Strongly condemns Israel's brutality PM calls for global intervention to stop Palestinians' bloodshed

ISLAMABAD (APP): Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif on Thursday strongly condemned the recent Israeli attacks on unarmed Palestinians in Rafah area of Gaza, urging the international community to intervene to get stopped the worst barbaric inhuman acts.

"I, on behalf of the government and the people of Pakistan, demand that the international community should play its due role to ensure that the people of Palestine and Indian Occupied Kashmir are granted their rightful freedoms and basic human rights," the prime minister said in a televised address.

He said due to the unprovoked and worst bombardment by the Israeli forces across Gaza, including Rafah, over 36,000 Palestinians, including thousands of children, had been martyred so far. "After the lapse of eight months, Israel's thirst for blood is still unquenched as it is now bombarding the cramped camps of Palestinians displaced from across Gaza in Rafah (bordering Egypt)," he added.

The prime minister said Israel had showed blatant disregard for international law, without caring for the International Court of Justice's ruling and the United Nations Security Council's resolutions.

Not a single global power could prevail on Israel to get stopped bloodshed of Palestinians, he regretted.

PM Shehbaz said, "I am thankful to the Muslim countries that have raised voices at different international forums including the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and the UN Security Council against the Israeli aggression." The Saudi Crown Prince, and the rulers of the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Kuwait and other countries were persistently voicing their support for the hapless Palestinians, he added. The prime minister also expressed gratitude to the European countries including Spain, Norway and Ireland for recognizing the State of Palestine in the wake of Israel's atrocious military aggression.

Their bold and principled decision would hopefully encourage other countries to follow suit in recognizing the statehood of Palestine, he added. PM Shehbaz Sharif prayed to Allah Almighty to bring an end to the brutal oppression of the Palestinian people and bless them with an independent State of Palestine where they could live in a free atmosphere.

RAWALPINDI: Chief of Army Staff (COAS), General Syed Asim Munir presided over the 83rd Formation Commanders Conference held at General Headquarters (GHQ) in Rawalpindi.

Formation Commanders resolve to neutralize threats to country's security, stability

Planners, perpetrators, abettors, and facilitators of 9th May needed to be brought to justice for the collective good of the country; Stability to remain hostage to machinations of such elements without swift dispensation of justice, says ISPR

RAWALPINDI (APP): The 83rd Formation Commanders Conference on Thursday affirmed the resolve to neutralize all threats to the security and stability of the country with the full backing of the proud nation.

The conference, presided over by Chief of Army Staff (COAS) General Syed Asim Munir, underscored that politically motivated and vested digital terrorism, unleashed by conspirators duly abetted by their foreign cohorts, against the state institutions was clearly meant to try to induce despondency in the Pakistani nation, to sow discord among national institutions, especially the armed forces, and the people of Pakistan by peddling blatant lies, fake news, and propaganda.

It, however, noted that the nation was fully cognizant of their ugly and ulterior motives and surely the designs of the nefarious forces would be comprehensively defeated.

The forum noted that planners, perpetrators, abettors, and facilitators of 9th May needed to be brought to justice for the collective good of the country, and that without swift and transparent dispensation of justice to the culprits and establishing the rule of law, stability in Pakistan would ever remain hostage to the machinations of such elements. The conference was attended by Corps Commanders, Principal Staff Officers, and all Formation Commanders of Pakistan Army.

An Inter Services Public Relations (ISPR) news release said.

The forum also resolved to continue to fully support the government's initiatives in various domains for sustainable economic growth and curbing illegal activities, including smuggling, hoarding, electricity theft, implementation of One Document Regime, dignified repatriation of illegal foreigners, and safeguarding of the national database, etc.

The conference was briefed on the dynamics of the geo-strategic environment, emerging challenges to national security, and the Army's strategy to counter multi-domain threats. The participants were also briefed on technological innovations to modernize the Army and optimize logistic support to field formations, in line with fast-evolving operational environment.

The forum expressed serious concerns over continued cross-border violations from Afghanistan and terrorism being orchestrated using the Afghan soil, noting that adversaries were using Afghanistan to target security forces and innocent civilians inside Pakistan.

It acknowledged the priceless sacrifices of the people of Newly Merged Districts (NMDs) in the war against terrorism and underscored the importance of uplifting the NMDs to decisively defeat terrorism.

The forum also underlined the need for socio-economic development in Balochistan to counter externally propagated narratives of exclusion, exploited by foreign-sponsored proxies to lead Balochistan's youth away from peace and progress.

