Gazan apocalypse

With Tel Aviv's troops carrying out land incursions inside Gaza while its jets mercilessly pound the congested Strip, obliterating hospitals, residential buildings and shelters, it is clear that Israel is attempting to foist its 'final solution' on the Palestinian people in the name of going after Hamas. Since Oct 7, when Hamas staged raids inside Israel, over 7,000 Palestinians have been butchered by Israel, nearly half of them children. Tel Aviv has shown no mercy, wiping out entire families, targeting civilian infrastructure, and cutting off food, water, communication links, power and fuel to Gaza — all qualifying as war crimes. Yet Israel's powerful friends, including US President Joe Biden, doubt the Palestinian toll; they believe Israeli accounts that Tel Aviv did not bomb the Al-Ahli Hospital, and that it was a misfired Palestinian rocket that caused the atrocity.

In fact, it is the blind support of the West that has emboldened Israel to unleash genocidal force against Palestinian civilians, as it knows it will not have to pay for its crimes.

There is also disingenuous framing of the conflict by Israel and its friends in Western officialdom and media. The fact is that the Arab-Israeli conflict did not begin with the Hamas raid. For decades, Palestinians have faced death, humiliation and the usurpation of their ancestral land on a daily basis. And, while the targeting of civilians by both sides is condemnable, Oct 7 was the explosive reaction to years of pent-up rage, as Gaza's people had been living under a siege enforced by Israel long before the latest hostilities broke out.

Whatever spin Tel Aviv and its claque of supporters may be putting on the conflict, people of conscience the world over are demanding an end to the massacre of Palestinians.

The majority of states voted for a Jordanian resolution in the UN General Assembly calling for a truce. Moreover, hundreds of thousands have marched in cities as diverse as London, Sana'a, Baghdad and Paris demanding an end to the slaughter. Many, many Jews have clearly told Israel: 'not in our name'.

The Middle East stands at the edge of a precipice. If Israel continues its slaughter in Gaza, particularly through an expanded ground invasion, and if the US-led West flexes its military muscle in its support, the whole region can go up in flames.

Tel Aviv needs to immediately end its bloody campaign, while all actors must stand down and allow the grieving people of Gaza to bury their dead. The siege must be broken so that ample supplies of food, water and medicine can reach Gaza.

But if Israel continues its merciless assault, and the West continues to aid it, the Middle East will explode, and the reverberations will be felt across the world.

Mission Lion-heart

Muna Khan

For the past month, we've been hearing iterations of 'sher aya' (here comes the lion), referring to the return of Nawaz Sharif, but I'm here to write about another sher. In this case, a real person, a zoology professor at Government Postgraduate Degree College in KP named Sher Ali, who last week gave a three-page undertaking, reportedly under pressure from clerics, denouncing Darwin's theory of evolution. That he did this in the district commissioner's office, which, as a representative of the state, has to protect all citizens, is most infuriating. But it's easy for me to say this from the comfort of my home, because I have not had to face threats for my teaching material.

And yet. In 2020, the Human Rights Commission of Pakistan released a statement warning of the grave threats posed to academic freedom. They expressed fears of "recurring attacks on academic freedom of expression through use of the country's controversial blasphemy or sedition laws that could carry a death sentence".

But Sher Ali wasn't teaching his opinion. I understand the theory of evolution is a prickly subject among a lot of faiths, but as a science teacher, Sher Ali was following approved course material and doing his job. He also wrote on Facebook — where he has a following of 21,000 — how he seeks his students' consent before teaching Darwin's theories. However, it seems clerics took exception to a speech he made earlier this month about women's rights in relation to purdah. And apparently, the only way to resolve the issue, which had been brewing for a fortnight, was for Sher Ali to denounce Darwinism and mixed gatherings, as well as accept women's inferiority to men. He also renounced his speeches and social media posts saying they were "contrary to teachings of Islam", as reported by this paper, and absolved the clerics of Bannu if something untoward happens to him.

Science and religion have often been portrayed as enemies at war. But religious leaders have come a long way since Galileo was charged with heresy in 1633 for teaching that the Earth orbits the sun. Because people's lives are at serious risk in Pakistan, where anything they say can be labelled as anti-religion, perhaps a compromise can be reached: maybe some lessons do not fall under science's domain, but those that do should be taught by the experts.

