May 9 perpetrators, facilitators will have to be punished as per Constitution, law: DG ISPR

May 9 riots not limited to army, concerns whole nation: No talks will be held with any political leader, or group which attacks its own army and indulges in propaganda; Terrorists trying to disrupt peace in Balochistan, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa

RAWALPINDI (Online): Director General Inter-Services Public Relations, Major General Sharif Chaudhry has disclosed that plot to kill Chinese engineers in Besham was hatched in neighbouring Afghanistan.

Addressing a news conference in Rawalpindi Tuesday, he said the suicide bomber was the Afghan national and the vehicle used in the attack was also prepared in Afghanistan. He said four other key culprits have been arrested by the law enforcement agencies.

The DG ISPR pointed out that there are twenty-nine thousand Chinese nationals in Pakistan. Of them, twenty-five hundred Chinese are engaged with CPEC-related projects and 5500 others are working on other development projects.

Ahmed Sharif Chaudhry said it is our priority to ensure security of all Chinese nationals and all possible steps are being taken in this regard.

The DG ISPR said the attack on Chinese engineers was aimed at sabotaging Pakistan-China friendship and hurt the CPEC project.

He expressed firm commitment to completely dismantle terrorist groups and ensure protection of the people.

Ahmed Sharif Chaudhry said security forces conducted thirteen thousand one hundred and thirty-five intelligence based operations against terrorists and their facilitators.

He said about one hundred

Pakistan team off to Ireland for T20 matches ahead of World Cup

LAHORE (INP): The Pakistan cricket team departed for Ireland to play T20 series ahead of world cup. The team, led by Babar Azam, flew off to Ireland from the Allama Iqbal International Airport, Lahore. Fast bowler Muhammad Amir could not accompany the team due to visa delay. He will join the team shortly. Acting Punjab governor Muhammad Ahmed Khan saw the team off at the airport. He wished the national team all the success in the Ireland and England tour.

In Ireland, Pakistan will play three T20 matches on May 10, 12 and 14. Thereafter, the team will depart for England against whom it will play four matches on May 22, 25, 28 and 30.

The Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) on Monday unveiled the national team's kit for the T20 World Cup. At the unveiling ceremony held at Lahore's Gaddafi Stadium, PCB Chairman Mohsin Naqvi, along with captain Babar Azam, Mohammad Rizwan, Naseem Shah, Shaheen Shah Afridi, and other PCB officials, were present.

PCB Chairman Mohsin Naqvi expressed confidence that the national cricket team would bring home the T20 World Cup trophy, just as they did in 2009. He said if were up to him, he would have announced a prize of more than $100,000 for the team. He stated that the national cricket team possesses immense talent and will receive additional rewards for their victory.

He plans to travel to the United States to watch the Pakistan-India match. Skipper Babar Azam expressed the hope that the Green Shirts would win the T20 World Cup being played in the United States and the West Indies next month. "In the past also our focus was to bring the trophy, and I hope that we will return with the trophy," Babar said during a press conference at the Gaddafi Stadium here.

PM for strict departmental proceedings against negligent officials over T&T system

ISLAMABAD (APP): Prime Minister Muhammad Shehbaz Sharif on Tuesday directed for initiation of strict departmental proceedings against the officials held responsible in an inquiry report for showing negligence in the enforcement of Track and Trace System (T&T) with flawed planning and inflicting losses to the national economy.

The prime minister chaired a high level meeting over Track and Trace System of the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR), PM Office Media Wing said in a press release.

The system was introduced to monitor production at cigarette manufacturing, fertilizer, sugar and cement industries, identification of counterfeit products and ending of smuggling.

The prime minister observed that due to faulty planning in the system and negligence in its enforcement of the system caused the national economy to suffer.

A report of the inquiry committee formed to probe the issue was presented before the prime minister. The meeting was attended by Federal Ministers including Muhammad Aurangzeb, Ahmad Khan Cheema, Deputy Chairman Planning Commission Jahanzaib Khan, Chairman FBR Malik Amjad Zubair Tiwana and other relevant officials. The members of the inquiry committee Secretary Finance Imdad Bosal, Awais Kundi, Nauman Khalid and Babar Majid Bhatti also attended the meeting.

The prime minister questioned why certain important provisions were neglected with a haste over the enforcement of the significant national project?

According to inquiry report, project director and member operations inland of that period were found guilty of neglect whereas the report also fixed the main responsibility on the subsequent officials working on those posts.

The FBR chairman working during that tenure was also held responsible for the poor administrative supervision.

dred operations are carried out on daily basis.

The DG ISPR categorically said nobody will be allowed to disturb law and order situation in the country. He said the Army Chief has stated that there is no place for terrorists inside Pakistan.

He said it is because of the sacrifices of the security forces personnel and the people that the country is fast heading towards peace.

He said those involved in terrorist activities have no links with the state of Pakistan and Islam.

Referring to the situation on the eastern border, the DG ISPR said Pakistan's civil and military leadership is fully cognizant of the planning being made in India to divert attention from its internal anarchy.

Alluding to the Indian ceasefire violations, the DG ISPR said Pakistan Army has responded in a befitting manner and it will continue to do so in future. He said Pakistan is fully prepared for the defence of its integrity and sovereignty.

The DG ISPR said Pakistan stands by their Kashmiri brothers and sisters and will continue to extend political, diplomatic and moral support to them for their right to self-determination.

He said India is also involved in extra territorial killings of Sikhs. He said there are also evidences of the involvement of India in assassination of people inside Pakistan.

When asked about May 9 incident, the DG ISPR said it is not the case of Pakistan Army, but of the whole Pakistani nation.

Ahmed Sharif Chaudhry emphasized that those involved in the attacks on military installations and disgrace of martyrs' memorials should be brought to justice at the earliest in accordance with the law of the land and the constitution.

He said doing so is also important to ensure that the people have faith in the justice system.

The DG ISPR said there are irrefutable evidences of the involvement of a particular party in the May 9 events. He said the narrative based on falsehood cannot sustain.

The DG ISPR said they have no objection on the formation of a Judicial Commission for investigation into May 9 incidents. He, however, said this Commission then should also probe into the objectives of 2014 sit-in and the attacks on the PTV and parliament.

He stressed it should also be seen as to how the resources of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa were utilized for another onslaught on the federal capital.

The DG ISPR also mentioned the attempts made by a particular party to sabotage Pakistan's deal with the IMF.

Responding to a question, the ISPR Chief said the constitution of Pakistan clearly states that Pakistan's integrity, security and defence cannot be undermined in the name of freedom of expression. He said it also bars from harming Pakistan's foreign relations with friendly countries.

Major General Ahmed Sharif Chaudhry said freedom of expression does not allow ruining moral values of the society, disturbing public order and tarnishing integrity and dignity of the higher judiciary. He hoped that the parliament will go for necessary legislation to check lies, propaganda and fake news.

Replying to another question, Major General Ahmed Sharif Chaudhry made it clear that the armed forces had nothing to do with the recent elections, except to provide a secure environment for the polling. He said armed forces do not work in the form of allegations and counter allegations.

media arose due to ignorance of national import policies and prevailing laws. Wheat procurement was conducted through a legal process where not even a single penny of corruption could be committed.

He regretted the media trial of the caretaker government on the basis of misinformation, which, he said, was due to a lack of knowledge and understanding of laws and procedures pertaining to government affairs.

