation of a caretaker set-up as soon as possible.

Iranian FM arrives Pakistan on first bilateral visit

ISLAMABAD (APP): Foreign Minister of Iran Hossein Amir Abdollahian, will undertake his first bilateral visit to Pakistan from August 2-4 to discuss entire gamut of bilateral ties and the emerging regional situation with the leadership of Pakistan. Foreign Minister Abdollahian will hold talks with Foreign Minister Bilawal Bhutto Zardari on Thursday.

KARACHI: Prime Minister Muhammad Shehbaz Sharif, Türkiye's Vice President Cevdet Yilmaz and Chief of Naval Staff Admiral Muhammad Amjad Khan Niazi applaud after cutting a rope to launch Pakistan's 4th MILGEM Class Corvette "PNS Tariq" into sea at Karachi Shipyard & Engineering Works.

Shehbaz Sharif again invites Turkiye to join CPEC; Pakistan, Turkiye agree to maintain close coordination for improved ties

KARACHI (APP): Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif on Wednesday lauding the leadership role of Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, said that it was high time for Pakistan and Turkiye to enhance their bilateral strategic cooperation for the prosperity of the two nations.

The prime minister, addressing the launching ceremony of the fourth MILGEM Class Corvette - PNS Tariq here, said the joint venture project was an example of cooperation and support between the two brotherly countries.

Earlier, the prime minister and visiting Vice President of Turkiye Cevdet Yilmaz launched the fourth MILGEM warship.

Initiated in 2018, the MILGEM project envisages the construction of four Corvettes for the Pakistan Navy - two in Pakistan and two in Turkiye. The prime minister said Recep Tayyip Erdogan was a great leader which was reflected by his "wonderful" victory in the recent poll.

Therefore, the prime minister said it was high time for both countries to enhance their strategic cooperation and add more joint ventures in other fields.

The prime minister earlier attended the launching ceremony of the third Naval Corvette, PNS Khyber, in Istanbul, in November 2022. The first two Corvettes, PNS Babur and PNS Badar were launched in Istanbul and Karachi, in August 2021 and May 2022 respectively.

The MILGEM project represents an enduring symbol of Pakistan-Turkiye collaboration in the maritime domain. It is a tangible step towards self-reliance and indigenization and would fulfill the critical security needs of the Pakistan Navy.

The prime minister said that Pakistan and Turkiye were tied with the commonality of faith, heritage and civilisation with both sharing perspectives on regional and global issues. Referring to the tremendous support by the people of the subcontinent during Khilafat Movement, the prime minister said the bilateral ties predated the establishment of Pakistan.

"We celebrate each others' success stories and also stand together in the face of challenges... This is the level of our relations as we share each others' bounties and sorrows," he remarked.

The prime minister recalled Turkish President Erdogan and Turkish First Lady's visit to Pakistan after the floods as well as the generous contribution by the Turkish people for the flood victims of 2010 as well as last year.

The prime minister said that Pakistan Navy was fully dedicated to ensuring the high-quality maritime activities.

He said following the increasing burden on Port Qasim of Karachi, Pakistan was needed to create linkages between Karachi and Gwadar ports as Gwadar was about to become a business center for the country as well as the region.

Calling the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor a "roaring success" the prime minister said Pakistan and China had agreed to launch the second phase that would comprise green corridor, business corridor, special economic zones and IT corridors.

He said the second phase was bound to increase the quantum of business transactions and Turkiye was a "natural partner" and reiterated his invitation for the country to join that joint venture of prosperous partnership.

Prime Minister Shehbaz thanked Turkish President Erdogan, Naval chief, head of Karachi Shipyard and the ministry of defense production as well as the workers for their hard work and contribution to make the MILGEM project a success. He said that following the said achievements, certain actors were trying to establish their hegemony, so it was important to strengthen our navy and maritime activity.

