Senate passes resolution urging SC to reconsider its decision about military courts

Invalidation of jurisdiction of army courts likely to facilitate abettors of terrorism, reads resolution; Resolution says decision is legally flawed, shouldn't be implemented; Military courts played a pivotal role in delivering justice: Senators

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Senate on Monday passed a resolution, urging the Supreme Court (SC) to reconsider its decision about military court trials.

The resolution, which was moved by Senator Dilawar Khan in the House, said: "The Senate of Pakistan calls upon the apex court to reconsider its decision, urging alignment with the national security paradigm and sacrifices of the martyrs in order to address the concerns raised regarding the ramifications of the judgment on the security and stability of the nation."

"The invalidation of the jurisdiction of army courts is likely to facilitate vandals and abettors of terrorism and anti-state activities. Military courts have played a pivotal role in delivering justice, particularly concerning acts of terrorism, often instigated by neighbouring adversaries within Pakistan's borders," it added.

"The resolution further said, 'Resonating the concerns and sentiments expressed by various stakeholders in particular and public in general, regarding the recent judgment of the Supreme Court that declared Section 2(D)(1) & 59 (4) of the Army Act unconstitutional; 'Taking exception to overriding an Act of Parliament, which was well within the previous and existing scheme of constitutional and legislative framework and duly enacted under the legislative competence of the Parliament. Prima facie an attempt has been made to rewrite the law by impinging upon the legislative authority of the Parliament.'

Over 100,000 illegal foreigners repatriated from Balochistan via Chaman border: Jan

Caretaker Minister Information asserts no compromise on expulsion of illegal immigrants at all; some 50,000 suspected CNICs blocked

Independent Report
QUETTA: The caretaker Provincial Minister for Information, Jan Achakzai has informed that over 100,000 the illegal and undocumented Afghan nationals have so far been repatriated to their homeland from Balochistan via Chaman border.

He said that in view of the winter weather conditions, it is our endeavour to expedite the process of repatriation further.

The Minister Information was addressing press conference at the Quetta Press Club on Monday.

Jan Achakzai shared the data and details of the process of repatriation of illegal immigrants besides other related matters.

The Minister Information asserted that terrorism is being done from across border, and said that the befitting response would be given to those keeping an evil eye on the country.

He also asked the Afghan government to hand over those involved in the terrorism using their land against Pakistan.

PM directs formulation of inclusive, comprehensive strategy to uplift FBR

ISLAMABAD (APP): Caretaker Prime Minister Anwaar-ul-Haq Kakar on Monday directed the authorities concerned to formulate and present a comprehensive strategy, based on input from all the stakeholders, with a view to improve the performance of the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR).

The prime minister, chairing a meeting to mull over the measures for improving the FBR's performance, said the utilisation of the modern technology was inevitable to improve the taxation system.

The meeting was briefed on the measures to widen the tax net and digitisation of the taxation system.

The participants also deliberated over different proposals aimed at restructuring the FBR.

The prime minister said that the revenue collection was just like a backbone for the national economy.

He told the meeting that various effective measures had been taken recently to curb smuggling, though it required more hard work to achieve the desired results.

Caretaker Finance Minister Dr Shamsad Akhtar, Advisor to PM Ahad Cheema, FBR chairman, federal finance secretary and relevant senior officers attended the meeting.

QUETTA: Caretaker Chief Minister Balochistan Mir Ali Mardan Khan Domki addressing a ceremony on eve of handing over of ambulances to Health Department from WHO

CM Domki lauds efforts of WHO for supporting to Balochistan Health Dept

QUETTA (APP): A delegation led by World Health Organization (WHO) Representative in Pakistan Dr Palitha Mahipala called on Balochistan Caretaker Chief Minister Mir Ali Mardan Khan Domki on Monday.

On this occasion, Dr. Palitha Mahipala handed over the keys to an ambulance to the caretaker chief minister of Balochistan.

Addressing the handover ceremony on this occasion, the CM said that he appreciated the support and cooperation of the World Health Organization for the provision of health facilities in Balochistan.