Thankfully, science and religion are clear on gender: women are not the inferior sex. Some clerics saying otherwise do not make it so. This must be challenged.

Muslim leaders have run into trouble for embracing Darwinism elsewhere. Dr Usama Hasan, an imam and science lecturer in the UK, was suspended from his mosque in 2011 following backlash to his saying that religious belief and the theory of evolution were not incompatible. He also said the requirement for hijab was cultural in origin. He received death threats for both views. I am sure I can find several other examples from across the world to show that we are not alone in being bullied by hard-line clerics.

However, we are alone in our social indicators. Pakistan has the world's second highest out-of-school children according to Unicef. The World Health Organisation recommends the health budget be enhanced to six per cent of GDP. It was under 1pc in the last budget. The poverty rate has risen from 34.2pc to 39.4pc in just one year.

The World Bank in May listed Pakistan's Human Capital Index as 0.41. This means "a baby born in Pakistan today will only be 41pc as productive as they could be if they enjoyed complete education and full health".

The report said "it is a human capital crisis that is profound, silent and with far-reaching negative effects on the potential of the country and its people."

I believe Sher Ali represents the potential of this country, as do so many teachers that work hard because they want to make a difference in children's lives. Children deserve a shot at the future, but the odds are stacked against them.

To the sher planning his family's return to power, I ask them to protect all the Sher Alis of this country. To let them do their jobs safe in the knowledge that if a student or outsider accuses them of heresy, the state's pillars will act in accordance with the law. I ask them to imagine the education and health sectors as the big development projects they love, and prioritise them over motorways. Demolish these dismal statistics that keep this country poor. Pakistan is owed courageous leadership that must make tough decisions for the betterment of its poor and marginalised citizens. Their future should be the one being negotiated in deals. Is this lion up to the task? — Courtesy Dawn

Elusive peace

Aizaz Ahmad Chaudhry

A popular view by academics and politicians alike is that Hamas's recent action of Oct 7 not only instigated Israel to exact the biggest ever death toll of Palestinians, even more than the Intifadas, but also undermined the peace process. However, this act did not take place in a vacuum. It was an act of resistance to the systematic state terrorism that Israel has been committing for decades against the Palestinian people.

For seven decades, Israel has used brutal force to suppress the Palestinians' right to self-determination, guaranteed by UN Resolution No 181 of 1947, which had decided to partition Palestine into two states: one Arab, the other Jewish. On Oct 7, 1947, when the General Assembly of the newly formed United Nations was discussing the draft resolution, Pakistan's representative, Sir Zafarullah Khan, built a strong case for the right of Palestinians to form an independent modern state on the lands on which they had lived for millennia.

At the centre of the debate was the British government's Balfour Declaration, which, on Nov 2, 1917, had announced its intent to establish "a national home for the Jewish people" in Palestine and asserted that "... nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine..." This commitment was never honoured. To date, the Palestinians, like the Kashmiris, have been fighting for the right to live on their own lands with honour and dignity, a right that most people get easily. Palestine's Israel conundrum can be understood from three dimensions: territorial, ideological, and geopolitical.

Territorially, the Arab Palestinians believe that they have lived in this land for millennia, including the times when Palestine was called Canaan, or when King David and, before him, the patriarch Jacob, later named Israel, lived in these territories. In recent history, the land has remained under the suzerainty of, among others, the Romans, Arabs, the Ottomans and then the British. It was the Zionist movement (those Jews who strove for an independent homeland), which brought Jews from Europe to occupy the Arab lands, pushing 700,000 native Palestinians out of their homes in an event remembered as the Nakba, the catastrophe that accompanied the creation of the state of Israel on May 14, 1948. Ideologically, this land has religious significance for the Jews, Christians and Muslims. The Muslims revere the Al-Aqsa Mosque, while for the Jews this land was home to their traditional ancestors and Hebrew patriarch.

Geopolitically, it was Britain that initiated the idea of creating a Jewish state in Palestine, pulling in Jews from Europe and displacing the local population. Over the past 70 years, the US and Britain have treated Israel as the pivot of their Middle East policy.

