PM asks terrorists to make 'unconditional surrender; rules out any negotiations

Says no person would be allowed to take the law into his hands, only the State had the legitimate right to use armed power through its security forces

ISLAMABAD (APP): Caretaker Prime Minister Anwaar-ul-Haq Kakar on Monday warned terrorist groups in the country to make an "unconditional surrender", saying the State would not negotiate with them.

"The State will not show any leniency towards the terrorists who committed violence and killed innocent citizens," he said in an interaction with the families of martyrs here at the Interior Ministry, where he earlier launched the country's new visa policy.

PM Kakar categorically said that no person would be allowed to take the law into his hands, adding that only the State had the legitimate right to use armed power through its security forces.

"No one should have any doubt about the stance of the State against terrorists," he said. "All organs of the State have the clarity to remain persistent against militancy."

He said any damage incurred in the past by giving a lenient space to the militants would be mitigated.

The prime minister said if someone wanted to denounce terrorism must seek forgiveness from the families of the martyrs, who had paid the ultimate price.

"We cannot compensate those who lost their loved ones, but can make a gesture to acknowledge and honour their invaluable sacrifices," he added. PM Kakar said the reward for the martyrs' souls rested with Allah Almighty, however, it was the responsibility of the society to honour them with a distinguished status.

"I pay tribute to all the martyrs - an unending list of heroes from all segments of the society, including police, politicians, journalists, soldiers, and even children," he said.

Earlier, at the launch of the new visa policy, the prime minister congratulated the Ministry of Interior on the achievement of a "good milestone". He said the country needed to further rationalize its visa policy with the target of attracting investment. "Unless we open up to the world, we cannot attract investment and develop connectivity," he said, adding that a country's visa policy was the cornerstone of its economic roadmap.

The minister was briefed that the new visa policy includes the introduction of investor visas and the revision of the existing business visa category.

The investor visa has been introduced in line with the Special Investment Facilitation Council (SIFC) initiative. The hassle-free process allows visa approval within 24 hours with a short-term (1-3 years) and long-term entry visa (5 years).

The process requires minimal documentation with the option of converting the entry business and investor visa into a long-term investor visa.

The prime minister was informed that the business visa category was revised with the introduction of SIFC Business Entry and its extension.

'Travesty of justice': Pakistan rejects Indian SC's verdict on Kashmir

India has no right to make unilateral decisions on the status of this disputed territory against the will of the Kashmiri people and Pakistan: FM Jilani

ISLAMABAD (APP): Pakistan on Monday categorically rejected the judgement, announced by the Supreme Court of India on the status of Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IIOJK), terming it "another manifestation of the blatant judiciary under India's ruling dispensation."

Foreign Minister Jilani Abbas Jilani, during a press conference at the Ministry of Jammu and Kashmir, termed Jammu and Kashmir an 'internationally-recognized dispute, which remained on the agenda of the UN Security Council for over seven decades.'

Jilani said the final disposition of Jammu and Kashmir was to be made in accordance with relevant United Nations Security Council Resolutions and as per the aspirations of Kashmiri people.

"India has no right to make unilateral decisions on the status of this disputed territory against the will of the Kashmiri people and Pakistan," he said.

The foreign minister said Pakistan did not acknowledge the supremacy of the Indian Constitution over Jammu and Kashmir.

"Any process, subversive to the Indian Constitution, carries no legal significance," he said.

He said India could not abdicate its international obligations on the pretext of domestic legislations and judicial verdicts.

"India's plans to annex IIOJK are bound to fail," he added. "The judicial endorsement of India's unilateral and illegal actions of 5 August 2019 is a travesty of justice, based on distorted historical and legal arguments," he said.

FM Jilani said the Indian Supreme Court's verdict failed to recognize the internationally-recognized disputed nature of the Jammu and Kashmir.

"It further fails to cater to the aspirations of the Kashmiri people, who have already rejected India's illegal and unilateral actions of 5 August 2019," he added.

Mainstreaming of deprived segments, fast decision-making vital for Pakistan's progress: President

ISLAMABAD (APP): President Dr Arif Alvi on Monday said the mainstreaming of the deprived segments including women and differently-abled women, leveraging artificial intelligence and fast decision-making were inevitable for the progress and prosperity of the country.