Regarding the procedure for wheat procurement from abroad, the former prime minister said, "It is carried out under wheat import policies and national laws. The relevant authority issues notifications and holds deliberations on taxation and other matters before final approval."

Pakistan, he said, "produces around 27 million metric tons of wheat annually, with a shortfall of three to four million metric tons, which is addressed through its procurement following a formal legal process."

After the 18th Constitutional Amendment, he said, all the provinces sent their wheat requirement details to the Food Security and Research Department.

He said the Federal Government, based on the recommendations of the Economic Coordination Committee (ECC) and the provinces' needs, "takes a decision regarding wheat procurement". In line with the recommendations of ECC during the PDM (Pakistan Democratic Movement) government, under his command, facilitated the private sector to meet the requirement of ordinary citizens and mitigate the possibility of wheat shortfall in the country, he said while clarifying the "misconception about the wheat import". The SRO for wheat procurement was issued during the PTI government, and the caretakers did not give any special approvals, he reiterated.

For removal of backwardness of the province, release of allocated funds by the federal government was essential and for the public welfare oriented projects, funds could be released for certain projects on priority basis, he added.

The president also underlined the need of outsourcing prospects over Kachhi canal and said that for the completion of projects, public-private partnership system could be evolved. He further proposed construction of dams and supply of water for making the lands cultivable and overcoming the paucity of water in the province by arranging for water supply from Central Asian countries.

The chief minister highlighted the governance, climate change issues and security challenges in the province. He said that due to lack of basic infrastructure and communication network in the province, in the far flung areas, the provision of basic facilities was a real challenge and stressed upon expeditious release of PSDP and other allocated funds for the mega development projects.

The early release of allocated funds could lead to timely completion of public welfare projects in the province, he added. Bugti further said that they were working seriously for maintaining peace in the province and for the future course, holding of negotiations could not be ruled out, adding that agenda in this regard should be reached with consensus at the national level.

During the meeting, cooperation of the federal government was sought over different uplift projects including Burj Azam Khan Dam, Kachhi canal, Hub-Dareji to Dadu road, besides other projects related to Gadani Ship Breaking Yard, Gwadar Port, imparting skills to youth and climate change.

Policy reforms, series of sector specific consultations in offing for CBAM awareness: Romina

ISLAMABAD (APP): Prime Minister's Coordinator on Climate Change, Romina Khurshid Alam on Tuesday said policy reforms, sector specific interventions, series of interactions with public and private stakeholders are in the offing to increase sensitisation on Carbon Border Adjustment Mechanism (CBAM) impacts on the country's export industry. She was addressing the Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI) and German Development Organisation (GIZ) seminar on Energy Transition in the Textile Sector: The way Forward through Electricity Market Reforms and Green Financing.

Romina Khurshid said there is broader consensus on the subject matter and issues related to textile industry whereas market reforms and green financing strategies, detailed interactions and consultations of relevant sectors are in the pipeline.

She added that think tanks and academia are inited at the forum of Ministry of Climate Change and Environmental Coordination to hold enlightened discourse on the matter. "Pakistan has great potential in carbon markets trading. The PM's Committee on Climate Change is focussed on enhancing dialogue on war footing to shift towards green energy, financing and sustainable practices," she added.

The PM's Coordinator highlighted that Pakistan's textile and other industries would face challenges due to CBAM and therefore, the government is increasing discussion to facilitate the process and combat with its lurking risks. The Climate Change Ministry's role was pivotal in this regard and was engaging with Economic Affairs, Commerce, Power, Planning and all other ministries, she added.

Romina said different organisations were working in silos that needed to be collated for a holistic response to the existential threat of climate change.

Naqvi orders crackdown against electricity theft

ISLAMABAD (APP): Federal Minister for Interior Mohsin Naqvi on Tuesday ordered to speed up crackdown to stop over-billing and electricity theft.

He ordered an indiscriminate action should be continued against the officers who burden the citizens through over billing.

Zero tolerance policy on over billing will continue, said Mohsin Naqvi adding that it is absolutely unacceptable to punish citizens for the incompetence and negligence of DISCOs.

He said, it is a priority to give relief to electricity consumers in over-billing.

He also ordered an action be taken against government personnel involved in electricity theft.

The Minister was chairing a meeting at FIA Lahore Zonal Office to review the progress on action against over-billing and electricity thieves.

Mohsin Naqvi reviewed the progress on the instructions given during the last visit.

Director FIA Lahore Sarfraz Vark gave the briefing.

DG FIA Ishaq Jahangir attended the meeting through video link.

PUC launches nationwide reconciliation drive for political stability, national unity: Ashrafi

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Pakistan Ulema Council (PUC) on Tuesday announced the initiation of a comprehensive nationwide reconciliation drive in a bid to foster political stability and national unity.

The PUC Chairman, Hafiz Muhammad Tahir Mehmood Ashrafi, unveiled the decision in a press conference underscoring the critical importance of bridging differences among political and religious factions to propel Pakistan towards progress and prosperity.

Emphasizing the need for concerted efforts, he disclosed that the PUC was initiating a mass contact campaign to mitigate the adverse effects of current polarization and foster a culture of harmony and understanding through dialogue and constructive engagement across the nation.

Ashrafi expressed hope that this initiative would promote peace, tolerance, and national cohesion, transcending ideological and political divides.

By facilitating dialogue and reconciliation, he said the council intended to create a conducive environment for constructive engagement and cooperation among diverse stakeholders.

Ashrafi, issuing a resolute call for justice and unity, said the tragic events of May 9, shook the nation with unrest and violence.

He underscored the necessity of swift trials for the perpetrators to prevent such incidents from recurring in the future.

Ashrafi emphasized the paramount duty of leaders to educate their followers responsibly stressing that no one should be allowed to sow seeds of division between the Pakistan Army and the populace, regardless of the costs involved.

President Zardari's crucial visit to Quetta

President Asif Ali Zardari arrived in Quetta on a three-day visit to Balochistan on Monday. The newly sworn-in Governor Balochistan Shaikh Jaffar Mandokhail, Chief Minister Mir Sarfraz Bugti, provincial ministers and parliamentarians received the president at the airport.

Needless to mention here is that it is the maiden visit of President Zardari to Balochistan after taking over his office.

During the visit, the President was briefed about overall law and order situation in Balochistan. In addition to this, he was also apprised of development projects in the province.

On first leg of his visit, the Chief Minister Mir Sarfraz Bugti and provincial ministers called on President Zardari at the CM House. The provincial ministers included Mir Sadiq Umrani, Ali Madad Jattak, Mir Zahoor Buledi, Sardar Abdur Rehman Kethran, Mir Saleem Khosa, Sardarzada Faisal Jamali, Gazala Gola and Nawab Sanaullah Zehri, a member of the provincial assembly and senior PPP leader.

At the dinner hosted at the CM House, flanked by CM Bugti and Governor Sheikh Jaffar Khan Mandokhail, President Zardari reaffirmed the government's commitment to Balochistan's prosperity terming it as a "priority".

Accentuating the province's "special importance" due to its mineral resources and coastline, the president reassured that Balochistan's barren lands will be made capable of increased agricultural production.

The President Zardari stated the federal government was committed to prioritize development and prosperity in Balochistan. He said that the province was important to the country due to its abundant mineral resources and extensive coastline.