Intelligence failure

Bestial violence once again stalks the land. There have been 18 suicide bombings already this year, surpassing the 15 such attacks during all of 2022. The horror of the latest one, in Bajaur district's Khar tehsil on Sunday, continues to unfold as poignant details about the victims come to the fore and the critically injured breathe their last in hospital.

So far, over 50 people have lost their lives, almost half of them minors. The militant Islamic State-Khorasan group claimed responsibility for the attack at the JUI-F rally in which the principal target appears to have been the party's Khar ameer, Ziaullah Jan: the event had been underway for two hours but the attacker detonated his explosives-laden vest only after the former arrived at the venue. Maulana Ziaullah and his 22-year-old son died in the attack.

On Monday, MNAs denounced the attack as the result of "complete failure" on the part of Pakistan's multiple intelligence agencies. It is difficult to disagree, considering these agencies have now had decades of experience in dealing with terrorist groups and security forces have carried out a number of 'intelligence-based operations' against them.

Their inability to prevent the Bajaur bombing has handed IS-K its biggest mass casualty 'success' since the sectarian attack on a Peshawar mosque last year, in which at least 64 people perished.

A recent UN report noted that in Afghanistan, distinctions between members of Al Qaeda and affiliated groups, including TTP, and IS-K are sometimes fuzzy and that there is a "tendency for people to gravitate towards the dominant or ascending power". Attacks such as the Bajaur bombing are thus useful for terrorist outfits to 'burnish their credentials' and attract recruits.

Moreover, there had been consistent indications of IS-K's presence in Bajaur, which is contiguous with Afghanistan's Kunar province — well known as a locale for terrorist training camps. The militant outfit had made an assassination attempt on Maulana Ziaullah last year as well and slain at least another cleric in the district. Had the attackers been tracked down, perhaps Sunday's tragedy could have been averted.

Some experts believe that IS-K militants, under pressure from the Afghan Taliban, have moved from their bases in Afghanistan and set up cells in major cities in Pakistan where they can more easily avoid detection. Several targeted killings in Peshawar this year of religious scholars as well as members of minority communities were traced to a network of IS-K militants — all Afghan nationals — in the city.

With an election around the corner, political parties must have security protocols in place in coordination with law-enforcement agencies. The intelligence apparatus should be streamlined and work in concert under an empowered Nafta. We cannot afford blurred lines between politics and national security — or a bloodbath could be in store.

External hazards

Fahd Humayun

With the government's tenure ending and an economic lifeline in hand after months of costly instability, it may be tempting to believe that the worst is over. But considerable uncertainty remains, not least on the question of the country's ability to complete a successful democratic transition later this year.

Pakistan is no stranger to the template of the hybrid regime. Indeed, hybridity occasionally seems to tide us over, eg, by buying us the outward appearance of stability, and momentary stakeholder convergence on key macro policy issues. But continuing hybridity comes with clear long-term costs. While the costs to Pakistan's own democratic health are fairly obvious, it is worth specifying a steep set of foreign policy costs likely to accrue over time, not least because of the singular importance the establishment tends to afford to Pakistan's external relations.

The first external area that ever-deepening hybridity at home will impact will be Pakistan's relations with the US. On paper, hybridity ought to work well because the relationship with the US is extraordinarily complex, and because hybridity is essentially a political arrangement that creates a single-window operation for interlocutors in D.C., who will have little trouble interpreting where the balance of power lies. In fact, hybridity may even allow for clearer, more effective conversations on Pakistan-US military coordination, the main benefit of which will be counterterrorism. A revival of short-to-medium-term economic engagement, furthermore, born of returning economic stability, may even create the impression of broad-based engagement with Washington — a long-held national desire.

