Chief Minister advocates debate on all resolvable issues including missing persons in Parliament

Independent Report
QUETTA: The Chief Minister Balochistan, Mir Sarfaraz Ahmed Bugti has advocated the need to bring all resolvable issues including missing persons in the Parliament and hold debate on them. He said that one thing that's clear is that freedom can't be acquired by force or with use of gun. While speaking to a private TV channel and at residence of President of National Party Dr Abdul Malik Baloch in Turbat on Tuesday, the Chief Minister maintained that the Balochistan got the rights through parliament not the weapons. He mentioned that the Parliament has given the rights to Balochistan right from the status of province to the 18th constitutional amendment, he said adding that the parliament would resolve the issue even today. He said that if any of the issues is resolved through negotiations, then who can deny to that? Mir Sarfaraz Bugti asserted that we want negotiations, but question arises with whom negotiations may be conducted? But what to do, if anyone doesn't negotiations, he quipped. The Chief Minister also said that if someone chooses the path of force instead of negotiations, then the Constitution gives us right to take action against one, he insisted. He asserted that the state would take action against those spoil law and order and target innocent people. e said that there should be debate on all resolvable issues including the issue of missing persons in the Parliament.

The Chief Minister strongly believes that not a single citizen should be disappeared. He said that there is a dispute on the number of missing persons. The Chief Minister said that the present parliament would take political responsibility. However, the Parliament may prepare recommendations for resolving the issues of Balochistan, he pleaded. In this regard, he proposed to prepare course of action by forming a think tank. The Chief Minister on the occasion made it clear that no operation is going on in the province. However, smart targeted action would be taken against the terrorists where needed so.

Overall performance of Livestock not satisfactory: GoB decides to offer small loans to graduate youth for business in livestock and other sectors

Independent Report
QUETTA: The Government of Balochistan has decided to offer small loans to the graduate youths for doing business in livestock and other sectors in the province. Primarily, grant of Rs. 2 billion would be allocated for provision of loans to the youth at small level. This project would be implemented with assistance of the non-governmental organization, Akhuwwat. The decision to this effect was made in a meeting of the Livestock and Dairy Development Department held with Chief Minister Mir Sarfaraz Ahmed Bugti in the chair here on Tuesday. The Provincial Minister for Livestock and Dairy Development, Bakht Muhammad Kakar, Minister Finance, Mir Shoaib Noshervani, Chief Secretary, Shakeel Qadir Khan, Secretary Livestock, Muhammad Tayyab Lehri, Secretary Finance, Babar Khan, and other concerned high ups were in attendance at the meeting. The meeting decided to approve the mobile units for vaccination of cattle in all 36 districts of the province.

PM satisfied as $1.1 bln final IMF tranche to bring in economic stability

ISLAMABAD (APP): Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif on Tuesday, expressing satisfaction over the disbursement of $1.1 billion final tranche by the International Monetary Fund (IMF), hoped that it would help bring economic stability to the country. On Monday, the IMF Executive Board completed the second review under the Stand-By Arrangement (SBA) for Pakistan, allowing for an immediate disbursement of around $1.1 billion, bringing total disbursements under the arrangement to around $3 billion. The IMF and Pakistan had reached the Staff Level Agreement on the second and final review on March 20, 2024 for the remaining $1.1.

The prime minister, in a statement, said that in 2016, Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz Quaid Nawaz Sharif had completed the IMF program in his tenure, and the current one was the second SBA nearing completion. Highlighting the significance of the IMF program to save Pakistan from economic default, Prime Minister Shehbaz said that the bitter and tough decisions were coming to fruition in the form of economic stability. "Allah has given us the opportunity to improve the economy. We will make all possible efforts to bring in the economic stability. The real success is not to get loans but to get rid of them," he remarked.