He said that collaborative initiatives to enable and strengthen the healthcare system, including the provision of mobile health clinics, vaccine vans, ambulances, medicines, medical equipment and logistics support, would significantly improve the health sector, from the coronavirus pandemic to the flood disasters.

He said that the WHO's role has been crucial for the improvement of the health sector.

The CM said that the caretaker provincial government was committed to providing all kinds of support to the World Health Organization (WHO), which was assisting in the health sector, services were remarkable and WHO was an important working partner of the provincial government.

Crackdown underway against illegal immigrants, not Afghan nationals: Bugti

ISLAMABAD (APP): Caretaker Minister for Interior Sarfraz Ahmed Bugti, informed the Senate on Monday that the government was carrying out a crackdown against all illegal immigrants in the country and not Afghan nationals only.

Winding up discussion on a motion to discuss the Federal Government's decision to expel the immigrants, including Afghan refugees from Pakistan in a short time, he rejected the notion that the crackdown had been launched against Afghan nationals.

The operation was underway against illegal immigrants who had been residing in Pakistan without any travel documents, the minister added.

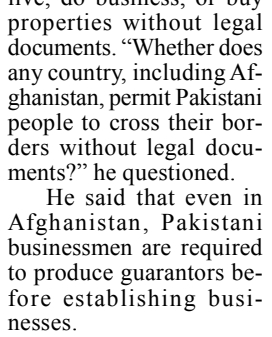

Bugti said no country allowed any foreigner to live, do business, or buy properties without legal documents. "Whether does any country, including Afghanistan, permit Pakistani people to cross their borders without legal documents?" he questioned.

He said that even in Afghanistan, Pakistani businessmen are required to produce guarantors before establishing businesses.

He said foreigners with valid visas and legal documents would be welcomed in Pakistan and even allowed to do business.

OIC inaction

Not much was expected from the joint OIC/Arab League summit held in Riyadh on Saturday to discuss the blood-soaked tragedy underway in Gaza. And sure enough, the presidents, princes and potentates that hold sway over the Muslim world lived up to expectations, with no clear action plan emerging to stop the massacre.

As the Muslim world's rulers discussed the matter in a luxurious conference centre, the hungry, destitute and bloodied people of Gaza — dazed after burying their loved ones and neighbours day after day — waited for the next Israeli missile to strike. In Riyadh, there were calls for a ceasefire and condemnation of Israeli violence, but beyond that little of substance, as the Palestinian president demanded an end to this "genocidal war", while urging the US to use its good offices to ask Tel Aviv to stop the Gaza slaughter.

It is unlikely that those who matter in Washington or Tel Aviv will heed this request. Algeria, on the other hand, wanted Muslim and Arab states to suspend ties with Israel, while Iran recommended a boycott of Israel and the designation of the Israeli military as a "terrorist group".

There were few takers for these proposals. It is indeed tragic that despite the murder of over 11,000 Palestinians in the Israeli onslaught, the high and mighty of the Muslim world — with their standing armies, tens of billions of dollars and vast economic clout — could not even agree to a common framework that would clearly communicate to Israel and its powerful backers that the massacre of Palestinians must stop.

If Israel were to be convinced by strongly worded statements and impressive conferences, the Palestine question would have been solved decades ago.

Meanwhile, the extermination of the Palestinian people continues, as the world looks on, as if tuned in to some grisly reality show — the livestreaming of a virtual genocide. Israel has upped its attacks on Gaza's hospitals, all in the name of getting Hamas.

In the eyes of the Jewish state and its staunch defenders, slaughtered Palestinian babies appear to be a fair price to pay to avenge Israel's wounded pride in the aftermath of Oct 7. Yet even some of those who had rushed to be by Israel's side after the Hamas attack are beginning to have second thoughts; the French president has said Tel Aviv must stop killing "babies and women".

Sadly, those who have the power to stop this butchery are either aiding Israel's bloodthirsty campaign, or making weak entreaties for the massacre to be toned down.

However, hundreds of thousands of common people, with no political power but with great moral clarity in Sana'a, New York, London and other cities, are demanding an end to the massacre. Will the callous global elite listen to their voices?

