SC suspends verdict of nullifying civilians' trial in army courts

By 5-1 majority

Verdict allows military trial of civilians held in connection with May 9 riots; Justice Hilali differs with majority decision

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Supreme Court (SC) on Wednesday conditionally suspended its verdict dated October 23, in which it had nullified the trial of civilian accused in the army courts.

The Supreme Court allowed the trial of civilians to continue in military courts, but the final decision regarding the trial would be subject to the judgment of the apex court.

The court said that the trial of 103 civilians accused of May 9 riots would continue in army courts but the final judgments wouldn't be issued till the decision of the top court.

A six-member larger bench of the top court, headed by Justice Sardar Tariq Masood and comprising Justice Amin ud Din Khan, Justice Muhammad Ali Mazhar, Justice Hassan Azhar Rizvi, Justice Musarrat Hilali and Justice Sadaat Irfan Khan heard the intra-court appeals against the verdict in army courts case.

The decision was suspended by a majority of 5-1, as Justice Musarrat Hilali dissented from it.

During the course of proceedings, Justice Sardar Tariq Masood remarked that those who martyred the military men would not be tried now because the law has been repealed. He questioned that under which law the trial of these civilians who killed 23 soldiers yesterday, be done now.

He further said that after the repeal of Section 2 (1) D, where would the trial of terrorists be held.

Salman Akram Raja Advocate said that he would give arguments if he was allowed.

Defence Ministry's lawyer Khawaja Haris argued that the judgment dated 23rd October didn't mention that under which Articles of the Constitutions, the provisions of Army Act were declared unconstitutional.

PM Kakar says Terrorists already lost war; reiterates unyielding "no surrender, no retreat" policy

DERA ISMAIL KHAN (APP): Caretaker Prime Minister Anwaar-ul-Haq Kakar said on Wednesday that terrorists had already lost the war, emphasizing the nation's unwavering resilience against this scourge and preparedness to deliver a fitting response to terrorism.

"I want to tell the perpetrators that you have already lost the war. Only the declaration is yet to be made and the time is yet to be finalised. They are fighting a lost war and we are fighting a war already won by us, Alhamdulillah," he said talking to the media at the Combined Military Hospital after inquiring about the health of the soldiers injured in a terrorist attack that took place on Tuesday.

He said he was amazed to witness the strong conviction of the soldiers who were resolved to fight the terrorists even while being injured.

He said those supporting the war against terrorism would stand victorious in the world as well as the life hereafter but contrarily, the terrorists had not only destroyed their lives but would also rot in hell after their death.

The prime minister told the media that the Ulema stood with the state, peace and the whole society.

"With whom they are fighting? Do they want to frighten us with death? No one will be scared. They should fulfill the desire to fight us for any desired duration," he remarked.

He said the state was pursuing an unyielding policy of no surrender and no retreat.

Federal cabinet approves country's first-ever "National Space Policy"

No possibility of change, extension in ECP's announced polls date: Solangi

ISLAMABAD (APP): Caretaker Federal Minister of Information Technology and Telecommunication (MOITT) Dr. Umar Saif on Wednesday said that the federal cabinet has approved the country's first-ever "National Space Policy."

Speaking at a press conference alongside the Caretaker Federal Minister for Information and Broadcasting Murtaza Solangi and the Caretaker Federal Minister for Health, he explained that the approved policy establishes the framework for utilizing Low Earth Orbit (LEO) Communication Satellites. This authorization allows private companies to offer services to consumers in Pakistan, marking a significant milestone in the country's space program, he added.

The minister highlighted that this development signifies a crucial moment for Pakistan's space program, as it enables enhanced communication capabilities through advanced satellite technology.

The approval of the National Space Policy is expected to facilitate improved telecommunications services, fostering advancements in connectivity and information dissemination across the country.

Wali Kakar inaugurates Job fair at BUTEMS: Governor calls for creating collaboration between academia & industry as per our social requirements

Independent Report

QUETTA: The Governor Balochistan, Malik Abdul Wali Khan Kakar has stressed that we have to create collaboration between the academia and industry according to our social requirements.

He said that it is a fact that government can't provide jobs to millions of the people, therefore, we have to strengthen our private sector.

The Governor was speaking to the media persons on occasion of the inauguration of Job fair at BUTEMS here on Wednesday.

The Governor maintained that the job fair provide male and female students of the Balochistan University of Information Technology, Engineering and Management Sciences access to the national and international companies.

The stalls were set up by the national and international companies besides the banks at the job fair.

The Governor visited all the stalls one by one where he was briefed by the representatives of the respective organizations.

