ISLAMABAD (APP): Prime Minister Muhammad Shehbaz Sharif on Friday said the government will not allow any political or bureaucratic interference in its move to curb smuggling, corruption, power theft and tax evasion in the country.

told that the surplus target was not up to that level". However, he said the same amount of sugar was later exported to Afghanistan.

As regards tax revenues, he said the government's target this year was Rs 9 trillion. But it has the potential of collecting Rs 4 trillion extra revenues by streamlining the tax system and by curbing corruption and tax evasion.

Biden letter to Shahbaz Sharif & correspondence-New turn in Pak-US relations

Undoubtedly, it is new turn in the relations of Pakistan and United States when the first diplomatic correspondence took place between US president and Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, Joe Biden wherein it was vowed that Washington will "continue to stand with Pakistan" in tackling the "most pressing global and regional challenges".

This is the first communication between a US president and Pakistani leader in a long time. The letter also holds significance as Islamabad's ties with the White House were strained after the cipher saga and allegation levelled by the former ruling party — Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI).

Biden, in his letter, wrote, "The enduring partnership between our nations remains critical to ensuring the security of our people—and people around the world—and the United States will continue to stand with Pakistan to tackle the most pressing global and regional challenges of our time."

"That includes advancing our shared vision for a future of greater health security, economic growth, and access to education for all."

"Through our US-Pakistan 'Green Alliance' framework, we will also continue to strengthen our climate resilience, support sustainable agriculture and water management, and assist with Pakistan's recovery from the devastating floods in 2022," he added.

President Biden stated the United States remains committed to working with Pakistan to protect human rights and promote progress. Together, we will continue to forge a strong partnership between our nations, and close bond between our people, he concluded.

After the formation of the new government led by PM Shehbaz, both countries came closer after an improvement in ties as an increase was witnessed in bilateral engagements.

While it is very important development between the two countries with US has taken lead by writing official letter to the Premier Shehbaz Sharif, it is also unavoidable to strengthen the bilateral relations further.

One must appreciate the correspondence between Biden and Shahbaz hoping it would bear fruit in time to come.

Materialistic metaphysics

Ghulam Shabbir

This modern civilisation, which has attained for man unprecedented power, progress, and prosperity, has an inherent design fault that inexorably leads to crisis after crisis since it is itself a product of violent reaction against revelation.

Whether we agree or disagree with the intellectual foundations, norms, secular ethics and values of this modern civilisation, we all are sharing and are destined to share its ultimate crisis just as we are sharing its fruits. When Descartes' declaration that "reason can stand on its own" became the leitmotif of European civilisation, pure reason edged out religion. Thus, this Enlightenment movement triggered the Scientific Revolution, whose persistent dynamic impulse brought about the Industrial Revolution. Nascent capitalism facilitated this revolution for its own advantage and helped spread materialism that might be termed both a boon and bane of Western modernity. On the one hand, it brought unprecedented power and prosperity to humanity, and on the other hand it deprived man of his moral anchor.

Now, the hubris of modern man was about to unleash a mix of constructive and destructive capabilities. With religion reduced to a relic of the past, the advent of cannibalistic capitalism — ie, the emergence of corrupt socioeconomic structures with laissez-faire morality — was a foregone conclusion. Equipped with the faculty of creative knowledge man was destined to master the laws and forces of nature. But mastering that 'mastery' which comes into the purview of revelation was beyond his ken.

What could religion do to rein in man's lust for power and self-aggrandisement? A study of civilisations shows that shorn of morality, man could be the most dangerous species on earth. His self-destructive genius puts the survival of the world and life in it at stake. Life on earth has witnessed extinction five times, the fifth time about 60 million years ago. Now we must consider of what consequence terribly excessive carbon emissions and destructive nuclear arsenals are and what havoc they are about to wreak on our planet. Noam Chomsky says: "Nuclear arsenals and climate change are an ample testimony to the fact that man is an evolutionary error." His remark echoes a striking similarity with the divine judgement at the time of creation. "Indeed, we offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and they declined to bear it and feared it; but man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant" (33:72).