Climate adaptation

Huma Yusuf

World War III will get us before climate change. This is an increasingly common refrain, an understandable response to tragic and terrifying world events. As the Israel-Gaza war dominates headlines, it's not surprising that developments in the lead-up to the annual UN climate change conference, COP28, have been sidelined. But one disaster does not negate another, and we will equally have to contend with conflict and the consequences of climate change. For most Pakistanis, the latter is arguably more immediately existential.

The World Meteorological Society in May this year reported that the world would by 2027 breach the 1.5 degrees Celsius climate threshold agreed at the 2015 Paris climate summit, meaning that average global temperatures are likely to rise by more than 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels. That's three years away. How old will you be? Your children?

Facing failure in the face of this key target, global climate leaders are seeking success elsewhere. Attention is turning to climate adaptation — the need to adjust social, economic and ecological systems to adapt to the reality of climate change and its impacts. Climate efforts so far have coalesced around mitigation (reduction of GHG emissions), but there is growing recognition that as we seem incapable of giving up our addiction to fossil fuels, we must learn to adapt to the consequences of burning them. According to a recent UN report, developing countries need $387 billion a year to adapt to climate change, an amount that has increased by $47bn since the last count. The UN report found that the adaptation financing need was 10 to 18 times more than current international public finance flows, which have dwindled in recent years. According to former climate minister Sherry Rehman, Pakistan alone needs $348bn by 2030 to build climate resilience. But as of November 2022, the country had only received $86.2 million since 2016 in bilateral grants with a climate adaptation focus. The numbers are stark enough that the president-designate of COP28 last week conceded that adaptation doesn't get adequate finance.

Pakistan has already recognised the need to prioritise adaptation (floods that put over one-third of your land mass under water would do that). The climate change ministry in July published Pakistan's first-ever National Adaptation Plan (NAP). The plan was 11 years too late as per the country's own climate strategy, but timely in the run-up to COP28.

Covering the seven-year period to 2030, NAP aligns with UN's best practice approaches and climate adaptation frameworks. Its recommendations also align with key findings of a recent McKinsey report that advocates for a systemic approach to climate adaptation. That approach highlights the importance of "a climate risk management mindset; technological and behavioural adaptation levers; economic and societal adjustments; and governance, institutional support, and commitment".

McKinsey's economic and societal adjustment bucket calls for "compensating mechanisms for vulnerable communities and institutions" and under its governance category it pushes for community awareness and engagement. Pakistan's NAP echoes these principles with recommendations for evidence-based decision-making, the need to act locally, and a major emphasis on inclusion and equity (particularly for women, youth and marginalised communities), and with clear language promoting social justice and insisting that no one be left behind.

Here's the elephant in the room. These principles are not the reality of our society. Inclusion and equity are an afterthought when it comes to other areas such as access to healthcare, justice, rule of law, education or public finances. Adaptation strategies will indeed work best when developed and implemented locally, but how will that work in a country that shuns and disempowers local governments? And women and marginalised communities are no doubt most at risk from climate impacts, but given how we violate their rights in normal circumstances, why would we behave differently when faced with heat, floods or fire?

Critiques of climate adaptation approaches are still too high level. McKinsey celebrates that 84 per cent of the parties to the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change have adaptation plans, but points out these are not grounded in the physical risks they ameliorate, do not articulate financing needs, and are yet to be executed. Even critiques of NAP focused on the lack of details around financing mechanisms and the scant specifics on implementation. But there is little mention of the disconnect between adaptation planning and societal attitudes more broadly. Without meaningfully changing ourselves and our society, we will not successfully adapt to a climate change-affected world. -- Courtesy Dawn

Afghan refugees

Arif Hasan

The manner in which Afghan refugees are being repatriated from Pakistan is unfortunate. Under the Citizens' Act, anyone born in Pakistan is a Pakistani citizen. If you apply this law, relatively few Afghans will be repatriated. According to international law, only those who are not registered as refugees can be deported, and that too under specified conditions (which are not being followed), one of which emphasises safeguarding their dignity.

Disturbing news is emerging from the Afghan detention centres and from thanas that are involved in "rounding them up". There are cases where minor children have been sent to locations in Afghanistan while their parents have been left behind. There have been cases where women and their babies have forcibly been put on a bus to Afghanistan without a male relative.