He said that it's not possible for the government to tackle the issue of unemployment alone, rather the government should provide maximum facilities to the people associated with the trade and commerce so that they may play their role in ending unemployment.

Earlier, the Governor inaugurated the job fair. Also present on the occasion were the Vice Chancellor of BUTEMS and other concerned high ups.

OIC expresses concern over Indian Supreme Court's verdict on IIOJK

JEDDAH (INP): The Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) has expressed concern over the recent verdict of Supreme Court of India upholding the illegal unilateral actions taken by the Narendra Modi-led Indian government that repealed the special status of occupied Jammu and Kashmir on 5 August 2019.

According to Kashmir Media Service, the OIC General Secretariat in a statement issued in Jeddah in reference to the decisions and resolutions of the Islamic Summit and the OIC Council of Foreign Ministers related to the Kashmir dispute reiterated its call to reverse all illegal and unilateral measures taken by the Modi regime since 5 August 2019 aimed at changing the internationally-recognized disputed status of the occupied territory.

SC's verdict on military courts surely bad news for pleaders of terrorism, disturbance & political riots: Jan

Caretaker Minister Information describes DI Khan terrorism incident as 9/11 of Pakistan; asserts revenge of every drop of blood would be taken

QUETTA: The caretaker Provincial Minister for Information, Jan Achakzai has termed the Supreme Court's verdict on the trial of civilians in the military courts as historic and said that it is surely a bad news for those indulged in terrorism as well as pleaders of disturbance and political riots in the country.

He said that the apex court backed the state by giving the verdict on crucial matter while ignoring the negative propaganda and pressure groups of a particular political party. He said that the state of Pakistan would be strengthened with the significant verdict of the Supreme Court, which suspended the previous verdict against the trial of civilians in the military courts.

The caretaker Minister Information was addressing a hurriedly called press conference at Quetta Press Club on Wednesday.

Giving his reaction over the SC's verdict on the military courts, the Minister Information said that the apex court sided by the state in the important matters related to its security.

Nawaz Sharif demands accountability of 'conspirators'

LAHORE (INP): Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz supreme and three-time prime minister Nawaz Sharif on Wednesday said he did not believe in revenge but those 'conspiring' against his government must be held accountable.

Addressing the PML-N Parliamentary body meeting, Nawaz Sharif thanked Allah after his acquittal in the Al-Azizia and Avenfield reference.

Nawaz Sharif said cases against him were registered after the end of his government and his removal as prime minister. There was no proof of the allegations leveled against me, Sharif said. The former prime minister regretted, that he was removed as prime minister on 'Iqama' in Panama case in the end.

During Panama hearing words like Sicilian Mafia and Godfather were used against me, Nawaz Sharif said and asked do judges use these words?

The PML-N supreme stressed that vendetta wasn't his goal; however, the individuals responsible for the nation's sufferings should be held answerable.

Bilawal calls for national unity to wipe out terrorism from country

PESHAWAR (APP): Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) Chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari on Wednesday, strongly condemning the terrorist attack on police and security forces in D I Khan, called for national unity to wipe out the menace from the country. Addressing the lawyers' convention, he said that the terrorism and extremism in their forms and manifestations could not be eliminated until all the stakeholders and political entities joined hands in the war against them. He said that the recent wave of terrorism in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa was regrettable as the people of the province, including police, youth, citizens and lawyers, had already made many sacrifices in the war against the menace.

He said many terrorists were languishing in jails before the Taliban government took over in Afghanistan, who were later released. Those who facilitated their settlement and release from the jails should be exposed and punished, he demanded.

Meanwhile Bilawal Bhutto Zardari said a vibrant and reinvigorated democratic process was the sole option to put the country's economy on a path of development and progress.

Electricity theft made a cognizable offence

ISLAMABAD (APP): President Dr Arif Alvi on Wednesday promulgated an ordinance to declare the theft of electricity a cognizable offence.

Through the Criminal Law Amendment Ordinance 2023, the president amended the Section 462 (O) of the Pakistan Penal Code, 1860.

According to a President House statement, the electricity distribution companies were earlier facing difficulties in the registration of FIRs of power theft incidents.

However, under the new ordinance, the incidents of electricity theft will be a cognizable offence.

After the Ordinance, theft of electricity will be a cognizable offence on the complaint of not only by officers of grade 17 or above but also the nominees of CEOs of electricity distribution companies.

The president issued the Ordinance under Article 89-1 of the Constitution

The said ordinance will help curb power theft in the energy sector worth around Rs 590 billion.