The President pledged efforts to increase agricultural production by irrigating barren lands in Balochistan. He also mentioned the 18th amendment in the country's constitution that empowered provinces and its importance in promoting national development.

Zardari also talked about Balochistan's untapped potential in the oil and gas sector. He stated that modern extraction methods were needed to harness the resources for economic growth.

The President pledged support for low-income families through programmes like the Benazir Income Support Program (BISP) for the country's; least developed and sparsely populated province. He vowed to expand such initiatives to ensure "broader coverage".

Zardari also assured the attendees that maximum efforts would be undertaken for the province's development. He pledged support to the Balochistan government in "creating" development opportunities for its people.

The President also echoed Bugti's statement on the importance of political dialogue in resolving Balochistan's issues.

It may be mentioned here that CM Bugti detailed the significance of Balochistan for the country. Addressing the President, the CM noted that it was the first visit by a President in a long time.

The CM mentioned issues plaguing Zardari's first term as the country's president. He also talked about how granting political autonomy to all four provinces was important in resolving interprovincial issues, especially of Balochistan.

Bugti outlined various challenges confronting his province, including climate change, peace, and governance issues.

He envisioned a "sustainable and green" Balochistan that rested on political reconciliation across Pakistan to address these challenges properly. The government and political circles are expecting much from the President's crucial visit to Quetta. It is generally believed that the President's crucial visit would help resolve the longstanding issues of the province in a big way.

Arifa Noor

It has been almost a year since May 9. In the coming days, much will be said and written about this unfortunate day, its significance and tragedy. There will also be heated discussions about the many individuals accused — imprisoned or not — and the unrepentant PTI.

But as with much else, there will be little serious discussion on how to move forward in a meaningful way, because honesty is rarely possible in public discussions. And a candid discussion would focus on the relationship between the establishment and the PTI and how this impacts the country.

Take the PTI first. Notwithstanding the gloomy predictions about its demise and the quick departures of its stalwarts 12 months ago, the party managed to do well in the elections despite all the odds against it. But now, it seems stuck once again in old and new challenges. Even when in power, the PTI was a noisy organisation with little discipline. In these trying times, this hasn't changed. With limited access to Imran Khan, the party appears to be a headless chicken. And, as old rivalries are maintained in time-honoured PTI tradition, new entrants such as lawyers and the older lot of politicians are also jostling with each other.

Decision-making has become even more chaotic. Dependent on when party leaders can meet Khan and who talks to the media after meeting him, the decisions at times are the famed 'U-turns,' while at others it seems that the entire lot is stuck at a roundabout, unable to locate any exit. Consider the choice of KP finance minister. It seems that the chief minister-designate was able to ignore Khan's instructions because of his personal discomfort.

Or the absolute confusion about who was going to be the party's choice to head the Public Accounts Committee. For weeks, there was no clarity on whether or not Sher Afzal Khan Marwat, a missile who lands as often on the PTI as it does on its rivals, would be the party's choice or someone else. The issue was resolved with the party choosing Sheikh Waqas, according to Dawn, but after much drama, with little logic.

Poor decision-making has been held responsible for the party's misfortunes rather than its run-ins with the establishment. This may not matter in the long run. What is more critical is the party's limited choices. Its popularity is now at a point where it can no longer be denied by anyone — but it comes at a cost. Keeping in mind the mood of the electorate, the PTI will lose support if it reaches an understanding with the current set-up or the establishment. (The PML-N's diminishing support proves this.) But neither can it sustain the stand-off.

Consider the dynamics in KP, where the initial euphoria is giving way to criticism; Ali Amin Gandapur especially, and the party in general, are being accused by workers of being compromised. This has been particularly true of the government's silence in the face of the disappearance of a PTI worker in recent days. Indeed, every small 'instance' of compromise or inaction is being seen as a sign of betrayal — such is the level of emotion.

But without developing a working relationship with the centre or the establishment, how will the party govern? For now, the party has no answers. (Similar pressures are at work in Punjab.) However, this is not just a dilemma for the PTI, but also the establishment, which historically has always engaged with popular forces after confrontation.

This happened with the PPP in the 1980s and the PML-N in the noughties. Many argue it won't be any different this time, though of course the time frame in each of the two cases has been closer to a decade. But that was when the country wasn't in the midst of an intractable economic crisis — a principal reason why the PTI has become the force it is.

Indeed, carrying the burden of an unpopular government as well as the economy is not all that easy for an establishment that has usually been able to lay claim to public support from regions such as Punjab. But this time around, there are no goodies to share to make up for sidelining a popular party; in fact, there is just bad news in the shape of taxes or higher bills. It appears, as the last one year indicates, that the only way to manage such a situation is to use repressive measures on ordinary people, politicians and mainstream and social media.

The problem, however, with an enforced quiet is that it has to be enforced — continuously. Even then, it cannot overcome the lack of legitimacy or support; which is why in the past the establishment has always opted for a 'reset' eventually. In other words, the establishment faces just as difficult a choice as the PTI. If nothing changes, the pendulum will continue to swing in Khan's favour. Consider that before Khan was arrested, there was chatter about how he continued in comfort at the expense of his party and its members. But then, he was arrested and the criticism died down. Now it is worth asking what the price of easing restrictions on Khan will be. Will it be possible to control the public reaction if he is allowed out in public in the near future, even in terms of a simple court appearance? And if there is no ceasefire, how will the establishment manage public anger and expectations, especially as it prepares for the next IMF programme?

That there is realisation of this explains the constant pressure for or discussion of how the political parties need to 'talk'. Doubting Thomases find it hard to believe this stems from the charter of democracy fandom or those who want to cheer on the establishment and the PTI together. A year on, something has to give. Reason demands this, even though it has been in short supply in Pakistan for quite some time. In the process, both the PTI and the establishment will have to pay a price.

Finding political legitimacy

Mosharraf Zaidi

I wrote about the CAR framework last month and posited that governance has become much more challenging because 'capability', 'accountability' and 'responsiveness' have all become compromised.

These qualities have been made even more elusive by the changes in ground realities that have taken place, globally and locally, in how the public discourse is conducted. It doesn't help that Pakistan has a population that keeps growing but an elite whose ego and sense of purpose keep shrinking.

Capability, accountability, and responsiveness don't quite capture the increasingly important issue of legitimacy. Legitimacy, as a concept, has always been relevant to political governance everywhere. In Pakistan, it assumed greater urgency since the eighth of February this year, given the substantial and undeniable discontent that electoral manipulation has produced.

The legitimacy issue seems to be an increasingly burdensome albatross, undermining even the very positive and long-needed efforts being attempted in recent days. When we scan the big governance news items recently, they all seem to have this Achilles' heel.

Change at the FBR, through the placement of two dozen officers on OSD, has been welcomed with scepticism about the intentions of the current FBR chief. Slow but meaningful progress on investments from Saudi Arabia are met with cynicism about the wider geopolitical compromises this may entail. Support for education initiatives like the Daanish schools is responded with questions about the relative cost of these efforts. The cabinet approval for hiring consultants quickly and without PPP rules is seen as the product of conflict of interest ridden players that have found their way into the corridors of power. Every day, even those that are broadly supportive of the need for stable government, are compelled to ask questions that will invariably be seen as undermining political legitimacy.