However, the problem is that the shadow of either an extended caretaker set-up or contaminated elections later this year will likely damage the viability of the Pakistan-US relationship well into the future. Democratic impotency at home weakens the case for a Pakistan-US relationship based on shared cultural aspirations. This is especially true at a time when global Indo-Pacific partnerships are being packaged as liberal-democratic, even if the strategic compulsions at play are unmistakable. Ultimately, unless Islamabad can patch together and retain a more convincing democratic profile, laying claim to any kind of non-partisan stakes in the Indo-Pacific will be difficult.

The second external arena that hybridity will affect will be relations with India. Traditionally, hybridity in Islamabad plays to New Delhi's advantage because it cements the idea that civilians in Pakistan lack agency. But at home, too, India policy will continue to remain an unnecessary and dangerous tripwire. Specifically, the danger is that any potential policy pathways forward, including the potential resumption of commerce or trade, will never be seen as genuinely representative of the political aspirations of Pakistan's populace, which includes close to 10 million Kashmiris. Should civilian politicians attempt to flex greater agency on India policy, this will likely prompt a familiar kerfuffle, the only outcome of which will be a further erosion of civilian power.

A related diplomatic area that hybridity will directly hurt will be Pakistan's ability to effectively keep the Kashmir dispute alive abroad. Since August 2019, drawing attention to the Modi government's revocation of Articles 370 and 35-A has been a mainstay of successive Pakistani governments' foreign policy agendas. But questions around even the most basic tenets of procedural democracy in Islamabad will curtail the ability of both the country's diplomats and the establishment to speak truth to power abroad — especially when that truth is geared towards calling India out for illiberal behaviour.

Finally, consider the very legitimate and growing issue of internal and external security. We currently face a resurgent terrorist threat emanating, quite possibly, from two fronts, and claiming the lives of citizens from Bajaur to Balochistan. While hybridity may give the impression of intense coordination and consultation on CT and national security, it is ultimately untenable. With the establishment distracted by extra-domain affairs such as the economy, or worse still configuring electoral outcomes, national security is likely to get the short end of the stick.

The most attractive solution to fixing capacity constraints will be for an overstretched security apparatus to start demanding an even larger share of the resource pie to keep Pakistan and Pakistanis safe.

For these reasons, if not more, it is worth paying careful attention to not just the path that is currently being laid internally, but to the external consequences that may follow. -- Courtesy Dawn

American tentacles

Mahir Ali

Not long ago, a writer discussing Churchill's legacy singled out Britain and Australia as appendages to a rampaging Uncle Sam. The analogy might have been unkind, but it wasn't inaccurate. The thesis was verified by last weekend's Australia-US ministerial consultations in Brisbane, where the extent to which Canberra has embedded itself in Washington's alimentary canal became clearer.

The talks were overshadowed by a helicopter crash that claimed four lives during the Talisman Sabre joint military exercises. It should have served as a symbol of the human cost entailed by rampant militarisation. Predictably, what poured out, instead, were the usual blandishments about sacrifice in the service of a bigger cause.

Not to put too fine a point on it, that cause primarily involves the revival of what was instituted in the wake of World War II — Seato and Cento. Pakistan, to its eternal discredit, was a member of both. The 1954 Southeast Asia Treaty Organisation boasted only two members from the specified region, Thailand and the Philippines, alongside the US, New Zealand, Australia and former colonial powers Britain and France. Cento, formed in 1979 and also known as the Baghdad Pact, coupled the UK with Iran, Iraq, Turkey and Pakistan. Both were Nato outshoots with the primary aim of pushing back against Soviet-Chinese communism. Both withered away in the 1970s, following the American defeat in Vietnam and Iran's revolution.

So, there's nothing new about Nato's expansion into Asia, at least indirectly. This time it's likely to be a lot more direct, with a willing Australia as the key conduit. That makes it a direct target in the event of any confrontation between China and the West. In a sense, there is nothing particularly new about this strategy from Canberra's point of view. After all, it continued to consider itself part of the British Empire for decades after its ostensible independence, contributing manpower to every imperial endeavour from the Boer war to the Malaya insurgency and beyond. But during and after World War II, its eyes shifted from London to Washington.