Maintainability of ZAB reference

At the outset of hearing of presidential reference seeking revisiting the PPP founder and former prime minister Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto (ZAB) murder case, a senior judge of the Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Mansoor Ali Shah has questioned the PPP counsel over the maintainability of the reference. SC's senior judge Justice Syed Masoor observed that matter pertaining to trial of ZAB had attained finality as a review petition had been dismissed earlier, so how can the apex court re-open the case that has already been concluded. It may be mentioned here that a nine-member bench of the apex court headed by CJP Justice Qazi Faez Isa heard the presidential reference seeking revisiting the ZAB murder case.

The apex court heard the attorney general and PPP counsel Farooq H Naek, and adjourned the hearing till second week of January, 2024. The court also appointed amicus curiae (friends of court) having expertise on criminal and constitutional fields for its assistance in the presidential reference. The proceedings were broadcasted live at the Supreme Court website. The CJP, while dictating the order of the court proceedings, noted that the application of Naek had become infructuous as the SC committee has already decided in that regard.

Justice Syed Mansoor observed that matter pertaining to trial of ZAB had already attained finality as a review petition had also been dismissed; therefore, the apex court had no jurisdiction to hear a second review petition. The judge asked Naek as to what decision the court could give, and asked him to assist the court on the question of maintainability. Meanwhile, the court after the hearing the matter, dictating its order and noted that Attorney General Mansoor Usman read out the presidential reference as well as the order of the court given on April 21, 2011, containing the questions to be addressed. The court noted down in its order that the reference was filed in 2011 and the last hearing was held in 2012.

It noted that in the same order a number of amicus curies who were appointed among them some have passed away while some are alive. Ali Ahmed Kurd advocate, who was also among those amicus curies has consented to assist the court, while Makhdom Ali Khan is also willing to do so as well, the order noted, adding that the court consider to appoint constitutional experts, particularly on the scope of Article 186 whereby the presidential reference was filed, and the question of maintainability of the reference. The order noted that it needed wisdom of criminal experts, so name of Justice (ret'd) Manzoor Ahmed Malik was proposed, and the parties supported it. Accordingly, subject to his assent, he is appointed as amicus curiae and he may submit a concise statement in this regard, the court noted and also appointed Khwaja Haris as amicus curiae. Haris was the Punjab advocate general when the case was earlier heard by the Supreme Court. The court also appointed Salman Sadiq as amicus curiae on criminal side as well as Faisal Siddiqui advocate on constitutional side to assist it. Farooq Naek raised objections on the two lawyers.

The court, however, turned down the objections and held that it was its prerogative to appoint amicus curiae. The court also appointed Raza Rabani as amicus curiae on constitutional side besides appointing also former AG Khalid Javed Khan, Salahuddin Ahmed, Barrister Zahid Ibrahim and Yasir Qurashi as amicus curiae on constitutional side. Barrister Aitzaz Ahsan, however, refused to assist the court as amicus curiae.

A people's poet

Mahir Ali

"We live in a world where they say we communicate more, but the world stayed silent when slave trade was making money/ The world stayed silent when the Nazis started to kill trade unionists, people with disabilities, homosexuals, left-handed people and Jews/ And now in the age of the global village and mass communications the world is staying silent when Palestinians are being annihilated..."

The outstanding British poet, novelist, broadcaster, actor and agitator Benjamin Zephaniah wrote those words several years ago but, like much of his verse, they remain poetically relevant. And alive. Unlike, depressingly, the poet himself, who died last week at the age of 65 just two weeks after being diagnosed with a brain tumour. To paraphrase his favourite Dylan Thomas poem, he went gently into the good night after a lifetime spent raging against the dying of the light.

"When I was young," he once noted, "there were two things I really wanted to see: a free South Africa and a free Palestine." That wish remained only half-fulfilled. In the former instance, his contribution was recognised by none other than Nelson Mandela. In 1982, the first single The Wailers recorded after Bob Marley's death was 'Free South Africa', with Zephaniah on vocals. Mandela heard it on Robben Island and, a decade later, sought out Zephaniah on his first visit to Britain, requesting him to host a 1996 concert in honour of Mandela.

There was no comparable progress on the Palestinian front. Zephaniah first visited the occupied territories in 1990, and the artistic consequence was a travelogue interspersed with poetry, Rasta Time in Palestine. Over the decades, his passion for the cause never wavered. Hardly any obituary has acknowledged that he was a patron of Britain's Palestinian Solidarity Campaign.