This "Trust" is bestowal of faculty of reason and volition on man to establish a just moral social world order. The Quran invites people of the book, ie, Jews and Christians (3:64) to share this responsibility. Hence, today we are "reaping" what was laid down in the intellectual foundations of the European Renaissance, Christian Reformation Movement and Peace of Westphalia, which alienated religion from the socioeconomic and political spheres. The ethical hollowiness of modern man has rendered his vision myopic and priorities so warped and distorted that rudderless in the sea of unquenchable desires, he is probing in the dark.

Man is zeroing in on Mars while the affairs of the earth are becoming ever more complicated and dangerously intractable. Pure intellect has successfully defeated the moral purpose of life, turning modern man's endeavours and achievements into Frankenstein's monster. So, be it the rapid deterioration and decomposition of man's social life and/or ecological disasters, both are the outcome of the corrupt socioeconomic structures based on materialistic metaphysics.

The Quran offers man a complete programme for self-reformation which is sufficient to save our civilisation. The plight of man at the advent of Islam, as portrayed in vivid imagery in the Quran, was highlighted thus: "Corruption has appeared on land and in the sea as an outcome of what men's hands have wrought" (30:41).

Nuclear arsenals and climate challenges are the outcome of what modern man's hands have wrought due to his unbridled acquisitiveness, self-aggrandisement and military-cum-cultural and epistemological hegemonies, with corrupt socioeconomic structures their main props. The panacea for all these maladies lies in the return of religion to socioeconomic and political affairs of the globe.

At the time of creation, God set a challenge to man that the equality which all people share in the eyes of God should reflect in the socioeconomic and political order.

Failure to live up to the challenge is not only of Muslims; it is, in fact, the failure of entire mankind. Are we awake to this reality? -- Courtesy Dawn

Our Indian mirror

Aasim Sajjad Akhtar

Soon after the Babri Masjid was demolished by Hindu nationalist mobs in December 1992, Fahmida Riaz wrote an epic poem entitled Tum bilkul hum jaise nikle. Three decades later, her words ring truer than ever.

For progressives in Pakistan, India has often represented the possibility that the postcolonial state can be democratised, that ideologies like socialism and secularism can be mainstreamed, and that relations with the world can be guided by principles such as non-alignment and anti-imperialism.

But over the past few years, as Pakistan has been pulverised by various iterations of 'hybrid' militarised rule, it has become increasingly difficult to look towards our neighbour with any degree of envy. In June, India will go to the polls and all indications point to a victory for Narendra Modi and his BJP. Only Jawaharlal Nehru has enjoyed three successive terms in government; Modi seems set to overhaul Nehru's long legacy. Soon, our Indian mirror will likely show Pakistanis an image of our own brutalised selves.

1. Democracy: Indian political life is not overdetermined by an all-powerful military. This is no small mercy. But seen on a broader canvas, the political mainstream in both India and Pakistan has been transformed by the combination of digitalised mass media and an extremely young population. In Pakistan the establishment cultivated terror armies and is now suffering blowback. In India, Modi and the BJP have built an even bigger captive audience that is unremittingly rechristening India as a majoritarian polity.

More generally, the Modi regime has ruthlessly clamped down on independent media and political dissidents. In the lead-up to elections, it has incarcerated competitors like Arvind Kejriwal of the Aam Aadmi Party whilst also defanging an already emaciated Congress. All of this is happening to the loud acclaim of a large and expanding social base.

Secularism: Indian secularism has a long but flawed history. The father of the Indian constitution and iconic Dalit leader Dr Ambedkar warned that if all Indians were equal on paper, actually existing Indian society was deeply hierarchical. For decades, a wide cross-section of social and political forces defended and fought for secular principles in spite of societal resistance. Today, the Hindu right has been mainstreamed to a degree that was unimaginable even when the Babri Masjid demolition took place.

While organisations such as the RSS were created in the 1920s, they remained sleeping giants until the turn of the century. In Modi's India, the Hindu right has fully ingrained itself in society through welfare groups, religious mobilisation and ideological campaigns. Its vigilante role is like the religious right in Pakistan, but one step ahead: it also wins elections.