Unless parliament is strong, others will become powerful: CJP Faez Isa

Says solution to this matter will start from legislation; Any party pushing the judiciary towards a certain path is also akin to interference; Justice Shah says high courts, judiciary need to be empowered

ISLAMABAD (INP): Chief Justice Qazi Faez Isa on Tuesday said they would not interfere in the matters related to the high court as the practice in the past didn't produce good consequences. "Can a chief justice phone a subordinate judge to order that the verdict should be passed in such a manner?" he asked during the hearing of a suo moto case related to a letter written by the six justices of

Islamabad High Court (IHC). The IHC judges' letter case is being heard by a six-member bench, headed by Chief Justice Isa and comprising Justice Mansoor Ali Shah, Justice Jamal Khan Mandokhel, Justice Athar Minallah, Justice Musarrat Hilali and Justice Naeem Akhtar Afghan. After the culmination of Tuesday's proceedings, the six-member bench adjourned the hearing till May 7 and asked the Supreme Court Bar Association (SCBA) and others to submit their replies containing suggestions on the subject. "We appoint a monitoring judge". It is also interference," the chief justice remarked during the hearing—a reference to Justice Ijazul Ahsan who severed in the same capacity in the Panama Papers cases filed against then prime minister Nawaz Sharif. It seemed that [some] people wanted to promote their thinking instead of independence of judiciary, the chief justice observed as Attorney General Usman Mansoor Awan presented his arguments while representing the government being the country's chief law officer. The chief justice also recalled that he was the first individual to name someone for interference by mentioning Lt-Gen (ret'd) Faiz Hameed in the Faizabad sit-in case.

Govt to block mobile phone SIMs of over 500,000 non-filers

Tax watchdog makes public the names of 506,671 non-filers; Cellphone SIMs of these individuals can be blocked at any time.

ISLAMABAD (Agencies): In a robust action against non-filers amid the prevailing financial crisis being faced by the cash-strapped country, the government on Tuesday directed the Pakistan Telecommunication Authority (PTA) and the telecom companies to block mobile phone SIMs of over 500,000 non-filers.

In a statement, the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) said: "In exercise of the powers conferred under section 114B of the Income Tax Ordinance, 2001, the FBR is pleased to issue this Income Tax General Order (ITGO) to disable the mobile phone SIMs in respect of following persons who are not appearing on active taxpayer list but are liable to file the Income Tax Return for Tax Year 2023 under the provisions of the Income Tax Ordinance, 2001. The development came a day after Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif hinted at undertaking "massive economic reforms" at the special meeting of the World Economic Forum (WEF) in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Speaking at the closing plenary of a special meeting of the WEF, the premier vowed to introduce deep-rooted reforms and adopt meaningful austerity to steer the country out of the economic crisis.

ISLAMABAD: Ambassador of Qatar Ali Mubarak Ali Essa Al-Khater called on Speaker National Assembly Sardar Ayaz Sadiq at Parliament House.

Pakistan, Qatar agree to further solidify parliamentary relations

ISLAMABAD (APP): Speaker National Assembly Sardar Ayaz Sadiq Tuesday emphasized the need to further solidify existing fraternal bond between Pakistan and Qatar through expanding parliamentary cooperation, besides deepening ties in other socio-economic sectors. He expressed these views in his meeting with Ambassador of Qatar Ali Mubarak Ali Essa Al-Khater who called on him at Parliament House. Talking to the Ambassador, the speaker remarked, "Pakistan cherishes its historic brotherly relations with Qatar and desires them to take up to new heights through bolstering parliamentary cooperation, expanding economic ties, and furthering people-to-people contacts between the legislatures of both the countries". Referring to the parliamentary collaboration between the parliaments of both countries, the speaker noted, "Parliamentary diplomacy is quintessential in bringing two nations closer which are already tied in eternal religious and historic bonds". He said that the Pak-Qatar friendship group in the National Assembly of Pakistan would be fully activated to bring Parliaments and people of both the countries closer. During the meeting, he also mentioned the invitation extended to the Speaker of the Shura Council of the State of Qatar. Expressing his satisfaction over the economic cooperation between Pakistan and Qatar, the speaker said that investors from Qatar could benefit from investment opportunities in Pakistan by investing in various sectors especially the energy and manufacturing sectors. He said that both Pakistan and Qatar should take advantage of each other's experiences for the mutual benefits of the people of two countries. Ambassador Ali Mubarak Ali Essa Al-Khater thanked the speaker for his remarks and congratulated him on his re-election as Speaker of the National Assembly.