Meanwhile, corruption is rampant. I personally know of cases where Rs20,000 per month is paid to a middleman who guarantees that repatriation will not take place. In addition, the staff of state agencies do not allow persons at the detention centre to meet their family or lawyers, and there have also been cases where the deportees, both old and young, have been beaten up by police and Rangers for no obvious reason.

The majority of the deportees have been born in Pakistan, and they have never seen Afghanistan in their lives. Also, they have no families left in Afghanistan. They are especially concerned about their women, who will not be able to work or study in Afghanistan and will be discriminated against in other ways after they have enjoyed a more liberal society in this country. A number of musicians, singers, and artists are equally afraid for their lives and punishment from the Taliban regime.

Karachiites have many complaints against the Afghans, and they seldom differentiate between Afghans and KP's Pakhtuns. They claim that Afghans introduced the culture of guns and drugs in the city and that other groups had to resort to the same tactics to protect themselves. They also claim they have become big shareholders in Karachi's businesses. They finance construction companies, real estate purchases, and even small entrepreneurs in setting up roadside businesses. They claim that much of the finances for all this have come from the Afghan transit trade and from supplying Nato troops in Afghanistan.

With these enormous earnings, the Afghans have purchased textile, electronic goods, used clothes and shoes and a number of other markets in the city. They also charge for arranging protection for roadside Pashto-speaking rehri. All this has made them major players in Karachi's economy. They also work as building site labour and as coolies at Karachi's wholesale markets which is their main occupation.

The strongest support for Afghan repatriation understandably comes from Sindh nationalists. Migration to the province (especially to its urban centres) has changed its demography, and if it continues, the Sindh-speaking population might well become a minority. The migrants have occupied land in the urban areas and are also becoming middlemen to service agricultural production. However, it must be remembered that almost all of these 'crimes' against the original population of Sindh were the result of government policies that were designed with the approval of powerful Sindh politicians and implemented by senior Sindh bureaucrats. Three remarkable books (The Case of Sindh by G.M. Sayed; The Case of Karachi and Sindh Under One Unit both by Prof Aijaz Ahmed Qureshi) tell us the whole story. Unlike the 1947 migrants, the Afghan migrants had no hand in developing these policies.

The Afghan re-patriation has divided the progressives of Sindh into pro- and anti-repatriation groups. This is unfortunate and needs to be reconciled. There can be a case made for Afghan repatriation, but on humanitarian and legal grounds, it needs to be revisited. Persons who have been born and grown up in this country should not be deported. The same applies to women who have been born in Pakistan and who face a bleak future in an anti-women country. Similarly, artists and entertainers should not be sent back for they will not only lose the opportunity of performing but also fear for their lives.

However, more important than anything else is that the repatriation process should respect the human rights of the deportees and with proper documentation. Given the brutal nature of our state and the strong anti-poor bias of our elite policymakers, this is difficult but should be attempted. Also in dealing with the repatriation process it should be remembered that it is more than possible that Pakistan will require the support of the Afghan nation in the not-too-distant future to stabilise itself. -- Courtesy Dawn

CM seeks carbon credits plan to accelerate tree plantation

Independent Report
LAHORE: Punjab Caretaker Chief Minister Mohsin Naqvi has sought a comprehensive carbon credit plan for afforestation and valuable carbon exchange.

During the meeting, attended by provincial ministers Amir Mir, Ibrahim Hasan Murad, secretaries of forests, finance & industries departments and others, a consensus was reached to enlist the expertise of a consultancy firm for the strategic acquisition of carbon credits. The briefing illuminated the diverse sectors, numbering ten in total, from which carbon credits can be obtained. These sectors include waste management, transportation, renewable energy, industry and land use, among others. It was underscored that the acquisition of carbon credits is intricately tied to activities such as the preservation of forests and the proactive management of environmental pollution. An important aspect highlighted in the meeting was the practice of countries with higher carbon emissions channelling investments into afforestation and environmental.