He urged the educational institutes to produce leaders as the country faced an acute shortage of leadership which should be honest to the people and the nation besides being capable of addressing the prevailing issues.

The president reiterated his condemnation of the ongoing killings in Gaza and rejected the Indian Supreme Court's decision to uphold the revocation of Article 370 in Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir.

He questioned the conscience of the developed world over the barbarism in Gaza and said the world was in dire need of an order anchored on morality which legacy of the Muslims.

He said, unfortunately, the vested interests had overpowered the humanitarianism in world affairs.

President Alvi, who earlier awarded certificates to the new graduates and medals to the council members, said that around 28 million Pakistani children were out of school and needed support to brighten their future.

He said the country faced a shortage of professional graduates so the approach of encouraging them to go abroad and send remittances was unjustified.

The president said after joining the practical life, they should strive to provide a secure working environment to the women in their businesses as well as their respective fields besides creating opportunities for the differently-abled women.

Bilawal Bhutto says Wall of Martyrs - a good initiative to remember sacrifices of martyred heroes

ISLAMABAD (APP): Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) Chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari on Monday visited 'Wall of Martyrs' at the Interior Ministry and commended the step to remember the sacrifices of the martyred heroes.

Talking to the media after hoisting the picture of Shaheed Mohtarma Benazir Bhutto at 'The Wall of Martyrs', Bilawal said he was grateful to Caretaker Interior Minister Sarfraz Bugti for the initiative.

"The 'Wall of Martyrs' is an initiative we appreciate, as it immortalises the sacrifices of the martyrs," he added.

The martyrs of the country, he said, included politicians, policemen, lawyers, judges, and the army soldiers, who had been a target of terrorism and they all rendered great sacrifices.

As a result of their struggle, peace was achieved and terrorism was eradicated from the country, he added. Unfortunately, a decision was later taken which undermined the efforts of the martyrs.

Bilawal Bhutto said when the transition of power was taken place in Afghanistan, a decision that was taken without the input of the Parliament or the people, allowed for engagement with the very terrorists who had been defeated by the police, army and public. He said the terrorists imprisoned in Pakistan were released and side by side those responsible for attacking Pakistan from Afghanistan were also released there.

They then were invited by Imran Khan to settle in huge numbers in the tribal areas, the very same regions from where they had been chased out, he added. Imran Khan, while in opposition during the unity government, publicly accepted that terrorists were resettled in Pakistan which was the cause behind the country having to suffer through the same crisis again, Bilawal said.

Future plans

Nawaz Sharif is planning ahead. Perhaps confident of his chances in the next election, he seems keen to want to avoid the run-ins he has had with security establishments during past stints in power.

In general, it seems like he wants to take a strong stance on civilian supremacy and wants some guarantees that he will be able to run the country unhindered this time around. It is a carefully calculated power move.

The state seems to have all but run out of options, and Mr Sharif is leveraging the opportunity to push back on the issues that are most important to him. For example, he has repeatedly tested the waters by reiterating his demand for the accountability of those who 'conspired', in his view, to push him out of power in 2017.

Demanding such accountability just months ago could have rapidly backfired on the PML-N. Younger brother Shehbaz Sharif would always be quick to soothe nerves each time Mr Sharif publicly put forth this demand.

Not so more recently, while Mr Sharif has gradually grown more insistent on this 'accountability drive'. "Who ruined the country? Who brought the country to this point today? Why are the poor starving today? [...] All these things are eating up the country," Mr Sharif noted while addressing party leaders on Friday.

On Saturday, with Shehbaz Sharif by his side, he went further, "Those who have brought the country to this point, they should also be held accountable. They should be asked how you meted out such treatment [to] this country."

In the same gathering, the former prime minister also defended his position on the Kargil issue, while stressing the need to improve ties with neighbouring countries, especially India.

He also recalled the visits of Atal Bihari Vajpayee in 1999 and Narendra Modi in 2015, rhetorically asking if anyone had come to Pakistan before them. It was clear that the three-oust prime minister was keen to assert himself from the outset this time around.