Born in Birmingham to parents from Barbados and Jamaica, he had a difficult birth and health issues pursued him into adulthood. Severe dyslexia led him to drop out of school in his early teens, and enter a life of petty crime that in one instance involved almost being beaten to death at a police station. By his late teens, Zephaniah realised that an early death beckoned unless he escaped his milieu, so he went to London and joined a different kind of gang — of poets and artists. He thrived, despite his abbreviated schooling and lack of further education. That was not unrelated to the fact that he had resolved at the age of eight to go vegan, and to earn his living as a poet. His reading woes as a dyslexic did not interfere with his determination to express himself.

He did so in ways that appealed to those who disdained poetry mainly attributed to dead white males. "Most people ignore most poetry because most people ignores most people," as the late poet Adrian Mitchell put it. Zephaniah did not follow that trajectory. He spoke directly to his burgeoning audiences, with little patience for abstractions, allusions or complicated imagery. Whatever he wanted to say, he said it straight, taking no prisoners.

Early adulthood in Thatcherite Britain meant there was no dearth of domestic topics, but he never resiled from keeping a sharp eye on global affairs. He lapped up the adoration of the literary establishment and was willing to assist the British Council in disseminating the gospel of British multiculturalism, but drew the line at kowtowing to the political establishment. Being offered induction into the Order of the British Empire in 2003 was a recipe for indignation.

As he wrote in The Guardian, "I woke up on the morning of November 13 wondering how the government could be overthrown and what could replace it", when he saw a letter from the prime minister's office. He went on: "Me? I thought, OBE me? [—], I thought I get angry when I hear that word 'empire'; it reminds me of thousands of years of brutality, it reminds me of how my foremothers were raped and my forefathers brutalised... Benjamin Zephaniah OBE — no way Mr Blair, no way Mrs Queen. I am profoundly anti-empire."

Unlike the Palestinian poet Refaat Alareer — whom Abbas Nasir eloquently eulogised in his weekend column — Benjamin Obadiah Iqbal Zephaniah was not assassinated by an empire or its agents. He leaves behind a treasure trove of books and music or spoken word albums that will be cherished for generations to come. But his living voice — with its endearing lisp and Caribbean-flavoured Brummie tones — and his limitless compassion for the oppressed all across the world will be sorely missed.

Alongside a bunch of talented contemporaries and predecessors, he liberated poetry from the page and brought it to the people. "I think poetry should be alive," he once said, "you should be able to dance to it" — echoing Emma Goldman's century-old opinion: "It's not my revolution if I can't dance to it." — Courtesy Dawn

Impotence of law

Adeel Wahid

Arrests; rearrests; denial of bails; surfacing of new FIRs once bail is granted; trials behind closed doors with the die already cast. None of this is new, or even exclusive to Pakistan.

Formally, the judicial system remains intact: the robbed honourable judges still show up in court. Lawyers still get to make a few noises, smug in their delusion that their word may carry the day.

Nonetheless, there has been an overwhelming attrition of faith in the courts. The bulk of the blame has been put on the judiciary, that the judges, with the prefix 'honourable', were supposed to be the custodians of the people's rights. That they were to intervene, ensure protection, and stand between the wrath of the state and the people.

Such a huge ask from the judiciary was never realistic, and not even fair. First, the past has been one where precedents of capitulation exist in huge numbers, making it the norm, rather than an aberration. Second, judges, just like ourselves, are mere mortals, driven by ambitions, desires and fears. Only one of these things needs to be capitalised on. Third, and importantly, judges come from within the society they live in, and are not divorced from the ideas and ideals percolating in it.

And it is not only about the judges. In fact, the law — its promulgation, interpretation and enforcement — remains contingent on the beliefs, ideas and narratives that have traction in society at large. One way to think about the law is that it remains strongly tethered to the mainstream notions of the populace.

Put differently, the law in a particular society can bear just as much burden or strain as the popular, prevalent ideas in that society allow it to bear. Especially so, in the context where expectations from the law and those who dabble in it — such as legislators, judges and the executive — is to serve as a protective mechanism both from the state itself, and all those, including private segments, who wield disproportionate power.

Take the example of domestic violence — an example from our ordinary lives, and not from politics. Laws may be in the books, police in the field (when not lined up to provide protocol to office holders), and the honourables in the courts. Yet, because of the idea of privacy of a household, that whatever happens in a home belongs in the private domain, the forceful subjugation of women has continued unabated. Despite the law's existence and despite the existence of the machinery of domestic violence are rampant.

Similarly, the Constitution says glorious things about fundamental freedoms. You and I, by virtue of being persons and citizens, are free to associate; free to assemble; free to think and say as we please. But then, not really. Free speech is a value we have failed to engender in our society. Muzzling voices at home, in schools and in universities, produces very few mavericks, and many, far too many, conformists.