Religious leaders unite in urgent appeal for peace in Gaza

LAHORE (APP): Religious leaders from across the nation, representing diverse faiths and beliefs, on Monday joined forces to make a global appeal for an immediate end to Israel's aggression and brutality in Gaza. Addressing a unified audience at the Palestine Conference here at Cathedral Church, they urged the world powers to immediately play their role in ending the persecution of the oppressed Palestinian people.

Pakistan Ulama Council Chairman, Hafiz Muhammad Tahir Mahmood Ashrafi, and Archbishop Dr. Sebastian Francis Shaw were among the prominent figures who emphasized that the ongoing situation in Gaza was not a matter confined to followers of any specific religion but a violation against humanity itself. Ashrafi who is also the Special Representative to the Prime Minister on Religious Harmony and the Pakistani Diaspora in Middle East and Islamic Countries, stated that Saudi Arabia and the Muslim world were actively playing their role against Israeli aggression, urging the global community to step forward to end Israeli oppression.

Biden, Qatari emir discuss Gaza, agree all hostages must be released

Monitoring Desk
WASHINGTON: U.S. President Joe Biden spoke on Sunday with Qatar's Emir Sheikh Tamim bin Hamad Al Thani about developments in Gaza and "urgent ongoing efforts" to secure the release of hostages being held by the Hamas militant group, the White House said.

Biden "unequivocally" condemned the holding of hostages by Hamas, including many young children, one of whom is a 3-year old American citizen whose parents were killed by the group on October 7th, the White House said in a statement. "The two leaders agreed that all hostages must be released without further delay," the statement said. Hamas fighters surged across the border from Gaza into Israel on Oct. 7, killing about 1,200 people and taking more than 200 hostages, according to Israeli officials. Only four hostages have been released to date. The Israeli bombardment of Gaza has since killed more than 11,000 Palestinians, around 40% of them children, according to counts by health officials in the Hamas-ruled territory.

Reuters last week reported that Qatar, where several political leaders of Hamas are based, has been leading mediation efforts between Hamas and Israeli officials over the hostages.

Biden's national security adviser, Jake Sullivan, told CNN's "State of the Union" earlier on Sunday that "active, intensive negotiations" were underway involving Israel, Qatar, Egypt and the United States on securing the release of more hostages, but it was not clear if all were alive.

"The goal here is to do what is necessary at the negotiating table to ensure that we get the safe return of all of the hostages, including the Americans," Sullivan told CNN, noting that nine Americans were missing, along with one person with permanent resident status in the United States.

Israeli strikes on Gaza hospitals suspend prisoner swap talks

Monitoring Desk
GAZASTRIP: Amid Israeli bombardment, two major hospitals in northern Gaza — Al Shifa and Al Quds — closed to new patients on Sunday, with staff saying that a lack of fuel and medicine meant those already being treated could die.

Hospitals in the north of the besieged Palestinian enclave are blockaded by Israeli forces and barely able to care for those inside, medical staff said.

Intense fighting raged around Al Shifa hospital where doctors said thousands of Palestinians were trapped in dire conditions.

Soon after the strike, Hamas said it is suspending negotiations for exchange of prisoners because of Israel's handling of the Al Shifa Hospital, a Palestinian official told Reuters.

Fears have intensified for patients and people taking refuge in Al-Shifa and other healthcare facilities in Gaza, and medical aid group Doctors Without Borders warned that without a ceasefire or evacuation the hospital "will become a morgue".

Other buildings serving as shelters have also been hit, including a strike on a UN compound in Gaza City that the United Nations Development Programme said caused "a significant number of deaths and injuries."

US and South Korea sharpen deterrence plans over North Korean nuclear threat

Monitoring Desk
SEOUL: The United States and South Korea on Monday updated a bilateral security agreement with the aim of more effectively countering North Korea's evolving nuclear and missile threats.

The move followed high-level military talks in Seoul, where the allies also discussed enhancing three-way defense exercises with Japan and improving information-sharing on North Korean missile launches.

U.S. Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin was in Seoul for annual security talks with South Korean military officials, including Defense Minister Shin Won-sik, which were focused on boosting nuclear deterrence against North Korea. They also talked about how the allies could coordinate over broader geopolitical issues, including Russia's war on Ukraine and China's regional assertiveness, Austin said.