Economy and environment: Since the end of the Cold War, India has enjoyed exalted status as a major success story of neoliberal globalisation. It has been lionised as the world's software and pharmaceutical outsourcing hub, has produced glittering spectacles like the IPL, boasts the world's biggest film industry and has been described as home to a huge middle class. While India is not overburdened by a military-run corporate empire and its economy has a stronger productive base, the myth of prosperity now rings hollow. Tens of millions fell into poverty during and after the pandemic and inequality has reached earth-shattering proportions: the richest one per cent of Indians today have a bigger share of income than the same ruling class did under British rule.

Meanwhile, big industrial conglomerates like the Ambanis and Tatas pillage India's peripheries along with multi-national capital for minerals and other natural resources. Indigenous populations and nature in Orissa, Jharkhand and Bihar are expropriated in ways similar to the Baloch and other peripheries here.

Foreign policy: India once championed the Palestinian cause. Today, it is aligned with the murderous Zionist regime, and clamours to be the right-hand of US imperialism. It certainly enjoys autonomy in trade relations with powers like Russia but Modi's India puts to shame the once proud legacy of a country that led the Non-Aligned Movement. In the realm of Indo-Pak ties, Modi has mirrored the reactionary forces that depose the 'other' to appease hawkish galleries.

Pakistan and India are both home to very young populations, ecological crises and toxic politics. They are not the same, but their disturbingly similar trajectories will only change if enough of us on both sides coalesce around progressive alternatives that speak the language of a wider South Asian post-capitalist peace. Popular, democratic impulses in both countries' peripheries give us hope. But the time to build a critical mass of support in the mainstream is running out. -- Courtesy Dawn

ICJ tells Israel to 'ensure urgent assistance' in Gaza

Monitoring Desk
THE HAGUE: The world's top court ordered Israel to "ensure urgent humanitarian assistance" in Gaza without delay, saying "famine has set in". The International Court of Justice's latest order comes as heavy street battles continued to rage in besieged Gaza — and a major medical charity said it "hasn't seen any change" since a United Nations Security Council resolution this week demanding an immediate ceasefire. "Israel shall... take all necessary and effective measures to ensure, without delay... the unhindered provision... of urgently needed basic services and humanitarian assistance" in Gaza, the ICJ said. "Palestinians in Gaza are no longer facing only a risk of famine, but... famine is setting in," the Hague-based court said.

At the ICJ, South Africa has charged that Israel is perpetrating a genocide in Gaza, an accusation strongly denied by Israel. Pretoria dragged Israel before the court, saying it was in breach of its obligations under the 1948 UN Genocide Convention, and urging the court to order a ceasefire. In a ruling in mid-January that made headlines worldwide, the ICJ ordered Israel to do everything it could to prevent genocide during its Gaza offensive. The court also ruled that Israel must allow aid into Gaza to ease the desperate humanitarian situation there. South Africa followed up with a request for fresh measures a few weeks later, citing an announced incursion into the city of Rafah, but the court declined to impose

Israel kills dozens in airstrikes across Gaza Strip

Monitoring Desk
CAIRO: Israel sustained its aerial and ground bombardment of the Gaza Strip on Friday, killing dozens of Palestinians, as fighting raged around Gaza City's main Al Shifa hospital, Palestinian officials and the Israeli military said. Palestinian health officials said two Israeli strikes on the Al-Shejaia suburb in eastern Gaza City killed 17 people, while an Israeli air strike on a house in the Al-Maghazi refugee camp in the central Gaza Strip killed eight people. Gaza's Hamas-run government media office said at least 10 policemen, tasked with securing aid to the displaced in northern Gaza, were among those killed in Al-Shejaia. The Israeli military said its forces continued operations in around Gaza City's Al Shifa complex "while mitigating harm to civilians, patients, medical teams, and medical equipment", adding that over the past day it killed a number of gunmen and located weapons and military infrastructure. Al Shifa, the Gaza Strip's biggest hospital before the war, had been one of the few healthcare facilities even partially operational in north Gaza before the latest fighting. It had also been housing displaced civilians. The Israeli statement said its forces conducted raids in central and southern areas including Khan Younis and Al-Karara, where troops exchanged fire with Palestinian gunmen before they killed them and located weapons and rockets.