Daily Voice of Masses Independent

All this talk

It is still early days, but there have been several small developments over the past week that, it is hoped, may add up to something bigger in the coming future.

The ice between the government and opposition benches, which began to show signs of a thaw last week, seems to have melted some more over the weekend, and the two factions are apparently in agreement that negotiations can help break the current deadlock. However, it is also becoming clear that there will be some major stumbling blocks.

For one, the PTI clearly does not know what it wants. Over the weekend, its leaders issued conflicting statements regarding whom they want to parley with and what their preconditions are for the talks. It would appear that the party is still seeking a settlement with the establishment, while some of the conditions it has set for the dialogue seem like a very long shot.

There will be progress only when the two factions can differentiate between dialogue and surrender. For example, the PTI may feel it has a moral right to demand its 'stolen' seats back from the government, but it cannot expect the latter to simply hand over its leverage in such a manner. The party ought to realise that any talks will only take place within the existing power configuration, even if its legitimacy is up for debate. Its other demand — the release of imprisoned leaders, including Imran Khan — is reasonable and, in fact, the government should consider facilitating this at the earliest.

The inaccessibility of key central leaders is contributing to the confusion within the PTI's ranks, which will continue to make any talks with it next to impossible. Any negotiation needs to be publicly sanctioned by the PTI founder, even if he does not participate in it himself. Otherwise, it would mean nothing in the eyes of the party's zealots.

Lastly and most importantly, it would be most disappointing if the PTI repeats the mistake of turning to the establishment instead of negotiating directly with its rivals — something which it is shockingly still not averse to. It is an unfortunate reality of Pakistan's power politics that every party wants to engage directly with the security establishment.

However, there is an opportunity right now for democratic forces to retake the legislative domain as long as they agree to respect each other. Regardless of how many seats it believes it won, the PTI does not represent every citizen of Pakistan.

The other parties are equally legitimate stakeholders in the country's political future, and it must give them due consideration. The PTI need only look at how the PDM fared in the Feb 8 elections to realise how sour non-political 'solutions' to political problems can become.

Ending conflicts

Dr Niaz Murtaza

Business gurus, often deemed unwise, gave very wise advice to Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif in Karachi: end conflicts with the PTI and India. These tiffs are the biggest internal and external drains on national energy, curbing our progress. The one with the PTI has polarised society and major institutions and impeded their work. The one with India has contributed to our isolation and wasted scarce resources on defence. There are also the Baloch and Taliban conflicts. Arguably, the shadow of the establishment hovers over all. Three of the issues need a peaceful end; the Taliban a forceful one.

But can they be ended? The PTI, PML-N, PPP and the powers that be must first gather in a room for truth and reconciliation and admit their roles in fanning political instability that causes all our social, economic, security and external issues. The elephant in the room must fulfil its earlier promises to eschew politics.

The PTI, PML-N and PPP must then sign charters of democracy and governance. In the charter of democracy, they must accept that the 2018 and 2024 polls were rigged; agree never to seek the establishment's aid again; see each other as rivals and not enemies; accept each other's mandate; eschew political victimisation via fake cases against rivals; and make institutions independent.

They must also agree on a time frame for early polls, and come to an agreement on legal changes before they are held to make them credible and agree on a power-sharing formula under which all three get a piece of the pie to compensate for both the 2018 and 2024 alleged rigging. An example of this could be an agreement for two of them to form a federal coalition after the polls to ensure political stability, with the third one leading or being in the Punjab set-up, depending on their numbers.