Tensions between the Koreas are at their highest point in years as the pace of both North Korea's weapons tests and South Korea's combined military exercises with the United States have intensified in a cycle of tit-for-tat.

Bangladesh unrest leaves another garment worker dead

Monitoring Desk
DHAKA: Hundreds of Bangladeshi garment workers rallied on Sunday, demanding fair wages after dismissing a pay offer as too small, as the death toll from the violent protests rose to four.

Jalaluddin, 42, a garment worker who was injured in clashes with officers earlier this month in Gazipur, north of the capital Dhaka, died from his injuries. His death takes the number killed in the protests to four, according to police officials. "He died at the Dhaka Medical College Hospital. He was injured during a protest several days ago," said police inspector Bacchu Mia. Jalal's brother-in-law Rezaul Karim told reporters he had been shot in the stomach by a shotgun, and had been brought to Dhaka for treatment.

UK PM Sunak sacks interior minister Suella Braverman over comments on pro-Palestine protests

Monitoring Desk
LONDON: British Prime Minister Rishi Sunak sacked his interior minister Suella Braverman on Monday after her criticism of the police's handling of a pro-Palestinian march divided his party and threatened his authority.

Under fire from opposition lawmakers and members of the governing Conservative Party to eject Braverman, Sunak seemed to have brought forward a long-planned reshuffle to bring in allies and remove ministers he felt were not performing.

Following her dismissal, Braverman said "it has been the greatest privilege of my life to serve as home secretary".

"I will have more to say in due course," she added. Last week, Braverman defied Sunak by publishing an article accusing the police of adopting "double standards" in its treatment of protests — an argument opposition Labour said inflamed tensions at a pro-Palestinian demonstration on Saturday.

Then more than 140 people were arrested after far-right counter protesters skirmished with police, who tried to keep them away from the 300,000 pro-Palestinian marchers.

US conducts airstrikes against Iran-backed groups in Syria, retaliating for attacks on US troops

Monitoring Desk
WASHINGTON: The U.S. military conducted airstrikes on two locations in eastern Syria involving Iranian-backed groups, hitting a training location and a weapons facility, according to the Pentagon and U.S. officials.

It marks the third time in a bit more than two weeks that the U.S. has retaliated against the militants for what has been a growing number of attacks on bases housing U.S. troops in Iraq and Syria.

Argentina's presidential rivals clash in key voter battlegrounds

Monitoring Desk
BUENOS AIRES: As Argentines prepare to elect a new president, the two hopefuls vying for the keys to the Casa Rosada palace are focusing on undecided voters in key battlegrounds, with campaign pushes around capital Buenos Aires and central Cordoba province that could tip the balance in a tight race.

Center-left Peronist economy chief Sergio Massa faces libertarian outsider Javier Milei in the Nov 19 vote, with polls suggesting a likely photo finish. Two widely different visions for South

America's no 2 economy are on offer.

Milei offers potentially painful shock therapy for the embattled country that has run out of foreign currency reserves, has inflation over 100% and is set for a recession. Pragmatist Massa is pledging a unity government and more gradual change to solve the crisis that has worsened on his watch.

"People want to know who is the least bad of the two," said 31-year-old psychologist Fatima Gonzalez from the populous Buenos Aires province around the capital of the same name.

Senate told Govt blacklisted 111 social media-apps offering online interest based loans

ISLAMABAD (APP): Caretaker Interior Minister Sarfraz Bugti on Monday informed the Senate that the government had not only blacklisted 111 social media-apps offering online interest based loans but also the Cyber Wing of Federal Investigation Agency confiscated Rs 1.8 billion amount of interest.

Winding up discussion on a motion moved by Senator Mushtaq Ahmed about mushrooming of the social media-apps offering online interest based loans in the country, he said that FIA had also registered cases against those who were running such mobile apps.

Their cases were pending before courts of law, he added.

He said that soon after the emergence of the issue, the government had started actions against the apps which were not registered with Security Exchange Commission of Pakistan. However, he said FIA's capacity regarding cyber-crimes was very limited, adding there were also some law related issues.