It is encouraging to see that Nawaz Sharif remains committed to a strong civilian government and an independent foreign policy, and he is fully entitled, as a former chief executive, to pursue accountability and push the overreaching arms of the state back into their respective domains.

However, Mr Sharif should perhaps not consider himself the 'ideal' candidate just yet. It is clear that he still has a weak understanding of the Pakistani economy, which seems heavily influenced by the thoroughly discredited ideas of Ishaq Dar.

Therefore, while his ideas about civilian supremacy and assertive policymaking are commendable, until both he and his party figure out what good fiscal management entails, there is not much they can offer inflation-weary Pakistanis desperate for growth and meaningful change.

Taxing agri incomes

Aijaz A. Nizamani

Pakistan's inability to generate enough revenue means it invariably finds itself at the mercy of international lenders. Currently, we are signatories to an IMF deal that binds the government to increase overall revenue generation and improve the tax-to-GDP ratio which, in our case, is among the lowest in the world. This cannot be possible unless the state starts taxing all sectors of the economy equitably. This includes the rural sector, where great potential lies in efficiently taxing agricultural output.

Agriculture accounts for about one-fifth of Pakistan's $350 billion economy. If the sector was contributing its fair share, a fifth of the current year's tax collection target of Rs9,415bn would be coming from farm output. However, actual collection is a tiny fraction of the ideal amount. There is a need to correct the common misconception that agriculture is exempt from income tax. It is not. Income from agriculture is taxed like any other income as per the Income Tax Ordinance, 2001. The only difference is that this tax is collected by provincial authorities and not the Federal Board of Revenue. Farmers and other interest groups advance various arguments against agriculture income taxes. They generally feel that since they are already heavily taxed indirectly, they should not be made to pay income taxes as well. They also complain of controlled commodity prices, which is an implicit tax on their incomes. However, while such complaints are not unreasonable, the doubling of wheat prices in 2022 has rendered price controls ineffective. In any case, other commodities like cotton and rice are free for export; in fact, the latter is encouraged for export under government policy. Sugar, among the major crops, is the only exception. It remains subject to strict government controls and usually faces export restrictions. To offset this, sugar import is heavily taxed in order to benefit local industry and large farmers.

Many tax experts feel agricultural taxes are unenforceable due to a lack of documentation of the economy and its vast geographic spread. Perhaps this is the reason why our colonial overlords levelled presumptive taxes on agricultural revenue and based it on land rental value instead of actual production or productivity potential.

However, assuming there is sufficient commitment at the policy level, taxing agriculture should no longer be an issue in the age of satellite imagery and machine-learning technologies. In fact, farmers should advocate for such an approach if they want agriculture in Pakistan to formally be considered part of the larger economy and documented as a part of national supply chains.

It is preposterous that agricultural revenue collection is still done manually by revenue staff as it was 100 years ago. In the prevailing system, if someone does not pay or is overcharged, there is no way of monitoring or to redress the injustice. Therefore, the time has come for the entire system to be modernised. In this regard, the lead has to come from the IMF, international lenders and bilateral donors, as our domestic system seems too subservient to vested interests which are unlikely to allow tech-enabled transparency in the farm and rural economies.

International lenders and development partners should provide grants to digitalise the farmlands and make land records easily searchable. As a second step, all imagery of farmlands should be made available year-round to individual farmers (irrespective of their landholding size) as well as to the government. The imagery service should enable farmers to assess the condition of their crop on a periodic basis (ideally, daily), and help the government monitor and aggregate crop data. This will greatly help the government in its tax collection, as not much can be hidden in this digital age. Lastly, machine-learning can help the government and farmers interpret this satellite imagery in depth and even assess the yield potential of various crops at the time of harvesting if the systems used to analyse the imagery are properly trained in this task.