Reviewing the prevailing situation on the eastern border and the latest round of extra-judicial murders in the Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu & Kashmir, the forum expressed complete solidarity with the Kashmiri people in their just struggle for the inalienable right to self-determination as enshrined in United Nations Security Council's resolutions.

The forum showed concern over the treatment of minorities, especially Muslims, in India and noted the growing fascism being perpetrated to achieve vested political ends.

It also expressed complete solidarity with the people of Palestine and condemned serious human rights violations and war crimes being perpetrated in Gaza, supporting the International Court of Justice's decision to stop the Rafah Operation and all other operations within the Gaza Strip.

The participants expressed their complete satisfaction with the steps being taken at the Army level for the training, administration, and welfare of serving and retired officers and troops.

The forum noted the significant milestone achieved by Pakistan on Youm-e-Takbir and its stabilizing impact on the region.

The forum offered Fatiha and paid tribute to the supreme sacrifices of Shuhada, including officers and men of the armed forces, law enforcement agencies, and citizens who laid their lives for the country's safety, security, and sovereignty.

Addressing the conference, COAS General Syed Asim Munir appreciated the high standard of training displayed by formations during various exercises and the excellent performance of officers and troops in counter-terrorism operations.

The Army Chief also commended the formations for their high morale and round-the-clock operational readiness.

Debt trap

Pakistan's debt stock has grown exponentially in recent years. So have debt payments, putting pressure on the budget. With the government running an unsustainably high fiscal deficit that averaged 7.3pc of the economic output in the past five years, it is not surprising that the national debt has already surged to Rs78.9tr — including a domestic debt of Rs43.4tr and external loans of Rs32.9tr.

The country is in a debt trap where it must borrow more to pay back its existing debt — domestic and external loans both. It is thus only natural for annual debt payments to also spike. For example, the authorities had anticipated debt servicing to jump to Rs7.3tr or almost 58pc of the budgeted expenditure for the ongoing fiscal. However, according to a report, they have now revised these estimates to Rs8.3tr.

The finance ministry's Mid-Year Budget Review Report for the outgoing year confirms these concerns. The report shows that the nation's debt payments spiralled by more than 64pc to Rs4.2tr during the first six months to December, an increase attributable not only to the mounting stock of debt accumulated to finance the fiscal deficit but also to the surge in the cost of domestic debt because of a record-high interest rate of 22pc. The report says the expenditure on debt servicing during the six-month period far outpaced tax revenue growth, bringing "spending on development to zilch".

In the report, the ministry has blamed elevated domestic interest rates for our growing debt servicing woes. With the government covering nearly 80pc of its fiscal deficit through commercial bank loans amid drying official foreign flows, the interest rates are of primary concern as domestic debt payments accounted for nearly 90pc of the total debt servicing costs during the first half of the fiscal. The cost of borrowing has proved to be a major shock for the entire economy, and not just for the government, as new private investment has come to a halt and growth has stagnated. What the report doesn't discuss are the reasons behind this debt trap. While the higher interest rates are a burden, the main challenge is the government's failure to control its fiscal deficit that is forcing it to accumulate more debt every day. Indeed, a reduction in interest rates will provide relief but will not solve the issue of burgeoning deficit and debt accumulation.

The task before the government is to boost its tax-to-GDP ratio to the global average by taxing the economy's untaxed and undertaxed sectors, as well as eliminating wasteful expenditure to cut the fiscal deficit to sustainable levels to minimise its borrowing requirements for financing the budget. Do the authorities realise this and are they moving in this direction? We will know once the budget is announced next month.

The heat is on

F.S. Aijazuddin

One day it was the cool comfort of spring. The next morning summer arrived with the force of an unwelcome intruder. Until October, life will be hell on earth, especially in hell's scorching suburb called Pakistan.

Yet again, our nation is caught between mismatched policies and their endless impact, between our energy requirements and erratic availability. Over the past 30 years, every government has laid a Humpty Dumpty egg of an energy policy. In March 1994, a new energy policy, issued with the benediction of the World Bank, addressed three aspects: our inadequate capacity (then 10,800 MW), the growth pattern of demand over the previous 25 years (eight per cent per year), and an anticipated requirement of 54,000 MW by 2018.

In September 1994, the US secretary of energy, Hazel O'Leary (a political version of Tina Turner and later president of an insolvent Fisk University), led a delegation of 90 American business persons to Pakistan. During her visit, 16 agreements were signed envisaging an investment of $4 billion in Pakistan's energy sector. Within two months, the Power and Infrastructure Board boasted that it had received "an overwhelming response... with applications for over 25,000 MW against the target of about 5,000 MW till Dec. 1997". It also announced that the discovery of coal deposits in the Tharparkar area of Sindh was "so large that even if half of it is extracted it can provide fuel for 100,000 MW power plants for 30 years".