There was a period after the Vietnam war — in which Australia participated, ob-v-iously on the losing side — when there was an effort to distance this colonial outpost from its genetic heritage, and to establish a comfort zone on the southern flanks of Southeast Asia.

But the endeavour was half-hearted, and when the then prime minister, John Howard, found himself stranded in the US as 9/11 and its aftermath unfolded, he offered up his nation as a deputy sheriff to Uncle Sam in Australia's neighbourhood.

Not much has changed since then. The present Labor government would resent being associated with Howard and his successors in the Liberal-National party coalition, but Labor doubled down on its predecessors' policies when it came to power in 2007. Its first 21st-century PM, Kevin Rudd, is now the ambassador in Washington, and it was his successor as PM — Julia Gillard — who embellished the military relationship with the US by authorising more boots on the ground in Australia's north.

That led to the Aukus deal, whereby Australia expects to receive nuclear-powered submarines in the 2030s. Notwith-standing Canberra's claims about sovereignty, both the Pentagon and some members of Congress expect that underwater boats will be beholden to US interests — much like the nuclear weapons in western Europe.

Australia is also expected to manufacture long-range missiles for the Pentagon. It asked for almost nothing in return, apart from floating the idea that it might be worthwhile to bring the case of Julian Assange to a conclusion. He's an Australian journalist in a top-security British prison, seemingly likely to be extradited to the US, where he faces decades of imprisonment — effectively a death sentence — for daring to publicise American atrocities in Iraq and Afghanistan.

US secretary of state Antony Blinken effectively told the Australians to go stuff themselves. His claim that Assange had jeopardised US security is nonsense, in the absence of any evidence that the information released by WikiLeaks harmed any individual. The motive for Assange's persecution is revenge for embarrassment.

No one expected Australia to push back against Blinken's nonsensical bluster. The US would be only too happy if Assange were to perish in Britain's Belmarsh prison, in which case, Canberra would offer thoughts and prayers, but acquiesce to America's prerogative. America's poison tentacles, after all, are sacrosanct, no matter how far they stretch. That does not exonerate China as a potential threat in its region, but for Australia to almost unquestioningly sign up again as a deputy sheriff to the American lord and master is folly that could lead to disastrous results long before the first nuclear submarine surfaces. -- Courtesy Dawn

SCCI rejects massive increase in fuel prices

PESHAWAR (APP): Sarhad Chamber of Commerce and Industry acting President Ijaz Khan Afridi while rejecting the recent massive increase in fuel prices and feared the government's moves will prove detrimental to the national economy, businesses, and industrial growth.

In a statement issued here on Wednesday, Ijaz Afridi said the economy, businesses, and industries are reeling owing to the flawed economic policies of the incumbent government.

On the other hand, he said the consistent increase in prices of power, gas, and petroleum products has further pushed the country toward economic instability and added to the miseries of the business community.

The SCCI's acting chief expressed fear that a new wave of inflation will come after the historic increase in fuel prices, resultantly, the move will affect all traders' communities, poor masses, and different segments of the society.

Bank Alfalah disburses Rs.970m for flood-impacted communities in second phase

KARACHI (APP): Bank Alfalah, a leading commercial bank in Pakistan, reported the highlights of the first half of 2023 during Phase-2 of its comprehensive rehabilitation and rebuilding initiative, which started with immediate rescue and relief in phase-1 in 2022.

With a steadfast commitment to empowering communities and promoting sustainable development, the bank has joined forces with esteemed partners. It has disbursed around PKR 970 million to address critical sectors such as healthcare, emergency care, housing, education, and livelihoods.