Given Pakistan's resource constraints, agricultural taxation as well as fiscal transfers need to be technology-based. At the farmer level, those who refuse to pay taxes must be penalised, for example by not being able to sell or gift their property to fellow family members without first clearing their dues with the government. This is only possible when farm and land records are diligently digitalised. Technology will also help net the large farmers, who account for merely four per cent of all cultivators but own nearly 40pc of all farmland. It will help recover hundreds of billions of rupees in agricultural income tax while also enabling modernisation of farming practices. — Courtesy Dawn

Conflict and climate

Huma Yusuf

Promises are meant to be broken. That's why we should respond to the outcome of COP28 with a healthy dose of scepticism. The headlines will focus on the language agreed regarding the fate of fossil fuels: 'abate', 'phase down', 'phase out'. Whatever the agreement, it is unlikely to be fettered with concrete targets or firm deadlines and will rely on fantasies of how quickly we can scale carbon capture technologies. In all scenarios, you can expect the ongoing, unapologetic use of fossil fuels.

But let's not fully dismiss COP28 yet. In other areas, the summit has been more productive. Foremost among these is the new Declaration on Climate, Relief, Recovery and Peace, which calls for "bolder collective action to build climate resilience ... in highly vulnerable countries and communities, particularly those threatened or affected by fragility or conflict".

Seven out of 10 of the most climate-vulnerable countries are also ranked as fragile states. COP28's focus on intersections between climate and security is thus a welcome addition. The declaration enshrines a two-fold recognition: one, that climate change exacerbates security challenges; two, that state fragility and conflict impede climate adaptation and mitigation efforts. This is a vicious circle, leaving the most vulnerable further exposed to both violence and climate risk. These topics have relevance to Pakistan. According to the Pakistan Institute for Conflict and Security Studies, our country witnessed a 34 per cent increase in militant attacks in November as compared to the previous month, bringing the number of attacks this year until Nov 30 to 599. Security concerns are also cited as the reason why Pakistan is expelling undocumented Afghans in a controversial move. Though under-researched, there can be no doubt that cycles of drought and flooding in Pakistan and Afghanistan are exacerbating these trends.

The links between climate change and security challenges are increasingly better understood. Until now, the focus has primarily been on resource competition, the idea that food and water scarcity drives competition between different groups (for example, Kenya's herders, farmers and conservancy owners) leading to conflict. But other factors are at play too.

In an article titled How Climate Change Helps Violent Non-State Actors, Noah Gordon underscores how climate change undermines state legitimacy by reducing states' capacity for service delivery and creating more space for non-state actors. Gordon discusses how the spread of inhospitable environments, particularly in agricultural economies, will lead to farmers being desperate and more susceptible to militant recruitment. He also points out how climate migration will increase the demand for illicit activities such as people smuggling, which will provide militant groups with a new funding stream. Most importantly, climate injustice post-disasters will further weaken state legitimacy and spread anger that can be channelled through non-state actors' narratives. There is also growing awareness that climate disasters distract security forces from their prime aims as they are increasingly pulled into rescue and reconstruction efforts. This year, from Spain to the US and East Africa, militaries were involved in responses to wildfires and floods, tapping resources and blocking capacity in unpredictable ways. In this context, Nato Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg said at COP28 that climate change would be at the top of Nato's agenda and that member states would be more cautious about considering issues such as food and energy security while supporting the just transition.

Including a climate lens to security policymaking is arguably more easily achievable than ensuring that insecure areas receive adequate access to climate finance and adaptation and mitigation initiatives. A UNEP report released ahead of COP28 found that there is an adaptation finance gap in low-income countries of between $215 billion and $387bn per year, at least 50pc larger than thought. The issue is worse in fragile and conflict-affected areas, due to concerns about funding flows and project viability in these areas.

Given that Pakistan is eyeing Loss and Damage Fund support to build climate resilience, including in many parts of the country that would be categorised as fragile or conflict-hit, we should pay close attention to the plans for better partnering with local governments and community networks, such as schools and NGOs, to deliver climate finance in difficult contexts, groups that are sadly disempowered in our political set-up. Ultimately, vulnerable countries themselves will also have to play a role in tackling the vicious cycle of climate and security by improving democratic norms and prioritising climate-related concerns. — Courtesy Dawn

France, Germany, Italy back EU sanctions to target Hamas

Monitoring Desk
BRUSSELS: France, Germany and Italy called for the European Union to set up a special sanctions scheme to target Hamas as EU foreign ministers met on Monday to consider possible next steps in response to the Middle East crisis.