Given the above territorial, ideological, and geopolitical factors, peace continues to elude the land of Palestine. Neither the Arab-Israeli wars of 1948, 1967 and 1973, nor the Palestinians' indigenous resistance to Israel, which peaked twice as the first Intifada (1987-1992) and then the second Intifada (2000-2005), have helped resolve the conflict. Disunity amongst Palestinian ranks, ie, between Fatah and Hamas, has also undermined their cause.

The peace option was tried but did not result in earnest implementation of the two-state solution. Egypt recognised Israel in 1979 and Jordan in 1994. The Oslo Accords of the 1990s could secure only a little more autonomy for Palestinians. Most recently, the Abraham Accords saw the UAE, Bah-rain and Morocco establishing diplomatic relations with Israel. There are reports that Saudi Arabia was negotiating a peace settlement with the US, which would have ensured the right of the Palestinians to live in a state of their own. As is evident, the recent attack by Hamas on Israel on Oct 7 has halted Arab-Israeli normalisation.

With protests breaking out in all Muslim lands, Europe, and even the US, it appears Israel's disproportionate reaction to the Hamas attack and the indiscriminate bombing of civilians in Gaza has shaken the conscience of the world — yet, this is not enough. The United Nations Security Council met, where Russia, China and others tried to secure a ceasefire and a humanitarian corridor to Gaza. The US veto blocked practically any action by the UN. The unequivocal support that Israel has received from the US has emboldened it to disregard all human rights. Keeping Gaza under siege for weeks with no food, water, fuel or medicine, killing innocent civilians, including children, bombing hospitals and places of worship, and blocking humanitarian aid to besieged Gazans is tantamount to war crimes. For Palestinians, resistance has become a duty. — Courtesy Dawn

Biden says Mideast leaders must consider a two-state solution after the war ends

Monitoring Desk
WASHINGTON: As the 3-week-old Israel-Hamas war enters what Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu says could be a "long and difficult" new stage, President Joe Biden is calling on Israeli and Arab leaders to think hard about their eventual post-war reality.

It's one, he argues, where finally finding agreement on a long-sought two-state solution to the Israel-Palestinian conflict should be a priority. "There's no going back to the status quo as it stood on Oct. 6," Biden told reporters, referring to the day before Hamas militants attacked Israel and set off the latest war. The White House says Biden conveyed the same message directly to Netanyahu during a telephone call this past week.

"It also means that when this crisis is over, there has to be a vision of what comes next, and in our view it has to be a two-state solution," Biden said. The push for a two-state solution — one in which Israel would co-exist with an independent Palestinian state — has eluded U.S. presidents and Middle East diplomats for decades. It's been put on the back burner since the last American-led effort at peace talks collapsed in 2014 amid disagreements on Israeli settlements, the release of Palestinian prisoners and other issues.

Palestinian statehood is something that Biden rarely addressed in the early going of his administration. During his visit to the West Bank last year, Biden said the "ground is not ripe" for new attempts to reach a permanent peace even as he reiterated to Palestinians the long-held U.S. support for statehood.

Now, at a moment of heightened concern that the Israel-Hamas war could spiral into a broader regional conflict, Biden has begun to emphasize that once the bombing and shooting stop, working toward a Palestinian state should no longer be ignored. Until recently, Biden had put far more emphasis on what his administration saw as the achievable ambition of normalizing relations between Israel and its Arab neighbors than on restarting peace talks.

Hundreds of thousands attend pro-Palestinian rallies in Europe

Monitoring Desk
LONDON: Hundreds of thousands of demonstrators rallied in cities across Europe, the Middle East and Asia on Saturday to show support for the Palestinians.

In London, which saw one of the biggest marches, aerial footage showed large crowds marching through the centre of the British capital to demand the government of Prime Minister Rishi Sunak call for a halt to hostilities.

"The superpowers at play are not doing enough at the moment. This is why we're here: we're calling for a ceasefire, calling for Palestinian rights, the right to exist, to live, human rights, all our rights," said protester Camille Revuelta.

"This is not about protecting Palestinian lives," she added. Echoing Washington's stance, Rishi Sunak's government has stopped short of calling for a ceasefire, and instead advocated "humanitarian pauses" to allow aid to reach Gaza. Britain has supported Israel's right to defend itself after the Oct 7 Hamas raid in Israel.