The charter of governance must commit to ending misrule, especially of the economic variety. All three parties must publicly accept their own input in the economic mess and admit that the cited six per cent growth under the PML-N and PTI was not accurate. Most critically, they must accept that their top leaders are not the best ones to rule at the moment, given how bad our economic status is. They must agree to appoint competent cabinets with experts in key posts for the next five to 10 years, while the top leaders run their parties, like the Gandhi family has since Rajiv Gandhi's death.

While this charter will cover all areas, I focus on the three other conflicts. On the Taliban, all three, especially the PTI, must agree that talks are futile, use China's influence to wean Kabul away from the TTP, and deploy force if the latter still don't end terrorism. On Balochistan, they should agree to give nationalists their due share, end disappearances, ensure development and hold talks with the insurgents to put down their arms. On India, the three must agree on trade and peace, recognising that it holds the aces. Our only small leverage is that the world still doesn't accept India's claims on occupied Kashmir with a pact with Pakistan and the Kashmiris.

Will the four forces accept this plan broadly? The PTI, lacking other viable paths, may do so as the dubious case against it might then end and it may lead the centre and/ or Punjab set-up. But it too must eschew populism; end its polarising politics of calling the PPP and PML-N chors, while filling its own ranks with some dubious elements; and agree to work with the parties. Perhaps one can conjecture that in such a scenario, the PPP may agree as it won't lose Sindh and may be in coalition in the centre too. But the PML-N may be unwilling to lose power. However, if the others agree, it may not have an option. A piece of the pie may mollify it further.

Finally, what will it take to reduce the establishment's shadow? This is the biggest hurdle. A concerted pushback from political parties, internal ranks, media, civil society, allied states and businesses will help, as would an end to internal and external tensions, political parties working together for progress, and greater military professionalism.

Asif Zardari who pushed reconciliation in his National Assembly speech can nudge all parties to talk as president, while using his vaunted reconciliation skills.

All four must see that conflicts and political illegitimacy are pushing us fast towards doom.

Nevertheless, all this is a short-term remedy. Ultimately, new non-elitist parties must emerge. But the path to electoral democracy first may lead later to that end. -- Courtesy Dawn

Tectonic shifts

Bina Shah

When I was a teenager, the world was divided between the First World and Third World, terms first defined by the French anthropologist Alfred Sauvy in 1952. The First World was the affluent developed world, the industrialised nations of North America, Europe and Australia: stable and democratic, life held infinite satisfaction for its citizens.

On the other hand, the Third World, where I lived, was characterised as poor, illiterate, underdeveloped, violent and insecure. The Second World was made up of the Soviet Union and the countries aligned with it, but it was more familiarly known either as 'the enemy' or 'those Communists'. We paid little attention to it even when the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, bringing the Second World right to the doorstep of the Third.

We were told that the First/ Third World had more to do with economics than politics, but the two seemed inseparable when it came to the power the First World wielded over the Third. First World countries used a lot of influence and money to keep them away from the clutches of the Soviet Union. Building on the foundations that colonialism and imperialism had laid for them in the previous two centuries, the First World gained free access to the Third World's economic markets, influence on their education systems and a cultural dominance that warped young people's self-esteem and pride in their own identity.

The First World rewarded those Third World countries for their loyalty with generous foreign aid, favourable trade deals, and unending support for their governments, no matter how corrupt or undemocratic. Indeed, the First World coined the term 'banana republic' to describe some of these Third World countries, even as they propped up their autocrats and encouraged them to function as the polar opposite of Western liberalism for half a century.

By the 1990s, the world had benefited from 20 to 30 years of decolonial studies and Marxist economics, Edward Said's powerful work on Orientalism and Gayatri Spivak's on subalternity, the liberation theologies of South America and the anti-apartheid movement of South Africa. The term 'Third World' began to give way to the 'Global South', somewhat due to political correctness but mostly out of their own loathing for an appellation that symbolised dysfunction and underdevelopment.