What is the answer? It isn't as simple as Imran Khan supporters will suggest. It is also not as complicated as the ruling establishment seems intent on making it. Banning social media, setting up a new agency to police the internet, tightening the screws on an already problematic environment of fear and intimidation when it comes to free speech — these are not answers to the challenge of legitimacy. They are all ingredients for deepening the crisis of legitimacy. The big question isn't whether good governance can be achieved this way. It cannot. The big question is whether political legitimacy is an achievable objective for Pakistan's rulers.

What is political legitimacy? One of the useful definitions I found was in a 2006 paper by then Princeton scholar Bruce Gilley. Having then discovered the extremely problematic evolution of Gilley's ideas (including his support for the re-establishment of Western colonialism and his unapologetic pro-Israeli genocide slant), I eschew sharing Gilley's definition.

Instead, perhaps the clearest description is Fabienne Peter's: "Political legitimacy is a virtue of political institutions and of the decisions — about laws, policies, and candidates for political office — made within them". Peter helps frame legitimacy through a Weberian, and non-normative lens, "that a political regime is legitimate means that its participants have certain beliefs or faith ('Legitimitätsglaube') in regard to it: "the basis of every system of authority, and correspondingly of every kind of willingness to obey, is a belief, a belief by virtue of which persons exercising authority are lent prestige".

Another useful way to think about political legitimacy is framed in Peter Stillman's 1974 paper, "Legitimacy is the compatibility of the results of government output with the value patterns of the relevant systems — a government is legitimate when it protects and enhances the values and norms of its citizens, when it preserves and expands their culture and when it behaves itself in foreign affairs".

There is a substantial quantum of literature within political theory and in international development that identifies legitimacy as a vital informant of good governance, especially when dealing with 'fragile states' (Merilee Grindle's "good enough" governance offers valuable perspectives in this regard). There is much less academic discourse and research around the role of political legitimacy in shaping governance from the economists' lens.

A new paper by Imran Arif and Nabamita Dutta published in the Journal of Institutional Economics marks a pioneering effort to correct this gap. In 'Legitimacy of government and governance', the authors examine data from sixty-six countries and try to figure out whether political legitimacy has any systemic and discernible impact on good governance.

The authors explore several interesting themes through their research. They acknowledge for example, that good governance and political legitimacy are mutually self-reinforcing. This is not an immediately obvious point, but it has grave implications for what happens when there is low legitimacy. They also, quite usefully, acknowledge alternative hypotheses about political legitimacy that leads to better governance as potentially pre-cursing the erosion of the rights of minorities (citing libertarian Florida economist Randall Holcombe). FWIW: the authors' research debunks Holcombe's ideas. The overall conclusion of the paper is not shocking: across all 66 countries and through a battery of tests for robustness and taking into account a range of factors that could skew the findings, there is a clear, positive and statistically significant effect of political legitimacy on governance. The research also finds that the effect of legitimacy on governance is enhanced and shaped by the level of trust citizens have in public institutions.

Just how significant are the interactions between political legitimacy and governance outcomes? The research suggests that one standard deviation increase in political legitimacy leads to a one-third of a standard deviation improvement in governance. The authors helpfully put this in perspective by adding real country proxies to these changes. In essence, when you increase the political legitimacy found in Mexico to the level of the political legitimacy found in Estonia, the impact of governance is the same as advancing the quality of governance from what it is in Jordan, to what it is in Latvia or Poland.

Extra baggage

Naeem Sadiq

Undisputedly, the most important, most versatile and most indispensable person in a government office is the naib qasid, often the only moving component of an inert piece of machinery. He is the critical hub, an integral element of a governance system designed for a colonial era. He not only knows the location but also the contents of files and papers that drive and define a government. Naib qasids carry files from one office to another, perform house-keeping, ask visitors to wait, serve tea to their masters, and search, shelf, lose, find, misplace or retrieve files and records — depending upon their mood and motivation.

Using the 'right to information' law, our research, which is spread over a sample of 15 well-known and highly esteemed government organisations, such as National Savings, the Benazir Income Support Programme, the Employees' Old-Age Benefits Institution (EOBI), the Supreme Court and the Wafaqi Mohtasib, yields startling results. First, 23 per cent of the entire government of Pakistan consists of just one category of individuals — often called 'qasids', 'naib qasids' or 'daftaris'. As per the data provided under the right to information law, the Supreme Court (SC) tops this list with 283 (34pc) qasids and naib qasids, out of a total of 833 regular and contingent employees.

Another prominent mention is BISP, that employs 473 qasids out of a total of 2,356 employees. Such governance through naib qasids would be inconceivable in any developed country, where officials must perform their own chores. The study gets yet more overwhelming as it reveals that the employees designated as upper division clerks, lower division clerks or steno typists constitute 26.8pc of the entire government of Pakistan. Although most offices have acquired computers and most senior officers have obtained laptops (at taxpayers' expense), there is no let-up in the demand or number of UDCs and LDCs. One wonders why emails, used by the rest of the world for the last 30 years, are still not an accepted form of official correspondence. Have low skills and high status become our biggest hindrance to progress? Should the conditions of employment not specify that every bureaucrat must carry his own briefcase, drive his own (private) car, clean his own table, receive, respond and file his own mail electronically, make his own tea, etc?

The next mind-boggling segment of employees — 22.7pc of government — sadly comprises chowkidars and private security guards. National Savings, with 1,270 security guards, champions this class, followed by Pakistan Post's 754 guards and BISP's 386 chowkidars. There is also no guilt for cruelty on the part of our esteemed organisations who engage guards through private security companies, not registering them with the EOBI and paying them less than half the minimum legal wage for performing 12-hour duty each day.

From this, we can conclude that 72.5pc of the entire government of Pakistan consists of three categories of employees: qasids/ naib qasids, UDCs/LDCs, and guards/chowkidars. Like ministers, many are inducted on considerations of 'relative', 'friend', 'party', 'clan', etc. Must we not ponder why Pakistan Railways operates with 315 employees per train, as opposed to the Indian Railways' 53, and Japan Railway's 5.9? Why does the SC operate with 833 employees and its British counterpart with 64 employees for around the same number of judges? It is time to admit that only by shedding 70pc of our government workforce will Pakistan see progress.

There are at least two main approaches to reducing the size of this mountain — firstly, by using technology to perform all those functions that can enhance efficiency and convenience. National Savings' latest software, which req-uir-es no citizen to visit a savings centre and to automatically receive profits in a designated bank, is a brilliant example. Resultantly, National Savings can potentially cut down 70pc of its employees and branches. The other approach is to eliminate all that is redundant or ceremonial. Almost all commissions and bureaus (NCHR, NCRC, NCSW, etc.) can be closed and their functions performed by their parent ministries.

Numerous ministries such as health, human rights, religious affairs and overseas Pakistanis could be merged and renamed the 'Ministry for Health & Population'. In this manner, Pakistan could reduce the total number of ministries (and logically the ministers) from 32 to 10. These two approaches ought to be identically emulated by the defence services as well as the provincial governments. Our governance system is dysfunctional and bloated. It exists only to preserve the luxuries of an extractive class. Its dismantling is a prerequisite for the progress of Pakistan.

The four of us, all raised in a Western-oriented, English-medium environment, were confused. We felt sympathy for the citizens of Iran, who had been taken over by the mullahs. We felt fortunate to be citizens of Pakistan, where despite all our democratic shenanigans (Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was on trial but had not been hanged yet), we still had a tolerant government. Forty-five years later, after watching the Iranian armed forces take on the biggest bully in the region, Israel, and scaring it into backing off through guts, technology and a very well thought-out military manoeuvre, I am compelled to change my mind.