Thirty years have passed. According to Nepra's State of Energy Report 2023, Pakistan's installed capacity in June 2023, stood at 45,885

MW, well below the 1994 projections of 54,000 MW. The installed capacity for imported coal-based power projects is 3,960 MW, while local coal, sourced from Block-I and Block-II of the Thar coal mines, contributes 2,640 MW (2.6pc of 1994's ambitions). Feedstock of coal-based plants is imported, like the expensive ore used to bankrupt Pakistan Steel Mills. It comes from South Africa and Indonesia under long-term contracts, their price "unregulated, lacking oversight in terms of price determination".

The 1994 policy introduced an innovative bulk power tariff, comprising an energy price and a capacity price at a notional total of 6.5 cents per kilowatt hour. The energy price covered fuel cost and the variable operating costs of the power plant (2.2 cents). Responsibility for fuel supply lay on the government through Pakistan State Oil or Sui Southern Gas. The capacity price of 4.3 cents was calculated to cover debt repayment obligations, fixed operating and maintenance costs and return on equity (17pc). The private sector plants were protected against Wapda waywardness through 'take or pay' provisions in power purchase agreements. Under the 'take or pay' clauses, Nepra tells us, "payments are made for contracted capacity, regardless of whether it is consumed or not. The unutilised capacity places a financial burden on electricity consumers, who end up paying for unused power. During FY2022-23, the utilisation factor was 34pc [...] and the amounts paid to power plants amounted to Rs46.59bn".

In the 1990s, to improve efficiency in transmission and distribution, the World Bank persuaded the government to unbundle Wapda's downstream monopoly, creating independent localised distribution companies (Lesco, Pesco, etc.). Today, there are 12, each operating at varying levels of inefficiency. Distribution losses involve a loss of Rs160.5bn. Pesco alone accounts for half the losses — at Rs77.35bn — an unnecessary threat to inter-provincial harmony. Government officials watch mindlessly as the energy sector circular debt "jumped to Rs5.7 trillion as of November 2023". Rs2.7tr is owed in the power sector and Rs3tr in the gas sector.

Yet, the World Bank still advises that "companies specialising in infrastructure development can participate in projects aimed at enhancing the energy distribution network". And the Asian Development Bank has committed $250 million for "the Power Transmission Strengthening Project, which will help boost national grid stability, energy security, transmission capacity, and effective national transmission system management".

Meanwhile, consumers faced with daily power outages and escalating monthly energy bills wonder whether there is a solution to this power conundrum. Or are we condemned to scavenge for private sector alternatives (like home generators and rooftop solar panels) to compensate for public sector incompetence?

One is reminded of the response given by P. Chidambaram (then India's finance minister) to an inquisitor who asked him how he intended to implement his government's plans. His terse reply was: "By doing it." Pakistanis can do it. They succeed everywhere else. Their flesh is willing; only their governance is weak. — Courtesy Dawn

Plugging the gap

Arif Azad

The term 'health inequalities' is understood as avoidable, unfair and systemic differences between health outcomes for different groups in a society. Different groups experience health inequalities differently based on their social and economic status, ethnicity, geographical location and marginalisation status.

One measure of health inequality is differences in life expectancy, which is a key indicator of the population's health status. In its broadest sense, health inequality is effectively unequal life expectancy, which is intimately bound with socioeconomic status. The relationship is expressed in terms of the social gradient in health, which is measured by the gap between the least and the most deprived areas in terms of life expectancy.

For example, one UK-based study found that in 2017-2019, women in the least deprived areas could expect to live up to 86.4 years as compared to those in the most deprived areas where they could not hope to live beyond 78 years — an eight-year gap in life expectancy. Other factors influencing the trajectory of health inequalities are: limited or no access to healthcare, poor quality of healthcare and risky behaviour such as smoking.

The wider determinants of health such as transportation, education, housing, environment and incomes are also system-level coordinates that contribute hugely to the evolution and progress of health inequality in a society. Together, these factors create conditions that expose groups at the bottom of the socioeconomic heap to the worst effects of health inequality, resulting in shortened lifespans thanks to disease and deprivation.

Prof Michael Marmot has done commendable work on health inequalities in the UK. Though he has been ploughing this lonely academic furrow for a long time, Covid-19 gave new salience to his work as the pandemic exposed health inequalities in a startling new way, showing how the poor, elderly, and ethnic minorities ended up bearing the brunt of Covid-exposed health inequalities. More broadly, the pandemic exposed inequities in the worldwide distribution of vaccines, which exacerbated local health inequalities. His work is of vital importance and has wider application to the issue of health inequalities everywhere.