The Global South is made up of Latin America, Africa and Asia. Yet some countries in it began to achieve economic industrialisation: India, China, Brazil. Today, the inclusion of very rich countries like the UAE and Saudi Arabia as well as tiny Costa Rica and prosperous Malaysia raises the question of whether the 'Global South' term is now stretched beyond usefulness, too racialised, or even simply obsolete?

Not so, according to political researchers Nour Dados and Raewyn Connell. In their eyes, "the use of the phrase Global South marks a shift from a central focus on development or cultural difference toward an emphasis on geopolitical relations of power". Former colonies aligned as countries whose interests clashed with industrialised powers in the West and the Communist bloc, thus ignoring Cold War divisions of the '50s and '60s. Today, the Global South is more than just "a metaphor for underdevelopment". Instead, it references "an entire history of colonialism, neoimperialism, and differential economic and social change through which large inequalities in living standards, life expectancy and access to resources are maintained".

But as we transition from a unipolar to a multipolar world, political scientist John Ikenberry envisions a Global North, a Global South, and a Global East, led by China and Russia. The Global South, in this scenario, is more passive and lacks leadership, and both the Global North and Global East compete for its loyalty and cooperation.

Still, when South Africa took Israel to the International Court of Justice on charges of genocide in Gaza, many Global South countries rallied behind the cause of ending the conflict in Gaza and getting Israel to face international law for its alleged war crimes. South Africa's historic defeat of apartheid gave the accusers' case moral as well as legal weight. Instead of just backing Palestine in places like the ICJ and the UN, the Global South was now taking direct action against Israel in those very forums. This marks a powerful change in the way these countries align and negotiate global conflicts. In politics, sometimes language reflects these changes and sometimes it is a precursor or even an instigator of change. Like the movement of tectonic plates that creates earthquakes on the higher ends of the Richter scale, the deliberate use of the term 'Global South' will instigate a major shift towards a world where global justice must prevail. -- Courtesy Dawn

Pakistan, Malaysia resolve to harness economic potential, take bilateral ties to new heights

ISLAMABAD (APP): Pakistan and Malaysia on Tuesday reiterated their commitment to strengthen bilateral ties and strategic partnership through enhanced cooperation in trade, defense, tourism and other sectors.

Following their meeting on the sidelines of the Special Meeting of the World Economic Forum in Riyadh, both Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and his Malaysian counterpart Anwar Ibrahim engaged in a conversation on social media platform X, with both agreeing to build on their discussion.

"As we agreed during our meeting, there is a huge untapped potential to scale up the cooperation in the different sectors of the economy. Our current level of bilateral trade relations doesn't match the excellent ties between our two brotherly countries," Prime Minister Shehbaz wrote in response to his Malaysian counterpart's post.

Malaysia's Anwar Ibrahim said that in their meeting, they had expressed their commitment to strengthen bilateral cooperation and strategic partnership, including enhancing trade relations which currently stood at US$1.4 billion. Prime Minister Shehbaz expressed his pleasure as both sides committed to unpacking the true potential and taking the Pakistan.

Experts demand moderation in tax system

ISLAMABAD (APP): The experts at the pre-budget stakeholder consultation on Tuesday demanded the government to ensure moderation in tax system and cumbersome regulatory steps for macroeconomic stability in Pakistan.

The Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI) with the support of the Revenue Mobilisation, Investment and Trade (REMIT) programme funded by Foreign, Commonwealth and Development office organised the stakeholder pre-budget consultation titled "Optimizing Revenue and Public Spending for Inclusive Growth Pre-Budget Consultative workshop" at a local hotel in Lahore.

In her welcome remarks, Naghameh Tehniat Jerral, Governance Adviser and Tax Lead - REMIT said that UK is a close partner of Pakistan in its development journey with key ambition to make the latter achieve its economic potential.