The Iranians have shown that they value their self-respect and beliefs more than their worldly comforts. They have not blinked in 45 years against the most dominant country in the world — the US — and its allies, despite having undergone isolation and economic deprivation, and the harassment of Iranian citizens.

Because of their grit and national pride, they have become a self-reliant and proud nation with their own, indigenous industry, both commercial and military. Their military prowess, despite facing sanctions, is creditable. ## The Iranian story

Tasneem Noorani

A few days after the triumphant arrival of Ayatollah Khomeini in Tehran in February 1979, four Pakistani students were having a meal in a suburban restaurant when they were surrounded by Kalashnikov-bearing Iranian Revolutionary Guards, who were inexperienced and more nervous than the students. They were like this because the Shah's ruthless regime had ensured that no one, other than state functionaries, possessed a weapon.

As one of the four students, I recalled the incident at the time of the visit of the Iranian president to Pakistan recently. I was studying in an institution set up by the Harvard Business School, on the request of the Shah, to give Iranians a modern business education in their own country.

The public was so happy when the Shah fled that shops selling sweets ran empty. People, delirious with joy, were out on the streets displaying currency notes with the Shah's picture torn out. Young people were shouting "Shah rafi" (the Shah's left). APCs and tanks, looted from abandoned cantonments, were being driven on the streets of Tehran by euphoric teenagers.

The four of us, all raised in a Western-oriented, English-medium environment, were confused. We felt sympathy for the citizens of Iran, who had been taken over by the mullahs. We felt fortunate to be citizens of Pakistan, where despite all our democratic shenanigans (Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was on trial but had not been hanged yet), we still had a tolerant government. There was nothing equivalent to Iran's secret service Savak, which had its fleet of 'Vigos' to 'fix' and eliminate dissidents. Khomeini's arrival heralded the curbing of civil liberties. For instance, women, many of whom were used to wearing tight jeans and short skirts in public, could now no longer leave their homes without hijab. A photo in the media showing their military high command sitting at the feet of Supreme Leader Ali Khamenei, when he congratulated them on the Israeli operation, felt unreal to a Pakistani.

Despite a domineering Islamic regime, the Iranians' pride in their culture and history is supreme. The Iranian new year, Nowrooz, which is basically a Zoroastrian festival, is still the most important event in the Iranian calendar. The country closes down for three weeks to celebrate it. The celebration of two Eids is hardly notable in this context.

The Islamic government greatly respects citizens' privacy (chador and chardiwari) and believes in the principle that what you do inside your home is your business. I asked an Iranian friend about this contradiction in the perceived harshness of the regime. He said that during the Shah's time, "we used to drink publicly and pray privately; now we pray publicly and drink privately".

People who have travelled to Iran recently talk about a clean and developed country, with good roads, an efficient and modern railway system and huge modern shopping malls. Their literacy level is 89 per cent compared to our 58pc; their expenditure on education is 23pc of the budget, while we spend 11.5pc; on health, they spend 23pc, while we spend 4.3pc. These figures indicate that they prioritise human development. True, Iran has its problems, including corruption, but it still ranks 24 on the Global Corruption Index, while we are at 133rd position.

It is depressing to compare ourselves with our other neighbours too. India and Bangladesh are way ahead of us, economically and in human development indices. Even Afghanistan seems to be better than us in the context of law and order. On the economic front, their currency is stronger and stabler than ours. Four Pakistan rupees is equal to one Afghan.

The reasons for the continued decline of Pakistan are many, but the primary one for me is that the people who control power are not made accountable. While I felt proud as a Pakistani 45 years ago, I am not sure I do anymore.

A game-changer project delayed for two years despite tall promises of PTI leadership

Independent Report PESHAWAR: Being a gateway to the Central Asia Republic (CARs) and landlocked Afghanistan, Peshawar is a unique strategic city of Pakistan where kings, invaders and monarchs had constructed roads and highways for speedy transportation and promotion of trade in a bid to prolong their rule in the subcontinent.

These invaders used the famous Khyber Pass, which is the major trade and business route connecting Pakistan and Afghanistan via Torkham border, and onward the gas rich CARs.

Witnessed the vigour of Kings Sikandar Azam, Mehmood Ghaznavi, Mughal and British army, Khyber Pass' significance has been further enhanced after construction of Rashakai Special Economic Zone (SEZ) on 1000 kanal land in Nowshera district.

PMEN leader and former member national assembly (MNA), Shah G. Gul Afridi told APP that groundbreaking of the project had been delayed for the last two years despite tall promises by the PTI leadership and urged provincial government high ups to inaugurate the project as quickly as possible keeping in view of its enormous benefits.

Designed by National Highway Authority (NHA) and KP Govt, KPEC is financed with about $460.6 million IDA concessional credit from the World Bank and $22.15 million from the government. Khyber Pass Economic Corridor (KPEC) documents has revealed that the World Bank's concessional financing has a maturity of 30 years and an interest rate of 1.25 percent after a 5-year grace period.

SECP proposes enhanced disclosures for Shariah Stock Screening of listed companies

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP) has proposed amendments to the Fourth Schedule of the Companies Act, 2017.

These amendments enhance the list of disclosures made in financial statements of listed companies for Shariah stock screening shares, according to a press release issued here on Tuesday. Listed companies will be required to provide crucial information about their subsidiary companies for Shariah stock screening purposes to align the regulatory framework with market needs for a fair trading environment.

Additionally, the language of the Fourth Schedule has been simplified to bring clarity to the Shariah stock screening of shares to include in Islamic indices maintained by the Pakistan Stock Exchange.

The proposed revisions have resulted from SECP's engagements with stakeholders during a series of Islamic finance sessions. The changes are aimed at enhancing transparency, fostering investor confidence and aiding in informed decision-making.

Pak dairy, beef sectors need to be transformed through precision farming

LAHORE (APP): Pakistan's dairy and beef sectors need to be transformed through precision farming to bring the country at par with the other developed nations of the world.

This was the upshot of the industry experts' input shared at an event that marked the partnership between Cloud Agri Pakistan, with NASNA, an Australian livestock company, one of the leading exporters in live animals, and Denkavit Netherlands, the Dutch global leader in feed for young animals with over 90 years of knowledge and experience in the field of young animals' feed solutions.

The experts were of the view that Pakistan being the 4th largest milk producer in the world and major sub-sectors of agriculture, contributing along with livestock, over 60 percent of value-added agriculture and 11.7 percent of the total GDP, the country's dairy sector faces persistent challenges that hinders its optimal potential. With a population of 240 million people to meet their protein and dairy needs, Pakistan's dairy and beef industry is largely underperforming, which requires huge efforts to improve it, they added.