In Pakistan, health inequalities are visible to the naked eye. A high-level government official, who has a secure lifelong job, decent housing, hefty pension and medical and health cover, tends to live much longer than the ordinary Pakistani. A case in point is that of vintage bureaucrats and military officers often making it into their 90s and even hitting a century.

On the other hand, even among government services, those who are not covered by substantial pension, housing and medical benefits are less likely to make it beyond their 60s and 70s. Those beneath these tiers seem to fare poorly when it comes to life expectancy. At the end of the spectrum are those whose lives, blighted by poverty and structural disadvantage, continue to live shortened lives. It is not rare to see men and women from poorer backgrounds dying in their 30s and 40s, reflecting the health inequalities they face.

Furthermore, improving the quality of care and expanding social safety nets can also play a big part. The restoration of the local government system, which, among other things, keeps a vigilant eye on the status of health inequalities in a particular locality, as evidenced in the work of Prof Marmot, can go a long way in addressing long-term health inequalities. More importantly, more focused research on the patterns of health inequalities in Pakistan is what is immediately needed. — Courtesy Dawn

Slovenia recognises Palestinian state following in footsteps of Spain, Ireland, Norway

Monitoring Desk
LJUBLJANA: The Slovenian government on Thursday approved a decision to recognise an independent Palestinian state, Prime Minister Robert Golob said, following in the steps of Spain, Ireland and Norway.

"Today the government has decided to recognise Palestine as an independent and sovereign state," he said at a news conference in Ljubljana.

Parliament speaker Urska Klakocar Zupancic told a press conference in Ljubljana that Slovenian lawmakers are to vote on Tuesday on whether to recognise the Palestinian state. "The session is scheduled for Tuesday from 4pm (1400 GMT)," Zupancic said.

The move is part of a wider effort by countries to coordinate pressure on Israel to end the bombardment in Gaza. Israel has been fighting against Hamas since a cross-border October 7 attack by fighters in which some 1,200 people were killed and over 250 taken hostage, according to Israeli tallies. Nearly 130 hostages are believed to remain captive in Gaza.

Gaza health authorities say more than 36,000 Palestinians have been killed in the Israeli bombardment over the past seven months that has generated global criticism. PM Golob also called for the immediate cessation of hostilities between Israel and Hamas in Gaza and the release of all hostages. "This is the message of peace," he said. The Slovenian government raised a Palestinian flag alongside the flags of Slovenia and the EU in front of its building in downtown Ljubljana.

On May 28, Spain,

Ireland and Norway officially recognised a Palestinian state, prompting an angry reaction from Israel.

Of the 27 members of the European Union, Sweden, Cyprus, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Poland, Slovakia, Romania and Bulgaria have already recognised a Palestinian state.

Malta has said it could follow soon. Britain and Australia have said they are also considering recognition, but France has said now is not the time.

Germany joined Israel's staunchest ally, the United States, in rejecting a unilateral approach, insisting that a two-state solution can only be achieved through dialogue.

Denmark's parliament on Tuesday voted down a bill to recognise a Palestinian state.

Israel undermines goals by harming civilians in Gaza, US tells UN

Monitoring Desk
UNITED NATIONS: Israel must do more to protect Palestinian civilians in Gaza and should "remove all barriers to the flow of aid at scale through all crossings and routes" into the enclave, the United States told the UN Security Council on Wednesday.

"The continued pattern of significant civilian harm resulting from incidents like Sunday's airstrikes undermines Israel's strategic goals in Gaza," deputy US Ambassador to the UN Robert Wood told the 15-member council. An airstrike on Sunday set off a blaze in a tent camp in Rafah in southern Gaza, killing at least 45 people. Israel — a US ally — said it had targeted Hamas militants and had not intended to harm civilians. Algeria on Tuesday put forward a draft UN Security Council resolution that essentially orders Israel to "immediately halt its military offensive" in Rafah. On Wednesday, Wood told reporters that Washington was reviewing it.

Indonesia volcano belches ash tower 2 km into the sky

BUKIT TINGGI (INP): A volcano in western Indonesia erupted on Thursday, spewing an ash cloud two kilometres into the sky as authorities warned residents over potential dangers from cold lava flows.

Mount Merapi in West Sumatra province erupted at 1:04 pm (0604 GMT), spewing thick grey clouds of ash two kilometres (1.2 miles) above its peak, the national disaster mitigation agency, or BNPB, said in a statement.

The volcano — one of Indonesia's most active — has been at the second-highest alert level of the country's four-tiered system for weeks, with authorities advising people to stay outside a 4.5-kilometre exclusion zone around its crater.