Pakistan has the beneficial youth population, ideal location at the heart of fastest growing markets, six million diaspora and women potential to play a substantial growth in the economic growth, she added. She mentioned that World Bank in its report indicated that Pakistan economy could go beyond $5 trillion by 2057 with correct interventions and reforms in its economic system.

Ms. Jerral said in global race for trade and investment, Pakistan is lagging behind since past three decades, whereas revenue mobilization is also one of the challenges faced by the country amid small tax revenue being collected which was half of the total potential.

She claimed that tax collection was insufficient as compared to the population of Pakistan.

Hamed Yaqoob Sheikh, Team Lead - REMIT briefed the participants on REMIT which was an FCDO-funded programme based on reforms in the economy of Pakistan with the objective to bring macroeconomic stability.

The main areas of focus of the programme included revenue, investment, improving and enhancing trade of Pakistan, he added. "The purpose of the dialogue is to come up with recommendations and solutions to provide guideline to the government for corrective measures. REMIT has the edge that it can lead the policy recommendations to the highest level forum," he said.

Dr. Wasif Ali Memon, Chairman, Sindh Revenue Board said that political will was very important to implement reforms and taxation measures then no change can happen in the system. He added that do retrospective of its conduct during the process of seeking International Monetary Fund (IMF)'s program as it had avoided some 25th so far.

Industries Minister directs to withdraw recent urea price hike

ISLAMABAD (APP): In a move to protect the interests of farmers, Federal Minister for Industry and Production, Rana Tanveer Hussain here on Tuesday directed the fertilizer companies to immediately reverse the recent increase in urea prices.

He said while chairing an emergency meeting with representatives of fertilizer companies, including Fauji Fertilizer Company, Engro Fertilizer Private Limited, and Fatima Fertilizer Company, to discuss the sudden price hike.

Secretary Industry and Production Wasim Ajmal Chaudhry also attended the meeting, according to a news release issued here.

The minister has rejected the fertilizer companies' justification for the price increase, citing no change in production costs.

He emphasized that the government's top priority is to protect farmers' interests and ensure the uninterrupted supply of urea during the upcoming Kharif season.

The minister highlighted that the government has decided to import 200,000 metric tons of urea. He directed all provinces to stop hoarding and illegal profiteering of urea fertilizer.

Kyrgyz Honorary Consul calls on Punjab Governor

Independent Report
LAHORE: Honorary Consul Kyrgyzstan Mehr Kashif Younis called on Punjab Governor Muhammad Balighur Rehman here at Governor House on Tuesday.

In the meeting, issues of mutual interest and promotion of bilateral cooperation between Pakistan and Kyrgyzstan were discussed. Kyrgyzstan Consul's Advisor Dr Waqar Ullah Chaudhry was also present.

The Governor congratulated Mehr Kashif Younis on his appointment as Honorary Consul of Kyrgyzstan and hoped that he would play an active role in promoting relations between Pakistan and Kyrgyzstan in trade, education and other fields. He said his appointment signifies a milestone in diplomatic relations which underscores the importance of fostering closer ties and cooperation particularly in the realm of trade and commerce.

He said that Pakistan attaches great importance to the relations with Kyrgyzstan, and emphasized the importance of enhancing trade relations between Pakistan and Kyrgyzstan, highlighting the untapped potential that exists. He said that people-to-people contact is very important in promoting bilateral cooperation. The Governor said that there are vast opportunities for cooperation between the two countries in the fields of education, agriculture and technology. He said that there should be exchanges of delegations between Pakistan and Kyrgyzstan in the field of higher education.

UAJKVC condemns India's demographic engineering in Occupied Kashmir

MUZAFFARABAD (APP): In a stern denunciation of India's actions in the disputed region of Jammu and Kashmir, Vice Chancellor of the University of Azad Jammu and Kashmir (UAJK), Prof. Dr Muhammad Kaleem Abbasi, has highlighted India's employment of tactics akin to those of Israel to alter the demographic composition of Muslim majority areas.