And when those who can come after political parties — even the ones they manufactured — and put political actors behind bars, we, the stunted of society, passively accept it. We know no other way. For our entire lives we have seen that those with relative power are going to abuse it unchallenged. This happens at all levels — in our villages, in the cities, in the panchayats, and in corporate boardrooms. Without the right ideals, it is hard to prop up the law.

Therefore, it is not sufficient to accuse and blame the law, that it has not been promulgated right, that only if the text said something else. And it is not enough to blame the robbed, the honourables, the mere flesh and bones, with pretensions of being saviours. In fact, we have to look deeper into our everyday practices, into the things we are taught at school and in our homes, in our everyday conversations and our thoughts. Have we, in our everyday lives, allowed people such as our spouses, our colleagues, our friends and our fellow citizens, to flourish? Have we given people respect irrespective of their family background, caste, and class? Have we produced an environment where our children can experiment with non-conventional thoughts, and, at least, harbour and express them, despite our convictions of them being wrong?

Why then put the burden on the law, an artificial construct, when our lived experiences are a continuous testament and reflection of exactly the things that are then projected broadly in society? Yes, the law's impotence has to do with the deficiencies in our governance and judicial structures. But it has more to do with the absence of ideals in our society. -- Courtesy Dawn

Pakistan needs significant transformation in insurance industry: Dr. Shamshad

ISLAMABAD (APP): Federal Minister for Finance, Revenue, and Economic Affairs, Dr Shamshad Akhtar said Pakistan needs significant transformation in the insurance industry to address its fundamental challenges while catching up with global trends to maximize the value proposition of this industry.

While addressing a two-day International Insure Impact Conference 2023, organized by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP), she asked the insurance industry to recognize that the risks are growing, both globally and nationally, demanding adequate coverage for people and businesses, said a press release issued here by SECP.

The Minister also gave a keynote address at the session, where a large number of industry experts, professionals, and officials from the insurance and financial sectors were present.

Dr Shamshad said that Pakistan needs to track and embrace emerging trends in the insurance sector adding that the global insurance industry is undergoing technological advancements, evolving customers' expectations, and a pressing need for sustainable practices.

She advised concentrating on lifting the low penetration ratio of the insurance industry. She said that SECP's 5-year strategic plan will set the tone for future policy, legal, and regulatory landscapes. Incorporating the recommendation of the insurance industry reform committee would be a step in the right direction.

She suggested focusing on mainstreaming global best practices, reducing the cost of doing business, digitizing the operations, and making effective use of technology generally.

SECP Chairman Akif Saeed, in his welcome address, informed the participants about SECP's determination to work closely with industry stakeholders to align a strategic vision, propel economic growth, and cater to rising community aspirations.

Nations reach deal at COP28 to transition away from fossil fuels

DUBAI: Representatives from nearly 200 countries agreed at the COP28 climate summit on Wednesday to begin reducing global consumption of fossil fuels to avert the worst of climate change, a first-of-its-kind deal signaling the eventual end of the oil age.

The deal struck in Dubai after two weeks of hard-fought negotiations was meant to send a powerful signal to investors and policy-makers that the world is united in its desire to break with fossil fuels, something scientists say is the last best hope to stave off climate catastrophe.

COP28 President Sultan Al Jaber called the deal "historic" but added that its true success would be in its implementation. "We are what we do, not what we say," he told the crowded plenary at the summit. "We must take the steps necessary to turn this agreement into tangible actions." Several countries cheered the deal for accomplishing something elusive in decades of climate talks. "It is the first time that the world unites around such a clear text on the need to transition away from fossil fu-

Biden backs Ukraine, warns against allowing Putin to win

WASHINGTON: President Joe Biden told President Volodymyr Zelensky on Tuesday that the United States will not abandon Ukraine in its desperate fight against Russia, even as Republicans signaled opposition to extending US war funding. Standing alongside the Ukrainian leader at a White House press conference, Biden vowed: "I will not walk away from Ukraine and neither will the American people."

And he said that allowing a Ukrainian defeat would mean Russian President Vladimir Putin "and would-be aggressors everywhere will be emboldened."

Zelensky, who spent the morning talking to Republicans and Democrats in Congress, signaled cautious optimism that the stalled US aid flow will restart. "I got the signals. They were more than positive. But we know that we have to separate words and particular results. Therefore we will count on particular results," Zelensky said.

But the united front at the White House contrasted with growing division up on Capitol Hill, where leading Republicans are insisting that renewing Ukraine aid will depend on Democrats.