Among the possible measures up for discussion at the meeting are a crackdown on Hamas' finances and travel bans for Israeli settlers responsible for violence in the West Bank.

In a letter to EU foreign policy chief Josep Borrell, the foreign ministers of the bloc's three biggest countries said it was important the EU take "all necessary measures against the terrorist group Hamas and its supporters."

"This implies a stronger European commitment both to combating Hamas' infrastructure and financial support, and to isolating and delegitimising Hamas internationally, which in no way represents the Palestinians or their legitimate aspirations," said the letter, seen by Reuters. Hamas is already listed by the European Union as a terrorist organisation, meaning any funds or assets that it has in the EU should be frozen.

It was not immediately clear from the brief letter the details of how sanctions would be broadened or

Ukraine allies provide ships to ward off Russia in the Black Sea

Monitoring Desk
PARIS: The U.K. and Norway will lead a coalition aimed at helping Ukraine secure its maritime export routes against Russian interference, the U.K.'s Ministry of Defence said on Dec. 11.

The long-term goal is to help Ukraine transform its navy to become more compatible with Western allies, and to bolster security in the Black Sea, the ministry said. The U.K. is transferring two minehunter ships to Ukraine as a first step.

"The rebuilding of the Ukrainian Navy has begun," U.K. Secretary for Defence Grant Shapps said in a post on X. "The U.K. will bring together our allies in a new coalition to give Ukraine the power to rule the waves."

The UN says commodity shipments in the Black Sea continue to face "significant risks" from air strikes and sea mines, and several cargo and grain ships reportedly hit mines in the area in recent months.

China's leaders meet to discuss growth targets for 2024, say sources

Monitoring Desk
BEIJING: China's leaders started a closed-door meeting on Monday to discuss economic targets and map out stimulus plans for 2024, four sources familiar with the matter said.

The annual Central Economic Work Conference, during which President Xi Jinping and other top officials chart the course for the world's second-largest economy next year, is likely to end on Tuesday, the sources said.

Investors are closely watching for clues on next year's policy and reform agenda as China's economy has struggled to mount a strong post-pandemic recovery amid the deepening housing crisis, local government debt concerns, slowing global growth and geopolitical tensions. The Politburo, a top decision-making body of the ruling Communist Party, said on Friday that fiscal policy would be moderately strengthened.

Israeli tanks blast their way into Khan Yunis

Monitoring Desk
GAZA: Israeli tanks blasted their way into the heart of Khan Yunis in the southern Gaza Strip — the refuge for hundreds of thousands of civilians who fled other parts of the enclave on Tel Aviv's orders — as Hamas said Israeli forces were mounting "very violent raids".

At the opposite end of the Gaza Strip, residents also described some of the most intense fighting of the war so far.

Intense fighting was reported in Jabalia and Gaza City's Shejaiya district, while the Israeli army said on Sunday that it had struck over 250 targets in the previous 24 hours.

The fighting has claimed at least 17,700 lives in Gaza since Oct 7.

Residents of Khan Yunis said tanks had reached the main north-south road through the middle of Khan Yunis after intense combat through the night that had slowed the Israeli advance from the east. Warplanes were pounding the area west of the assault. The air rumbled with the constant thud of explosions and thick columns of white smoke rose over the city.

Canada's surging cost of living fuels reverse immigration

Monitoring Desk
TORONTO: The dream of making it big in Canada is turning into a battle for survival for many immigrants due to the high cost of living and rental shortages, as rising emigration numbers hint at newcomers being forced to turn their back on a country that they chose to make their adopted home.

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has made immigration his main weapon to blunt Canada's big challenge of an aging and slowing population, and it has also helped fuel economic growth. That drove Canada's population up at its fastest clip in more than six decades this year, Statistics Canada said.

But now a reversal of that trend is gradually taking hold.

In the first six months of 2023 some 42,000 individuals departed Canada, adding to 93,818 people who left in 2022 and 85,927 exits in 2021, official data show.

The rate of immigrants leaving Canada hit a two-decade high in 2019, according to a recent report from the Institute for Canadian Citizenship (ICC), an immigration advocacy group.

