Kakar, Putin discuss ways to enhance bilateral, regional cooperation

BEIJING, (APP): Caretaker Prime Minister Anwaar-ul-Haq Kakar on Tuesday met Russian President Vladimir Putin here wherein the two leaders reviewed bilateral cooperation with a special focus on trade, investment and energy. In the meeting held on the sidelines of the Third Belt and Road Forum for International Cooperation, the two leaders expressed satisfaction with the steady expansion of Pakistan-Russia relations and stressed the need for enhanced cooperation in diverse fields.

Russian President Putin received Prime Minister Kakar before they held a meeting that encompassed bilateral, regional, and international affairs.

They also discussed the prospects of enhancing Eurasian connectivity and Pakistan's pivotal role in regional integration through rail, road and energy corridors.

Prime Minister Kakar stressed the need for enhanced regional integration for the economic development of the entire region, and reaffirmed Pakistan's commitment to further expanding and strengthening bilateral cooperation with Russia in the areas of trade & investment, energy, con-BEIJING: Chinese President Xi Jinping and First Lady, Madame Peng Liyuan nectivity and counter-ter-tenced to death.

Having accepted unquestioningly political objectives dictated by unelected quarters, the entire apparatus of our state has been acting with all the subtlety of a bulldozer.

Nowhere is this more obvious than in the federal and provincial capitals, whose respective interim administrations have remained unapologetic about the duplicity apparent in their decisions as they go about enforcing a stricter set of rules for the PTI while allowing other parties freer rein.

Just last week, a dozen PTI supporters were arrested outside the National Press Club in Islamabad, where they had gathered to express support for the Palestinian cause.

The party and its supporters had a right to react angrily: no other religious or political entity seems to have faced similar treatment in recent days as they have gone about conducting political outreach activities or organising rallies for the people of Gaza. To deny one party the privileges being enjoyed by others seems petty and smacks of victimisation.

More recently, the enthusiasm that the Lahore administration has shown for the PML-N's plans for a grand rally at the Minari-Pakistan even as it simultaneously denied the PTI a similar gathering at Liberty Chowk has made it abundantly clear why the PML-N's political rivals fear there will be no 'level playing field' before the upcoming general election

Both the PTI and the PPP have been questioning the circumstances in which Nawaz Sharif has 'agreed' to return to the country from his self-imposed exile. Both parties believe that the elder Sharif's homecoming is happening thanks to an alleged covert deal with the 'concerned quarters' ie, the security establishment.

Both parties are also right in asking why an individual who is a proclaimed offender, who has been on the run from the Pakistani justice system, is being 'welcomed' by the state upon his long-delayed return with pomp and pageantry rather than a solemn reckoning with the law. Unless the state immediately backs down from its manipulation of the political domain, there is a good chance that the upcoming elections will be preceded and followed by the kind of intense controversies that will never allow a civilian-led set-up to stand on its own feet. The 2018 elections are a case in point. If the country is to be run by a political leadership that lacks a democratically acquired mandate, and is partnering with an unaccountable elite that has no tangible, lasting solutions for the country's problems, we should stop thinking about progress.

The only way forward is to let the people choose the leaders they think can best lead them and for non-political forces to stop in-terfering in this process. Finally, the ECP and the caretaker governments should take stock that only individuals who require access to specific of their mistakes. They have constitutional duties to fulfil, which they seem to be failing in quite spectacularly.

2023, which now imposes the death penalty for violations of the official secrets. In general, government correspondence is often classified into different levels of sensitivity, such as "Top Secret," "Secret," "Confidential," or other designations. The highest levels of classification, such as "Top Se-cret," are reserved for the most sensitive information. Access to classified information is typically granted on a "need-toknow" basis. This means so after following an elaborate procedure which may involve, seeking formal recommendations and views from the concerned ministries, the agencies, departments or institutions of national security At that time, I had no and safety and other relevant departments before declaring any cipher subject matter as declassified.

Even when the head of state and government take such decision he is required remove any sensitive parts of the cipher which can jeopardize national security or could potential harm the relationship with another friendly or important country

If the head of state or government discloses classified or cipher information in a public meeting without following the established protocol and proper declassification procedures, it can have serious legal, political, and national security implications. It can potentially harm national security by revealing sensitive intelligence, military operations, or diplomatic negotiations. It can lead to poclassified information for litical backlash, undermintheir official duties are ing the leader's credibility

Cipher a hanging sword

In some cases, a head of state or government who engages in such behavior may face calls for resignation or impeachthorized access or inter- ment, the severity of the response depends on the nature of the disclosed information and the political climate, erode trust within the government and sure security. Diplomatic among intelligence and seciphers are essential for curity agencies, career professionals may lose confidence in the leader's ability to protect sensitive information, can strain diplomatic relations with other countries, potentially leading to diplomatic crises The consequences of such actions can be significant; however, the specific outcome may depend on the legal and political systems in place in a given country and the extent of the breach. Legal processes, investigations, and, if necessary, legal action can follow such incidents to ensure accountability According to one legal opinion, the Prime Minister or Finance Minister of Pakistan were not authorized to disclose the cipher to the public as the Official Secrets Act 2023 clearly states that any classified information, including diplomatic correspondence, cannot be disclosed to the public without the prior approval of the appropriate authorities. It is a serious crime, and the consequences can be punished with imprisonment for up to 14 years, or with the death sentence in certain cases. The next important Question is, who is the proper authority for seeking permission to disclose the cipher matter to the public?. In the case of the Prime Minister or Foreign Minister, the proper authority for seeking permission to disclose classified information, including cipher matter, to the public is the National Security Council (NSC), a highlevel body that is respon-

Prime Minister on matters of national security.

The NSC meets regularly to discuss matters of national security and to make recommendations to the Prime Minister. If the Prime Minister or Foreign Minister wishes to disclose classified information to the public, they must first seek the approval of the NSC. The NSC when making the decision will consider the factors such as the sensitivity of the information, the potential impact on national security and the public interest.

If the NSC approves the disclosure of the information, the Prime Minister or Foreign Minister will then need to obtain the approval of the Cabinet. The Cabinet is the highest decision-making body in the government, and it is responsible for approving all major decisions.

Once the Cabinet has approved the disclosure of the information, the rity and foreign relations, Prime Minister or Foreign Minister can then make the information public. If official procedure is not followed, the provision of the amended Official Secret Act 2023 can be evoked.

The original section ficials or employees. of the Act, Section 9, states that anyone who discloses classified information without authorization can be punished with imprisonment for up to 14 years. The amended section adds a new subsection, Subsection (3), which states that anyone who discloses classified information with the inunder the Espionage Act tent to injure the interests but was not ultimately conof Pakistan or to benefit a victed.