Dr. Rana Shaikat Hussain, CEO of Cloud Agri Pakistan & Global Business Director of Cloud Agri Group, said, "By joining forces with NASNA and Denkavit, we are not only facilitating the introduction of superior livestock and nutrition solutions but also fostering a platform for knowledge exchange and the implementation of international best practices to Pakistan dairy and beef farmers." The collaboration, he said, is poised to bring unprecedented benefits to the Pakistani dairy and beef sector. NASNA will serve as the exclusive provider of high-quality Australian dairy and beef animals, while Denkavit will supply state-of-the-art calf rearing solutions to meet the diverse needs of Pakistani livestock farmers. By supplying superior cattle breeds from Australia and introducing advanced calf nutrition solutions, the partnership aims to elevate Pakistan's dairy and livestock sectors to global standards going forward. This strategic alignment is set to empower local farmers and stakeholders with the tools and knowledge necessary to enhance the production, improve animal health, and drive overall industry advancement, he maintained. Ms. Henny Fokel de Vries, Dutch Ambassador to Pakistan, hoped that partnership between Dutch and Pakistani company Cloud Agri will lead to developing the Pakistani livestock sector on modern lines. She said over 50 Dutch companies are operating in Pakistan, including in the dairy and agriculture sectors.

She assured her full support for Pakistani and Dutch companies operating in the dairy sector. She said that Pakistan and the Netherlands have been engaged in what she calls historic cooperation in the dairy and livestock sector. As part of this partnership, a comprehensive knowledge-sharing framework will be established to equip farmers with the skills and insights needed to adopt modern farming and livestock management techniques to cater to the increasing demand for dairy and protein needs and to meet the food security challenges as well as to uplift the quality of produce to meet the international standards for export.

Amid Rafah evacuation order, Hamas accepts truce proposal

Monitoring Desk
RAFAH: Hamas said it had accepted a proposal for a truce in the seven-month-old war in Gaza, after Israel told Palestinians in Rafah to evacuate ahead of a long-threatened invasion of the city. The Hamas announcement brought cheering crowds onto the street amid tears of happiness, chants of "Allahu Akbar" (God is greatest) and celebratory shooting in the air. There was no immediate official response from Israel, and its close ally the United States said it was "reviewing" Hamas's response. Hamas in a statement said that its leader Ismail Haniyeh had informed mediators Qatar and Egypt "of Hamas's approval of their proposal regarding a ceasefire agreement".

A senior Hamas official said Israel must now decide whether it accepts or "obstructs" a truce in the Palestinian territory after seven months of war. "The ball is now in the court of Israel, whether it will agree to the ceasefire agreement or obstruct it," the official told AFP, requesting anonymity to discuss the negotiations. Earlier in the day, Israel called on Palestinians to leave eastern Rafah, amid increasing global alarm about the consequences of an Israeli ground invasion of the southern Gaza city bordering Egypt. Stephane Dujarric, spokesman for UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres, condemned the order and said it would be "impossible to carry out safely". The evacuation call followed disagreement between Israel and Hamas over the Palestinian group's demands to end the war, during weekend negotiations in Cairo. Egyptian state-linked media said the talks stalled after a rocket attack claimed by Hamas's armed wing killed four Israeli soldiers on Sunday.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has vowed to send ground troops into Rafah regardless of any truce, defying international concerns. Cairo's foreign ministry warned in a statement of "grave humanitarian risks" for more than one million Gazans sheltering there and urged Israel to "exercise the utmost restraint". US President Joe Biden and Netanyahu spoke and Biden restated "his clear position" against an invasion of Rafah, the White House said. It also said the Israeli premier "agreed to ensure the Kerem Shalom crossing is open for humanitarian assistance for those in need".

Media organisations launch criticism as Israeli cabinet shuts down Al Jazeera's local offices

Monitoring Desk
DOHA: International media organisations and journalists Monday condemned the decision of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's cabinet to shut down the local operations of Qatari-owned TV station Al Jazeera. The Israeli cabinet shut down the network a day ago for as long as its military offensive bombardment in Gaza continues, saying the outlet threatened national security.

Al Jazeera said the move was a "criminal action" and the accusation that the network threatened Israeli security was a "dangerous and ridiculous lie" that put its journalists at risk. "The incitement channel Al Jazeera will be closed in Israel," Netanyahu posted on social media following a unanimous cabinet vote. A government statement said Israel's communications minister signed orders to "act immediately", but at least one lawmaker who supported the closure said Al Jazeera could still try to block it in court. The measure, the statement said, includes closing Al Jazeera's offices in Israel, confiscating broadcast equipment, cutting off the channel from cable and satellite companies and blocking its websites. It did not mention Al Jazeera's Gaza operations.

Several international media organisations slammed the decision of the cabinet. The Foreign Press As

Columbia University cancels graduation ceremony after demonstrations

Monitoring Desk
NEW YORK/AMSTERDAM: In view of the Israeli military offensive unleashed on civilians in Gaza over the last few months, students at institutes of higher education across the globe have been demonstrating in a bid to force their universities to divest and disassociate with groups "enabling the Israeli military occupation and assault on Palestine".

The wave of protests began with an encampment set up by students at Columbia University and soon spread to campuses across the United States. The student-led movement to divest and disassociate from groups with ties to Israel, is now popping up at universities across the globe. The turmoil on campuses has prompted several colleges and universities across the United States to relocate, modify.

Mozambique's ruling party announces Chapo as presidential candidate

Monitoring Desk
MAPUTO: Mozambique's ruling FRELIMO party has announced Daniel Chapo will be its presidential candidate in an election scheduled for October.

FRELIMO has governed the southern African country since gaining independence in 1975 and hopes Chapo will lead the party to another victory in the Oct 9 election.

"The soap opera of speculation is over, including speculation about the third term," President Filipe Nyusi said on state television on Sunday, dismissing the prospect of contesting elections again. "We must all unite around comrade Daniel Francisco Chapo."

India BJP's election videos targeting Muslims and opposition spark outrage

Monitoring Desk
AHMEDABAD: Animated videos shared by Prime Minister Narendra Modi's party targeting the opposition Congress and the Muslim community have evoked complaints and outrage, as the political climate in India heats up midway through its six-week long election.

A set of guidelines mutually adopted by political parties for how they should conduct themselves during the election period prohibits them from creating "mutual hatred" between caste, religious or linguistic groups. Manipulated videos on social media have also become a contentious issue in this election, such as fake videos showing top Bollywood stars criticising the prime minister.

On Monday, the commission warned parties against the misuse of AI tools to create deep fakes and told them not to publish and circulate such videos. It also said parties had been directed to remove such content within three hours of it being brought to their notice. Modi, the face of the Hindu-nationalist BJP, seeking a rare third consecutive term, had focused his campaign largely on his government's performance on economic growth and welfare benefits.

Emirates' CEO kicks off mega travel, tourism exhibition in Dubai

Monitoring Desk
DUBAI: Sheikh Ahmed bin Saeed Al Maktoum, president of the Dubai Civil Aviation Authority and CEO of flag carrier Emirates, has kicked off the mega travel and tourism exhibition event, Arabian Travel Market (ATM) 2024, in Dubai.

A press release from the Dubai government's media office said the "leading global travel and tourism event" is being held at the Dubai World Trade Centre (DWTC) from May 6-9, hosting 2,300 exhibitors from 165 countries in its "largest edition to date" and welcoming some 41,000 attendees. "Policymakers, industry leaders, and travel professionals will gather at the event to explore the theme 'Empowering Innovation: Transforming Travel Through Entrepreneurship'. "The four-day conference agenda of ATM 2024 through May 9 will feature 200 speakers across more than 50 sessions at the DWTC," the press release said. It added that ATM was launched in 1994 with 300 exhibitors and 7,000 trade visitors and had now established itself as a "globally renowned event integrating" multiple travel sectors and verticals from leisure and luxury hospitality to corporate travel. "Exhibitor participation has increased by 26 per cent this year, with growth recorded across all event verticals," the press release said. At the inaugural event, Sheikh Ahmed said that the "massive interest" generated amongst ATM 2024 attendees reaffirmed Dubai's standing as a "major destination".