Sarfraz Bugti says: Fight against terrorism still persists due to lack of continuity of policies

Independent Report
ISLAMABAD: Caretaker Federal Interior Minister Sarfraz Bugti on Monday, reiterating the government's resolve to rid the country of the scourge of terrorism, said that Pakistan had won the battle against the menace but due to lack of continuity of policies, it was again in the state of war.

It was not a war of the Pakistan Army and the civil armed forces but that of the State, the minister said while addressing the swearing-in ceremony of the 39th batch of police constables at the Police Lines Islamabad.

The Chief Commissioner Islamabad, Inspector

General of Police Islamabad, diplomats, and former police officers attended the ceremony. The minister said that at present the government was facing two types of challenges - terrorism on the basis of religion and terrorism on the basis of nationalism although the two things had nothing to do with the menace.

He said "proxies" were out to weaken the country, but to defeat them Pakistan's armed forces and civil armed forces had set a new example by standing on the frontline with great spirit of sacrifice.

The minister said that Pakistan being the citadel of Islam was the prime target of enemies. "Islam unites the whole nation, but the war was imposed on us to damage this unity. However, our all security forces fought the menace bravely."

He said that the memory of the martyrs who sacrificed their lives in the war against terrorism would always remain alive in the hearts of every Pakistani.

The minister made it clear that only the State had the authority to use force, and those treading the path of violence would be taken to task.

He said that a CTD inspector was martyred in a terrorist incident in Balochistan yesterday and another one embraced martyrdom a few days ago, but unfortunately cases were also being instituted against the Counter-Terrorism Department. He regretted that some people sitting in the assemblies and media-persons were becoming the voice of anti-national elements under an organized conspiracy, who were being monitored closely.

"No force can stop us from succeeding in the war against terrorism," the minister said, adding that when the institutions became apolitical, they became stronger.

Mushaal criticizes Indian SC for behaving like a 'kangaroo court'

ISLAMABAD (APP): Special Assistant to Prime Minister for Human Rights and Women Empowerment, Mushaal Hussein Mullick Monday strongly criticized the Indian Supreme Court, for shamelessly behaving like a 'kangaroo court' and endorsing Modi's unlawful decision on August 5, 2019.

"India should avoid pushing peaceful Kashmiri youth to resort to alternative forms of resistance", she said while addressing an event commemorating International Human Rights Day organized by Islamabad Chamber of Commerce and Industry (ICCI).

Zafar Bakhtawari, Secretary-General of UBC and former President of ICCI, along with Habib Malik Orakzai, President of the International Human Rights Commission and Vice President of Red Crescent Pakistan were also present at the event.

sociation, and Asma Malik, a prominent social activist also attended the event, said a news release.

Mushaal appreciated the support of the Business Community of Pakistan for the people of Jammu and Kashmir and acknowledged their consistent presence at the forefront. She commended the Islamabad Chamber of Commerce and Industry for organizing the event aimed at raising awareness about human rights.

She highlighted that India has established a grim record of the most severe human rights violations in the Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IIOJK). Mushaal lamented the lack of visual evidence of these violations, attributing it to India's stringent information and communication blockade.

To shed light on the harsh realities faced by the people of IIOJK, she recounted leading a delegation of the All-Party Parliamentary Group (APPG) to meet refugees from IIOJK in Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK), providing a platform for the victims to share firsthand accounts of the brutality inflicted by India on the people of IIOJK.

She said that under the guise of revoking Article 370 and 35A, India is actively transforming the Muslim-majority region of Jammu and Kashmir into a Hindu-majority colony.

She pointed out that through the persecution of Muslims in Jammu and Kashmir and across India, Modi, along with his associates from the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS), harbours ambitions of establishing Akhand Bharat. Emphasizing the need for global vigilance, especially during Indian elections, she cautioned against potential false flag operations by India. Mushaal affirmed that the struggle for the people of Jammu and Kashmir persists. She highlighted the resilience of Kashmiris, who are courageously facing off against a force of one million Indian troops, underscoring their steadfast commitment to achieving freedom from India.

She said that the indomitable spirit of the brave Kashmiris cannot be shaken by brutal, coercive, or unlawful tactics and decisions.