There has been strong support and sympathy for Israel from Western governments and many citizens over the Hamas raids, but the Israeli response has also prompted anger, particularly in Arab and other Muslim countries.

In Malaysia, a large crowd of demonstrators chanted slogans outside the US embassy in Kuala Lumpur. A huge rally in the Turkish city of Istanbul also drew hundreds of thousands of people. In the Israeli-occupied West Bank, Palestinian protesters took to the streets in Hebron, calling for a global boycott of Israeli products.

Ukrainian drones hit Nuclear waste facility, says Moscow

Monitoring Desk
MOSCOW: A Ukrainian drone crashed into a nuclear waste storage facility at the Kursk power plant in western Russia on Thursday, damaging its walls, Russia's foreign ministry said on Saturday, calling on other governments to condemn "an act of nuclear terrorism". A ministry statement said Ukraine must have known that its actions could have caused a full-scale nuclear catastrophe that would have affected many countries.

"We call on all governments to issue a strong condemnation of Kyiv's barbaric actions, which are extremely dangerous and could lead to irreparable consequences," said foreign ministry spokeswoman Maria Zakharova.

Moscow said that it had thwarted Thursday's drone attack and two news outlets said an explosion had damaged the facade of a warehouse storing nuclear waste. Saturday's statement was the first official confirmation of the damage.

Zakharova said one explosive-packed drone had damaged the nuclear waste facility's walls while another two had hit an administrative building complex.

Turkiye celebrates centenary under shadow of Gaza war

Monitoring Desk
ISTANBUL: Turkiye marks its centenary as a post-Ottoman republic on Sunday with somewhat muted celebrations held under the shadow of Israel's escalating war with Hamas militants in Gaza.

President Recep Tayyip Erdogan will be front and centre of day-long events that both honour the secular republic's founder and play up the achievement of the Islamic-rooted party running Turkiye since 2002.

Erdogan and World War I-era military commander Mustafa Kemal Ataturk have become the seminal figures of the modern Turkish state.

Ataturk is lionised across Turkish society for driving out invading forces and building a brand new nation out of the fallen Ottoman Empire's ruins in the wake of World War I.

Turkiye was formed as a Western-facing nation that stripped religion from its state institutions and tried to forge a modern identity out of its myriad ethnic groups.

It eventually became a proud member of the US-led NATO defence alliance and a beacon of democratic hopes in the Middle East.

But Ataturk's social and geopolitical transformation of the overwhelmingly Muslim nation created divisions that weigh on Turkish politics to this day.

Chinese party delegation visits Solomon Islands

Monitoring Desk
BEIJING: A Chinese communist party delegation has visited the Solomon Islands, calling the "flourishing" cooperation between China and the Pacific nation a show of how diplomatic ties were in their peoples' interest, Chinese state media said on Sunday.

The delegation led by the deputy head of the international department under China's Communist Party central committee, Guo Yezhou, met Solomon Islands' Prime Minister Manasseh Sogavare during a visit spanning Friday to Sunday. The delegation also met the foreign minister and energy minister. China had signed a policing pact with the Solomon Islands in July, as both countries upgraded their ties to a "comprehensive strategic partnership" when Sogavare met Chinese Premier Li Qiang in Beijing. China's visit to the southern Pacific archipelago comes a week before Australia's Prime Minister Anthony Albanese is set to visit Beijing.

Catastrophe unfolding in Gaza, warns UN secretary general

Monitoring Desk
UNITED NATIONS: "A humanitarian catastrophe is unfolding in front of our eyes," UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres warned on Saturday as another night of heavy bombing flattened Gaza and virtually cut it off from the outside world.

The UN General Assembly adopted a resolution by 120 to 14 votes calling for an "immediate, durable and sustained humanitarian truce" in Gaza. But even this overwhelming support for a pause in fighting had little impact on the situation in Gaza, where the Israeli military action seems to have entered a decisive phase.

"Gaza is in complete blackout and isolation while heavy shelling continues," warned Josep Borrell, the EU High Representative for foreign affairs.

In a tweet posted on Saturday, he described the situation in Gaza as "desperate", where people live "without electricity, food, water".