Taliban say order restored after Afghan opium poppy protests

Monitoring Desk
KABUL: The Afghan Taliban said on Tuesday they have quelled protests in a northern province over security forces' attempts to eradicate opium poppy cultivation which generates income for many impoverished farmers.

Taliban authorities were holding meetings in Badakhshan, spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid said in a Whatsapp message, after several days of protests, in which two people were killed. Mujahid said in a separate statement that a delegation from Kabul, led by the defence chief of staff, would this week travel to Badakhshan to investigate, a rare official acknowledgement of civil disturbance since the Taliban returned to power in 2021.

Since then, they have vowed to restore control over the entire war-torn nation and have at times forcefully broken up protests in urban areas.

Seven killed in attack on Russia's Belgorod region

Monitoring Desk
MOSCOW: Seven people were killed and at least 35 injured in an air attack on Russia's Belgorod region, on the border with Ukraine, on Monday. A Ukrainian drone attack hit vehicles carrying workers in Russia's frontier region, killing six people and injuring 35, the governor said. "Unfortunately, as a result of an explosion, six people died at the scene from their wounds," Vyacheslav Gladkov said. He added that "35 people were wounded" in the attack near the village of Berezyovka. Gladkov said the attack hit two vans transporting employees of a nearby factory as well as a passenger vehicle.

IAEA chief in Iran as concern grows in West over nuclear plan

Monitoring Desk
TEHRAN: UN atomic watchdog chief Rafael Grossi arrived in Iran on Monday, where he is expected to speak at a conference and meet officials for talks on Tehran's nuclear programme.

The visit comes at a time of heightened regional tensions and with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) criticising Iran for lack of cooperation on inspections and other outstanding issues.

News agencies reported Grossi's arrival "at the head of a delegation to participate in the nuclear conference and negotiate with top nuclear and political officials of the country". He met with Foreign Minister Hossein Amir-Abdollahian and is scheduled to meet Atomic Energy Organisation of Iran chief Mohammad Eslami.

Grossi later said in a post on X, formerly Twitter, that at his meeting with the foreign minister he proposed "concrete practical measures" with the "aim of restoring process of confidence building and increasing transparency".

Al Jazeera to pursue legal action 'until the end' over Israel ban

Monitoring Desk
DOHA: Al Jazeera will look to pursue all possible legal action "until the end" to challenge Israel's ban on its operations there, the TV network's news director told AFP in an interview.

"The equipment which was confiscated, the loss that we suffered from stopping our broadcast, all of that is subject matter for legal action," Nagm said. The Israeli government on Sunday said the order was initially valid for 45 days, with the possibility of an extension. Hours later, screens in Israel carrying Al Jazeera's Arabic and English channels went blank, apart from a message in Hebrew saying they had "been suspended in Israel". The shutdown does not apply to the Israeli-occupied West Bank or Gaza Strip, from which Al Jazeera still broadcasts live on Israel's fighting with Hamas. Al Jazeera immediately condemned Israel's decision as "criminal", saying on social media site X that it "violates the human right to access information".

The Qatar-based station was taken off air in Israel after Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's government voted on Sunday to shut it down over its coverage of the Gaza conflict. Speaking on Monday, Al Jazeera English news director Salah Nagm said the network would "follow every legal path", adding: "If there is a possibility of challenging that decision we are going to pursue it until the end." Under a cabinet decision which Netanyahu said was "unanimous", Al Jazeera's Jerusalem offices were shuttered, its equipment confiscated and its team's accreditations pulled.

Turkiye's Erdogan opens Byzantine church to Muslim worshippers

Monitoring Desk
ISTANBUL: Turkiye on Monday reopened a mosque converted from an ancient Orthodox church in Istanbul for Muslim worship, four years after the president ordered its transformation.

Erdogan on Monday declared Kariye Mosque reopened for worship remotely during a ceremony at the presidential palace in the capital, Ankara. A picture from the mosque showed one worshipper wave a Turkish flag before the congregation who performed their prayers on a brick-red colour carpet on Monday afternoon.

The Kariye Mosque was formerly a Byzantine church, then a mosque and then a museum. President Recep Tayyip Erdogan ordered the building to be reconverted into a Muslim place of worship in 2020.

Images also revealed that two mosaics carved into the walls of the ancient church on the right and left sides of the prayer room were covered with curtains. Most of the mosaics and frescos however remained visible to visitors.

His order came followed a similarly controversial ruling on the Unesco-protected Hagia Sophia — a cathedral in Istanbul that was converted into a mosque and then a museum, before becoming a mosque again.

"I had the opportunity to visit the place before and I was initially a little afraid of the work that could have been carried out," said Michel, a French tourist, who would not give his full name. "But ultimately we must recognise that it's well done, that the frescos are accessible to everybody," the 31-year-old researcher said.

The changes were seen as part of Erdogan's efforts to galvanise his more conservative and nationalist supporters. But they have also added to tensions with prelates in both the Orthodox and Catholic churches.

Modi votes as India's marathon election heats up

Monitoring Desk
NEW DELHI: Hindu nationalist Prime Minister Narendra Modi cast his ballot Tuesday in India's ongoing general election after giving several inflammatory campaign speeches accused of targeting minority Muslims.

Turnout so far has dropped significantly compared with the last national poll in 2019, with analysts blaming widespread expectations that Modi will easily win a third term and hotter-than-average temperatures heading into the summer.

Modi walked out of a polling booth early morning in the city of Ahmedabad while holding up a finger marked with indelible ink, flanked by security personnel and cheered by supporters. "In the grand ritual of democracy, everyone contributing their share deserves congratulations," Modi told reporters. "Once again, I tell Indians... to come in huge numbers to vote and celebrate the festival of democracy."

The Indian premier's ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) is expected to win the election convincingly, but since the vote began on April 19.

Paris 2024 gearing up to face unprecedented cybersecurity threat

Monitoring Desk
PARIS: Paris 2024 is getting ready to face an unprecedented challenge in terms of cybersecurity, with organisers expecting huge pressure on the Games this summer.

Organised crime, activists and hostile states will be the main threats during the July 26-August 11 Olympics and the August 28-September 8 Paralympics.

Paris 2024, which has been working hand in hand with the French National Agency for Information Security (ANSSI) and cybersecurity companies Cisco and Eviden are looking to limit the impact of cyber attacks.

"We can't prevent all the attacks, there will not be Games without attacks but we have to limit their impacts on the Olympics," Vincent Strubel, the director general of ANSSI, told reporters. "There are 500 sites, competition venues and local collectives, and we've tested them all."

Strubel is confident that Paris 2024, which will

Wall Street inches higher with more corporate earnings on the way

Monitoring Desk
NEW YORK: Wall Street pointed toward gains early Monday, kicking off a quiet week for economic data but another full slate of corporate earnings reports.

Shares in Spirit Airlines slid 3.5% before the bell after the budget airline came up short on Wall Street's sales and profit targets for the quarter. The company, which hasn't turned a full-year profit since 2019, has been in cost-cutting mode, deferring plane orders and furloughing pilots.