Local residents are advised to be vigilant over threats of cold lava flows following the eruption, BNPB spokesman Abdul Muhari said.

Seven political groups fighting in European Parliament election

Monitoring Desk
BRUSSELS: Voters in the 27 countries of the European Union will elect 720 lawmakers to the European Parliament for the next five years on June 6-9 and are expected to deliver a shift to the right.

The parliament has for the past five years been governed by a three-group majority of the centre-right European People's Party, centre-left Socialists and Democrats and liberals of Renew Europe.

Together they have steered EU policy, which has included the Green Deal and the EU response to Russia's invasion of Ukraine, and divided between them top jobs at EU institutions.

These are the political groups of the outgoing parliament. The groups of the hard and far right have proved the most fluid, regrouping, renaming and relaunching since the last election. The centre-right group is the largest in the European Parliament, dominated by German Christian Democrats, with a fair smattering of Poles and Romanians.

The group has forged an alliance with the socialists and liberal Renew Europe for the past five years, dividing up senior posts and driving through policies such as the "Green Deal". But it has become more sceptical towards the green push in the lead-up to the election.

The centre-left group is the second-biggest in the European Parliament, with its largest bloc of MEPs from Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez's Socialist Workers Party.

It became the focus of the Qataragate cash-for-job-by scandal in late 2022 after the arrest of some of its MEPs and staff. It says its priority is to fight unemployment and make societies fairer.

26 extra days of extreme heat in a year due to climate change: report

Monitoring Desk
PARIS: The world experienced an average of 26 more days of extreme heat over the last 12 months that would probably not have occurred without climate change, a report said on Tuesday.

Heat is the leading cause of climate-related death and the report further points to the role of global warming in increasing the frequency and intensity of extreme weather around the world.

For this study, scientists used the years 1991 to 2020 to determine what temperatures counted as within the top 10 per cent for each country over that period.

Next, they looked at the 12 months to May 15, 2024, to establish how many days over that period experienced temperatures within — or beyond — the previous range.

Iran registers presidential candidates for early vote after Raisi's death

Monitoring Desk
TEHRAN: Iran on Thursday began registering candidates for an early election next month following the death of President Ebrahim Raisi in a helicopter crash, Iranian Interior Minister Ahmad Vahidi told state TV.

Haiti transition council taps former PM Conille to again lead country

Monitoring Desk
PORT-AU-PRINCE: Haiti's transition council tapped former Prime Minister Garry Conille, who briefly led the country over a decade ago, to return to the role as the Caribbean nation works to restore stability and take back control from violent gangs.

The transition council voted 6-1 to install Conille as interim prime minister, a member told Reuters.

Conille's extensive resume in development, working largely with the United Nations, is considered key to shoring up international support as Haiti prepares to launch a UN-backed security mission led by Kenya, though its deployment has faced hurdles.

"I feel very honored that the Presidential Council has chosen me as the new Prime Minister of Haiti," Conille said on X. "Together, we will work for a better tomorrow for all the children of our nation."

The transition council, which holds some presimost two weeks for the election campaign," Vahidi told state TV.

The Guardian Council will publish the list of qualified candidates on June 11.

Moderate politicians have accused the 12-member hardline Guardian Council of disqualifying rivals to hardline candidates, who are expected to dominate the upcoming presidential race. Turnout may be hit by restricted choice on the ballot and rising discontent over an array of political, social and economic crises.

Within Iran's complex mix of clerical rulers and elected officials, Khamenei has the final say on all state matters such as nuclear and foreign policies, but the elected president will be in charge of tackling worsening economic hardship.

Conille's appointment underscores long-awaited progress in Haiti's political process following Prime Minister Ariel Henry's resignation in March after he left Haiti to seek support for the Kenyan security mission and was unable to re-enter the country.

Roshan Pakistan programme to end energy crisis: Laghari

"From 20 per cent to 100 per cent where our losses are occurring, 4,232 megawatts of electricity was not provided there" he added.

Awaiz Leghari said that where the losses are less than 20%, unfortunately, the power supply to these feeders also remained off for a few hours.

The Federal Minister of Energy said that if they start supplying this electricity to these areas, the losses will increase to such an extent that the Pakistani economy will be further destroyed. "Until our distribution companies determine their direction and address these losses with the help of provincial governments, this load shedding will continue" he informed with certainty.

He said that more steps are being taken in the energy sector including elimination of load shedding and electricity theft. He said that the Roshan Pakistan programme will end the energy crisis by showing the data on the demand and supply of each feeder.