President Arif Alvi

caretaker has congratulated the President and people of Turkiye.

"On behalf of the people of Pakistan and the government of Pakistan, I would like to extend my warmest congratulations to President Recep Tayyip Erdogan on the auspicious occasion of 100th anniversary of Republic of Turkiye which was found on October 29 in 1923 under the charismatic leadership of Mustafa Kemal Atatürk, the great leader of Turkiye," President Alvi said in his video message.

He said the relationship between Pakistan and Turkiye had been very old, even before the formation of Turkiye and Pakistan when there was a great friendship of people of this region and the people of Turkiye. He highlighted that the good relationship was evident from the fact that people along with relief goods from this region were sent to fight along with them in the Russian battle which Turkiye had always reciprocated.

The president believed that a tremendous progress had been made under the outstanding leadership of Tayyip Erdogan while at the same time there had been a great leadership shown in the issues of the Muslim world by the current Turkiye leadership.

The outstanding friendship between Pakistan and Turkiye is based on mutual understanding on world issues as well as Turkiye stood by us on Kashmir, the president said. He said the Turkish president had taken bold stance on the recent brutal events happening in Gaza. He believed that the Muslim world would also take a bold stance on this very painful issue of Gaza and on the issue of Kashmir as well.

The president said the world had forgotten how the Muslims had always welcome people from all religions in Anatolia and Andalus throughout history.

Governor urges mothers to encourage daughters to pursue their career

KARACHI (APP): Governor Sindh Kamran Khan Tessori has urged mothers to encourage their daughters to pursue their chosen fields even after their marriage.

This he said while speaking at a women's festival organized by PINKtober, an NGO working for awareness about breast cancer.

"It is a reality that after marriage the girls are expected to only look after their homes as a housewife and leave behind their professional degrees and aspirations for the future", he observed.

Governor Sindh said that this trend is depriving girls to contribute towards national economy. "Their degrees and higher education are wasted as they are not allowed to work in their chosen fields after getting married", he opined.

He said that despite all odds and hurdles the women in Pakistan are performing brilliantly in every walk of life with distinction. "From politics to business, civil service to sports and social work to armed force, their contributions are not less than men", he added.

He said that NGOs play a vital role in the social sector and their contributions especially in health and education are immensely important for the provision of better facilities to the masses especially the poor and downtrodden, he remarked.

The Governor said that lack of awareness about breast cancer was the root cause of deaths from this disease, which was higher as compared with other Asian countries. "These deaths can be prevented with timely diagnosis and mammography", he added.

He lauded PINKtober and its head Shama Rashid for setting a record for making a cancer symbol pink ribbon with the help of 5,000 cupcakes and said that Governor House would support any initiative aimed at inclusiveness and integration of our women in nation-building activities.

Ashrafi highlights S. Arabia's crucial role in resolving Palestinian issue amid ISLAMABAD (APP): The Special Representative to the Prime Minister on Religious Harmony and the Pakistani Diaspora in the Middle East and Islamic Countries, Hafiz Muhammad Tahir Mehmoed Ashrafi, said on Sunday that Saudi Arabia had emerged as a crucial player in finding a solution to the long-standing Palestinian issue in a tumultuous region marred by conflict and uncertainty.

In an exclusive interview with APP, he said the recent escalation in violence, exemplified by a deadly missile strike on Al-Ahli Baptist Hospital just hours before President Biden's visit to Israel, underscored the urgency of addressing the Palestinian crisis.

Ashrafi, who is also the chairman of the Pakistan Ulama Council, said for the Palestinians in Gaza, each passing day brought more suffering, with a continuous toll of lives lost since October. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's commitment to a potential ground offensive on Gaza added to the tension, while journalists had become casualties in targeted attacks, he added.

In a heartbreaking turn of events, he said Al Jazeera Arabic's Gaza bureau chief lost his wife, son, daughter, and grandson in an Israeli airstrike on his home. He said the absence of foreign journalists in Gaza amplified the courage of Palestinian journalists, who were risking their lives to report on the situation in a region under Israeli siege.

Ashrafi said the Arab leadership, once poised for a new chapter in Israeli-Palestinian relations and the prospect of a self-governing Palestinian state, had witnessed Israel's disproportionate response to recent events.