Bank Alfalah is embarking on phase-2 of its flood relief efforts, focusing on rehabilitation and rebuilding lives. This phase encompasses several key areas: sustainable housing, healthcare, education, and livelihood support, the statement said. Amongst all initiatives, there is a strong dedication to healthcare and education. A partnership with the Aga Khan Foundation has been strengthened by a generous donation of PKR 200 million, aiming to uplift pediatric healthcare in areas affected by floods. This collaboration seeks to bolster access to premier healthcare and reduce child mortality rates, predominantly in isolated areas.

Naqvi vows to improve health infrastructure in province

Independent Report
LAHORE: Punjab Caretaker Chief Minister Syed Mohsin Naqvi on Wednesday vowed to improve health infrastructure in the province to provide best health facilities to the citizens.

He was addressing the senior doctors at the auditorium of Services Institute of Medical Sciences in Services (SIMS) Hospital here.

The CM emphasized that the responsibility for errors did not solely rest with leaders, politicians, and bureaucrats. He reminded everyone that despair was a sin and, as Pakistanis, 'it is our duty to remain hopeful and strive for better conditions'. He encouraged the belief that even small individual efforts could lead to significant positive changes.

After assessing the condition of Services Hospital, he firmly asserted that no enemy should even think of visiting the hospital. The CM mentioned that he had visited hospitals all over Punjab and had not encountered any facility in worse condition than Services Hospital. He emphasized that doctors alone were not accountable for any faults; the government also shared responsibility for any deficiencies. The provision of essentials such as soap, floor cleaners, and air conditioning lies within the government's domain, he said and added creating a clean and conducive work environment for doctors was also the government's responsibility.

Mohsin Naqvi shared an incident he witnessed at a hospital in Multan where five children were being treated on a single bed. He made it clear that it was not the fault of the doctor but rather a testament to the dedication of doctors who worked diligently to treat multiple patients under challenging circumstances. He expressed gratitude to doctors for their unwavering commitment despite the unfavorable conditions in hospitals.

Hurdles in overseas employment of nurses removed: Minister

LAHORE (APP): Minister for Primary and Secondary Healthcare Dr. Jamal Nasir on Wednesday informed that hurdles in overseas employment of nurses had been removed.

In a statement issued here, the minister said that on direction of Punjab Caretaker Chief Minister Syed Mohsin Naqvi, the Primary and Secondary Healthcare department had also decided to process the applications of the nurses for ex-Pakistan leave on urgent basis.

He observed that on return of these nurses from abroad, the local patients and hospitals would be able to benefit from their experience, adding that the foreign remittances sent by the nurses during their employment would also be a service for national cause as Pakistan was in need for precious foreign exchange.

PESHAWAR (APP): Governor Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Haji Ghulam Ali on Wednesday emphasized the significant role of the Women Chamber in promoting and facilitating women's entrepreneurship and business activities.

He said this in a special ceremony was held at Governor House to honor women entrepreneurs with the Women Excellence Award, organized by the Women Chamber of Commerce and Industry Peshawar Division.

During the event, awards were distributed to women from various fields for their remarkable contributions and services in different sectors.

Prominent figures attending the ceremony included Provincial Minister Fazlullah, Women Chamber Azra Jamshid, Iranian Consul General Ali Banafsha Khawah, Head of UNHCR Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Ghairat Ahmad, Lieutenant General (Retd.) Nigar Johar, female police officers, and other dignitaries.

The Governor encouraged women to embrace modern technology to advance further in line with Islamic principles, highlighting that women play the most crucial role in shaping the future of their families and society.

Governor Haji Ghulam Ali also praised Islam for granting women a dignified position and inheritance rights, acknowledging that while business ventures are essential, the upbringing of families is primarily the responsibility of women.

WHO donates 15 motorbikes ambulances to enhance emergency services in KP

PESHAWAR (APP): In a significant stride towards strengthening emergency medical services and fortifying disaster relief capabilities, the World Health Organization (WHO) has generously contributed 15 motorbike ambulances and two vehicle ambulances to the Relief Department Khyber Pakhtunkhwa.