Earlier, Mushtaq Ahmed said many students and educated peoples had been trapped in the clutches of these social media-apps offering online interest based loans.

Initially the apps offered loans to the students and unemployment people on nominal interest but later, they were forced to pay hefty interest.

1 in 3 children exposed to severe water scarcity: UNICEF

ISLAMABAD (APP): The climate-changed world with dwindling water supply and inadequate water services is also changing children, altering their mental and physical health.

One in three children or 739 million worldwide already live in areas exposed to high or very high water scarcity, with climate change threatening to make this worse, according to a new UNICEF report.

Further, the double burden of dwindling water availability and inadequate drinking water and sanitation services is compounding the challenge, putting children at even greater risk.

The report, a supplement to UNICEF's Children's Climate Risk (2021), also outlines the myriad of other ways in which children bear the brunt of the impacts of the climate crisis - including disease, air pollution, and extreme weather events such as floods and droughts. From the moment of conception until they grow into adulthood, the health and development of children's brains, lungs, immune systems and other critical functions are affected by the environment they grow up in. For example, children are more likely to suffer from air pollution than adults. Generally, they breathe faster than adults and their brains, lungs and other organs are still developing.

"The consequences of climate change are devastating for children," said UNICEF Executive Director Catherine Russell. "Their bodies and minds are uniquely vulnerable to polluted air, poor nutrition and extreme heat. Not only is their world-changing - with water sources drying up and terrifying weather events becoming stronger and more frequent - so too is their well-being as climate change affects their mental and physical health. Children are demanding change, but their needs are far too often relegated to the sidelines."

According to the report findings, the greatest share of children are exposed in the Middle East and North Africa and South Asia regions - meaning they live in places with limited water resources and high levels of seasonal and interannual variability, groundwater table decline or drought risk.

Far too many children - 436 million - are facing the double burden of high or very high water scarcity and low or very low drinking water service levels - known as extreme water vulnerability - leaving their lives, health, and well-being at risk. It is one of the key drivers of deaths among children under 5 from preventable diseases.

Rs34 bln recovered from defaulters in Power theft crackdown

ISLAMABAD (INP): In a bid to curb power theft, the Power Division has recovered a total of Rs 34 billion from the individuals caught during the countrywide crackdown, reported on Monday.

According to the details, the government and military leadership of the country in September decided to initiate a countrywide crackdown on power thieves.

As per Power Division reports, a total of 197 government employees - from the relevant institutions - found involved in the electricity theft were suspended, while at least 25,142 individuals were arrested in the countrywide power theft crackdown.

Rs 34 billion were recovered during the crackdown which minimizes the losses of power division by more than Rs 12 billion.

Meanwhile, the annual loss in the national grid for the current year is estimated at Rs 589 billion out of which Rs 199 billion is attributed to different regions such as ex-Federally Administered Tribal Areas (FTA), Balochistan, Tubewells, and Azad Kashmir. However, during the crackdown against electricity theft, Rs 46 billion was recovered from electricity pilfers. The concerned institutions have assured that 'no one' will be spared or escape the scrutiny.

PPP has best program to overcome financial crunch, claims Gilani

MULTAN (APP): Former Prime Minister, Syed Yusuf Raza Gilani, claimed that no political party other than the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) has a better programme to overcome the economic crisis of the country. Addressing a gathering in UC Muhammadpur Ghota in Qasim Bela, he stated that if the PPP voted to power with a two-third majority in the upcoming general election, it would bring great news for a better future of the next generations.

He reminded that his party always served the people of the constituency in the true sense.

Haji Owais Bhupla, Malik Farooq Bhupla,

Malik Zahid Bhupla, Malik Khizr Bhupla, Malik Fayaz Bhupla, Malik Shafiq Bhupla, Malik Zubair and others were present.

The PPP made Pakistan nuclear power, sensitized people of their rights and ensured the priority-based measures for the development and prosperity of the country and the nation, a PPP Senator recalled.

He hoped that the people have the best opportunity to give the PPP a heavy mandate in the elections to bring it into power.

Gilani said that the people of UC Muhammadpur Ghota will make the candidates of PPP successful with a huge mandate in the general elections.