Speaking at the 5th Inter-University English Debate Competition, Prof. Abbasi emphasized the grave implications of India's actions, labelling them as violations of international law and an assault on the right to self-determination.

Addressing participants of the debate competition jointly organized by UAJK and Jammu Kashmir Liberation Commission (JKLC), Prof. Abbasi stressed the parallels between India and Israel's attempts to manipulate population ratios in disputed territories to sway the outcome of future plebiscites.

He underscored the competition's role in raising awareness among the youth about the Kashmir issue, emphasizing the importance of understanding it from its true perspective.

Labours play vital role in national economy: Swati

PESHAWAR (APP): Speaker Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Assembly Babar Salim Swati on the eve of Labour Day said that labours play vital role in the national economy.

He said that observing International Labour Day acknowledges their contribution to the nation's progress and prosperity.

Speaker Swati emphasized that the Prophet Mohammad (peace be upon him) has mandated that labour dues be paid before his sweat dries, thus underscoring the recognition of laborers' status and economic rights in Islam.

He stated that workers, regardless of literacy, are pivotal to the advancement of any society or nation, playing a key role in its development.

Highlighting the efforts of the past Khyber Pakhtunkhwa government towards the welfare and prosperity of laborers, Swati assured that the current government will continue this legacy.

He reiterated the government's commitment to safeguarding the rights of workers and providing maximum relief to the labour class amid the prevailing challenging circumstances.

Top UN court rejects Nicaragua's request for Germany to halt aid to Israel

Monitoring Desk
THE HAGUE: The top U.N. court rejected on Tuesday a request by Nicaragua to order Germany to halt military and other aid to Israel and renew funding to the U.N. aid agency in Gaza.

The International Court of Justice said that legal conditions for making such an order weren't met and ruled against the request in a 15-1 vote, effectively siding with Germany, which told judges that it's barely exporting any arms to Israel.

"Based on the factual information and legal arguments presented by the parties, the court concludes that, as present, the circumstances are not such as to require the exercise of its power ... to indicate provisional measures," said Nawaf Salam, the court's president.

However, the 16-judge panel declined to throw out the case altogether, as Germany had requested.

The court will still hear arguments from both sides on the merits of Nicaragua's case, which alleges that, by giving support to Israel, Germany failed to prevent genocide in Gaza. The case will likely take months or years.

Salam said that the court, which earlier this year ordered Israel to allow more humanitarian supplies into Gaza, "remains deeply concerned about the catastrophic living conditions of the Palestinians in the Gaza Strip, in particular in view of the prolonged and widespread deprivation of food and other basic necessities to which they have been subjected."

He added that the court "considers it particularly important to remind all states of their international obligations relating to the transfer of arms to parties to an armed conflict, in order to avoid the risk that such arms might be used" to violate international law.

The reading of the decision lasted less than 20 minutes.

The German Foreign Office welcomed the ruling in a post on X.

"Germany is not a party to the conflict in the Middle East — on the contrary: we are working day and night for a two-state solution," the ministry said. "We are the largest donor of humanitarian aid to the Palestinians.

"We are working to ensure that aid reaches the people in Gaza."

But it added that Israel has the right to defend itself and said more than 100 hostages are still being held by Hamas, "which is abusing the people of Gaza as shields."

The court noted that Germany had granted only four export licenses to Israel for weapons of war since the start of the conflict, two for training ammunition and one for test purposes, as well as one consignment of "3,000 portable anti-tank weapons."

King Charles III resumes public duties as he fights cancer

Monitoring Desk
LONDON: King Charles III on Tuesday reportedly told fellow cancer patients "I'm well", as he carried out his first official public engagement since being diagnosed with the condition.

The British head of state appeared relaxed as he and his wife Queen Camilla met patients and staff at the University College Hospital Macmillan Cancer Centre in central London.

He talked to patients receiving chemotherapy at a day unit, including 60-year-old Asha Millen, who has bone marrow cancer.