This benevolent donation marks a remarkable milestone in advancing healthcare accessibility and rapid response within the province. The official handover ceremony took place on Tuesday at the Rescue 1122 headquarters in Peshawar, uniting distinguished representatives from WHO, the Relief Department, and the Health Department to mark this momentous occasion.

The event underscored the spirit of collaboration and unwavering dedication to safeguarding public health and providing swift assistance during crises.

Motorbike ambulances have emerged as invaluable assets for delivering critical medical aid, particularly in areas with challenging terrains or limited accessibility. These agile and well-equipped vehicles will empower Rescue 1122 first responders to navigate rugged landscapes and swiftly reach remote communities, drastically reducing response times in life-threatening situations.

Putin reaffirms Russian stance on grain deal in call to Erdogan

Monitoring Desk
MOSCOW: Russian President Vladimir Putin told his Turkish counterpart Tayyip Erdogan on Wednesday that Moscow was ready to return to the Black Sea grain deal as soon as the West met its obligations with regard to Russia's own grain exports.

The deal, brokered by Turkey and the United Nations in July 2022, allowed for the safe export of grain from Ukraine's Black Sea ports. Last month Moscow exited the deal, accusing the West of hampering Russia's own grain and fertilizer exports.

In a statement on Putin's call with Erdogan, the Kremlin said: "It was noted that in the conditions of a complete lack of progress in the implementation of the Russian part of the 'grain deal', its further extension has lost all meaning."

It added that Russia would return to the deal "as soon as the West actually fulfills all the obligations to Russia" contained within it.

Russia's grain and fertilizer exports are not subject to Western sanctions imposed on Moscow over its military actions in Ukraine. But Moscow has said restrictions on payments, logistics and insurance have been a barrier to shipments.

The U.S. envoy to the United Nations said on Tuesday there were "indications" that Russia might be interested in returning to talks about the deal. Asked about those comments on Wednesday, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov stressed the need for the West to honour parts of the deal concerning Russian exports.

Russia's office said the Turkish leader had emphasised the importance of avoiding steps that could jeopardise the resumption of the Black Sea grain deal, which he described as a "bridge of peace".

The two leaders also agreed that Putin would visit Turkey, it said. A senior Turkish official said that discussions between Ankara and Moscow were ongoing for a visit in late August.

Earlier on Wednesday, Russia attacked Ukraine's main inland port on the Danube River, sending global food prices higher as Moscow ramps up its use of force to reimpose a blockade of Ukrainian grain exports. The port, across the river from NATO-member Romania, has served as the main alternative route out of Ukraine for grain exports since Russia reintroduced its de facto blockade of Ukraine's Black Sea ports in mid-July.

North Korea calls US human rights envoy a 'political house maid' in protest of criticisms

Monitoring Desk
SEOUL: North Korea hurled misogynistic insults Wednesday at a newly confirmed United States special envoy to monitor the country's human rights issues and warned of unspecified security consequences if Washington continues to criticize its human rights conditions. The statement published by North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency described Julie Turner as a "wicked woman" who was picked by the Biden administration as a "political housemaid" to launch groundless attacks on the country's human rights record. The U.S. Senate confirmed Turner's appointment July 27. She previously served as the director of East Asia and the Pacific at the State Department. The statement said the Biden administration's public criticism of North Korea's human rights situation highlighted its hostility.

Suspected militant attack in Yemen kills 5 troops loyal to secessionist group, spokesperson says

Monitoring Desk
SANAA: A suspected militant attack early Tuesday in southern Yemen killed at least five troops loyal to a secessionist group, in the latest such assault blamed on an affiliate of al-Qaida, a military spokesman said. The attack took place in Wadi Omran in Abyan province and also wounded four troops from the Southern Armed Forces, which is loyal to the secessionist

Southern Transitional Council, spokesman Mohammed al-Naqib said in a statement. The separatist council is backed by the United Arab Emirates and controls much of Yemen's south. It is at odds with the internationally recognized government. Al-Naqib said suspected militants attacked their forces using mortars and rocket-propelled grenades.

China replaces nuclear force leadership in surprise shake-up

Monitoring Desk
BEIJING: China's Xi Jinping has replaced two generals overseeing the country's nuclear and missile arsenal, a move that analysts say represents a major shake-up of the elite force's leadership. State media reported that Gen. Li Yuchao, chief of the People's Liberation Army's rocket force unit, and his deputy, Gen. Liu Guangbin, were replaced by a naval officer and an air force officer. The new leaders, former deputy Chinese navy chief Wang Houbin and party central committee member Xu Xishen, have not previously served in the force — a dramatic break with practice, experts said. "It's unprecedented in the history of China's missile forces," said M. Taylor Fravel, a professor of political science and director of the security studies program at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. For decades, commanders were selected from within the rocket force, a highly technical and specialized service that oversees the country's land-based nuclear weapons and its vast conventional missile arsenal, he said. It also was unusual to have the commanding officer and the unit's political commissar — Xu — named at the same time, China experts said. The two generals who were removed have not been seen in public for months.

Pope Francis urges Europe to work for peace as he lands in Portugal for World Youth Day

Monitoring Desk
LISBON: Pope Francis challenged Europe to retake its role as a peacemaker and bridgebuilder as he arrived Wednesday in Portugal to open World Youth Day, hoping to inspire the next generation of Catholics to work together to combat conflicts, climate change and other problems facing the world. Francis was spending five days in Lisbon, blending a state visit and pilgrimage to the Catholic shrine at Fatima with the raucous trappings of World Youth Day, the Catholic jamboree that aims to rally young Catholics in their faith. More than 1 million young people from around the world were expected to attend the gathering, which culminates with a papal Mass on Sunday. As he was traveling to Lisbon, Francis vowed to continue urging young people to "make a mess" — a reference to his now-famous exhortation at his first World Youth Day in Rio de Janeiro in 2013.

Lawmakers rally behind four bills, unanimously approved in Upper House

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Upper House of the Parliament unanimously approved four bills during Wednesday's session, all introduced with specific objectives and receiving widespread support from the attending members.

Minister for Law and Justice, Azam Nazir Tarar, introduced The Pakistan Civil Aviation Bill 2023, which proposes a division of the Civil Aviation sector into two separate entities: the Pakistan Civil Aviation Authority (PCAA) responsible for regulatory functions, and the Pakistan Airports Authority (PAA) in charge of commercial and operational aspects of airports.

The primary goal of this division was to enhance efficiency, improve services, and ensure compliance with international standards set by International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

The bill comes in the wake of the suspension of Pakistan International Airlines' flight operations in the UK and Europe, triggered by an irresponsible statement made by a former Aviation minister, Ghulam Sarwar Khan.

The Minister for Law and Justice, Azam Nazir Tarar, successfully had another bill titled The Pakistan Air Safety Investigation Bill, 2023, passed by the House.

Minister for Education and Professional Training, Rana Tanveer Hussain, presented The National Commission for Human Development (Amendment) Bill, 2023. The bill's objective is to enhance the effectiveness of over 7,000 employees of NCHD (National Commission for Human Development).

Minister for Finance, Mohammad Ishaq Dar, moved The Pakistan Sovereign Wealth Funds Bill, 2023, in the National Assembly. The bill aims to establish Pakistan Sovereign Wealth Funds to promote sustainable economic development through the management of fund assets, following the best international standards, policies, and practices. The objective is to maximize the value of these funds for the benefit of future generations.

The Minister mentioned that Pakistan possesses the largest gas pipeline valued at 40 to 50 billion dollars and has reserves of minerals and mines worth $600 billion. To start with, seven such valuable assets, amounting to $8 billion, will be placed in the Pakistan Sovereign Wealth Funds.