"I said, 'How are you?' and he said, 'I'm well,'" she told reporters afterwards.

Another patient, Lesley Woodbridge, 63, said the king sympathised with her and added: "I've got to have my treatment this afternoon as well."

US, Mexico to clamp down on illegal immigration, leaders say

Monitoring Desk
WASHINGTON: The United States and Mexico plan to clamp down on illegal immigration at their shared border, leaders from both countries said on Monday, vowing to disrupt irregular crossings that have reached record levels in recent years. In a phone conversation on Sunday, U.S. President Joe Biden and Mexican President Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador said their administrations would soon take steps to decrease illegal crossings while also addressing the economic and security problems that cause people to migrate.

"In the short term, the two leaders ordered their national security teams to work together to immediately implement concrete measures to significantly reduce irregular border crossings while protecting human rights," the leaders said in a joint statement. Biden, a Democrat seeking another four-year term in the Nov. 5 election, has toughened his approach to border security in recent months as immigration has emerged as a top concern among voting-age Americans.

Republicans, including Biden's opponent, former President Donald Trump, have criticized the president for rolling back restrictive Trump-era border policies and failing to stem higher levels of illegal crossings.

Most of Asia swelters in extreme heatwave

Monitoring Desk
MANILA: South and Southeast Asia braced for more extreme heat on Sunday, as authorities across the region issued health warnings and residents fled to parks and air-conditioned malls for relief. A wave of exceptionally hot weather has blasted the region over the past week, sending the mercury as high as 45 degrees Celsius and forcing thousands of schools to tell students to stay home.

The Philippines announced on Sunday the suspension of in-person classes at all public schools for two days after a record-shattering day of heat in the capital Manila.

In Thailand, where at least 30 people have died of heatstroke so far this year, the meteorological department warned of "severe conditions" after temperatures in a northern province exceeded 44.1C (111.4F) on Saturday.

And in Cambodia, Myanmar, Vietnam, India and Bangladesh, forecasters warned that temperatures could exceed 40C in the coming days as people endured searing heat and stifling humidity.

Gunman kills 6 in attack on Afghan mosque

Monitoring Desk
KABUL: A gunman stormed a mosque in western Afghanistan and killed six people, a government spokesman said on Tuesday, with local residents claiming the Shia community had been targeted.

Interior ministry spokesman Abdul Mateen Qani said that "an unknown armed person shot at civilian worshippers in a mosque" in Herat province's Guzara district on Monday at around 9pm (4:30pm GMT). "Six civilians were martyred and one civilian was injured," he wrote on social media platform X early Tuesday morning. Locals said the mosque served the minority Shia community in a district just south of the provincial capital of Herat city, and the imam and a three-year-old child were among those killed. They also said a team of three gunmen staged the attack.

ACT alliance demands full implementation of track, trace system amid fiscal failures

ISLAMABAD (APP): The ACT Alliance calls for an immediate, comprehensive, and across-the-board implementation of the Track and Trace System (TTS) as Prime Minister Muhammad Shehbaz Sharif reaffirms commitments to stringent tax enforcement. Despite the system's introduction in 2019, the promises of full implementation by December 2023 have faltered, revealing a critical lapse in our fiscal management strategy.

The recent cabinet meeting chaired by Prime Minister Sharif underscored the dire state of tax evasion and illicit trade, with the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) failing to effectively deploy TTS across vital industries such as cement, sugar, and tobacco. The under-utilization of TTS has allowed a significant portion of local manufacturers to remain unchecked, leading to substantial losses. For instance, two tobacco companies holding 42 per cent of the market share contributed Rs173 billion in taxes in FY 2022-23, while over 40 local manufacturers, controlling a 58 per cent share, paid a mere Rs3 billion. Muabshir Akram, National Convener of the ACT Alliance, expressed deep concern over TTS's selective and inadequate enforcement. "Without equitable and transparent tax collection and enforcing TTS on all large-scale manufacturers, the government will struggle to meet its financial targets."