Futures for the S&P 500 and the Dow Jones Industrial Average were both 0.4% higher before the bell. Meat processor Tyson Foods rose 2.6% in premarket after it easily beat analysts' profit expectations even as it fell a hair short of sales forecasts.

GameStop gave back more than 7% in early trading Monday after the so-called "meme stock" had gained nearly more than 45% in the closing days of the past week.

According to a company brochure, MIL is engaged in the "production, testing, R&D and marketing of a comprehensive range of ammunition and explosives for the army, navy, air force and paramilitary forces".

As per The Wire report, on April 18, 2024, the company has again applied for exporting the same products under a repeat order from Israel. Approval for the company's second export to Israel is under consideration by the licensing authorities.

The news comes after it was revealed that the Adani group's drones were exported from India to Israel. In this regard, The Wire in a recent report said that the Hyderabad-based Adani-Elbit Advanced Systems India Ltd.

operate from a cybersecurity operation centre in a location that is being kept secret, will be ready. "The Games are facing an unprecedented level of threat, but we've also done an unprecedented amount of preparation work so I think we're a step ahead of the attackers," he said.

Paris 2024 has hired "ethical hackers" to stress test their systems and is using artificial intelligence to help them ascertain potential threats. "AI helps us make the difference between a nuisance and a catastrophe," said Franz Regu, managing director for IT at Paris 2024.

"We're expecting the number of cybersecurity events to be multiplied by 10 compared to Tokyo [in 2021]." "In terms of cybersecurity, four years is the equivalent of a century," Eric Grefrier, head of partnerships at Cisco, explained. In 2018, a computer virus dubbed "Olympic Destroyer" was used to attack the opening ceremony of the Pyeongchang Winter Games.

Pakistan and China deepen collaboration on CPEC Phase-2

ISLAMABAD (APP): Minister for Planning, Development and Special Initiatives, Ahsan Iqbal on Tuesday expressed the firm commitment of the government to expedite the implementation of China-Pakistan Economic Corridor Project (CPEC) for further strengthening the bilateral relations between both the countries. The minister co-chaired a meeting with the Ambassador of China to Pakistan Jiang Zaidong, Secretary Planning, Awaiz Manzoor Sumra and other senior officials from the ministry also attended the meeting, said a press release issued by the Ministry of Planning.

The discussions focused on further strengthening collaboration on projects related to energy, infrastructure, industry, food security, agriculture, and transportation within the framework of the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC).

Ahsan Iqbal emphasized the importance of deepening the longstanding friendship between the leadership of China and Pakistan and expressed the government's firm commitment to expediting the implementation of CPEC and stated that the upcoming visit of the prime minister to CPEC projects would usher in a new era of cooperation in all sectors.

The minister elaborated on the core objective of CPEC: promoting cooperation in all sectors, including industry, energy, infrastructure, social development, agriculture and regional connectivity within Pakistan. He expressed a desire to enhance cooperation with China through the transfer of modern technology in various sectors, including transportation and agriculture.

He emphasized Pakistan's aim to establish industrial zones for the manufacturing of electric cars in collaboration with China, leveraging Pakistan's competitive advantage to reduce overall production costs and create employment opportunities for Pakistani workers.

Ahsan Iqbal also discussed the upcoming South Asian Games 2025, underlining the importance of comprehensive training programs for Pakistani athletes.

Pakistan pushes for preventing weaponization of outer-space to avert threats to peace

UNITED NATIONS (APP): Pakistan has called for steps to prevent the weaponization of outer space, saying such a course would avert a grave danger to international peace and security.

"The threats to security in and from outer space have escalated sharply in recent years. This is evident from the placement of weapons in space, and its increasing characterization as the next war-fighting frontier in the military policies and doctrines of major powers," Ambassador Muneer Akram told the UN General Assembly on Monday.

The 193-member Assembly was debating Russia's veto in the Security Council last month which blocked a draft resolution aimed at preventing a new extraterrestrial arms race.

Due to the negative Russian vote, the 15-member Council failed to adopt last month's text, which received 13 votes in favour, with China abstaining. The draft resolution was introduced by United States and Japan and co-sponsored by over 60 nations.

In his remarks, Ambassador Akram said that the US-Japan draft resolution rightly recognized that the prevention of an arms race in Outer Space would avert a grave danger for international peace and security; underscored the importance of the Outer Space Treaty; and reiterated that the Geneva-based Conference on Disarmament as the sole multilateral disarmament negotiating forum.

Pakistan, he said, has always maintained a principled position that resolutions on global disarmament issues should be deliberated and concluded in an inclusive and transparent manner within the appropriate forums—the Conference on Disarmament (CD), the UN Disarmament Commission and the First Committee of the UN General Assembly, which deals with disarmament and international security matters.

The Pakistani envoy regretted that there has been no progress on a Treaty to Prevent an Arms Race in Outer Space for over four decades.

"Initially," he said, "some dismissed the possibility of an arms race in outer space.

Govt to introduce pension reforms to lessen burden: Tarar

ISLAMABAD (APP): Minister for Law and Justice Azam Nazeer Tarar on Tuesday said that the government would introduce pension reforms to lessen the burden on economy.

The structural reforms in the institutions were part of government's agenda as per the vision of the Prime Minister, he said, adding that practical steps were need of hour for economic growth.

The minister stated this while addressing a press conference here.

He said that political and economic stability were interconnected, adding that the Parliament should also adopt the pension reforms unanimously.

The Parliament, he said, had introduced first legislation with regard to tax collection. Now it was an internationally admitted fact that only a country with economic stability would progress, he added.

The minister said that a committee had been formed on pension reforms which would view the different proposals regarding it.

He said that the pension reforms would be implemented in every government institution across the board.

Nothing was going on under the carpet, he said, adding that the decisions would be shared with the public.

Power Division demands Rs 130 billion in subsidies to K Electric, AJK

ISLAMABAD (INP): The Power Division, operating under the Ministry of Energy, has urgently demanded the immediate distribution of approximately 130 billion rupees in subsidy payments to K Electric and Azad Jammu and Kashmir. With the financial year drawing to a close, various ministries and divisions have compiled a series of supplementary grants for approval in a meeting of the Economic Coordination Committee (ECC) of the Cabinet, chaired by Federal Finance Minister Muhammad Aurangzeb on Tuesday. According to a local TV, topping the list is the Power Division's request for an advance subsidy release of Rs 70 billion in relation to K Electric's outstanding arrears, followed by a demand for the payment of 55 billion rupees in tariff differential subsidy arrears for Azad Jammu and Kashmir.

Additionally, the Power Division has called for another technical supplementary grant of 2.5 billion rupees.

Interestingly, a supplementary grant of Rs 5.9 billion has also been sought for the erstwhile Earthquake Reconstruction and Rehabilitation Authority (ERRA). Furthermore, the ECC will review a summary for an additional grant payment of 4.8 billion rupees to the Pakistan Atomic Energy Commission. The ECC will also deliberate on a summary from the National Food Security Ministry, proposing an increase in the wheat procurement.

UK police close Shahzad acid attack probe for finding no suspects: Report

ISLAMABAD (APP): The UK police have shut down a probe into a reported acid attack on former Assets Recovery Unit (ARU) head Shahzad Akbar after finding no suspects during an around six-month-long investigation, according to a media report published Tuesday.

"We have explored all lines of enquiry and have not been able to identify any suspects," the report quoted a police source linked with counter-terrorism policing.

Calling it an extremely complex investigation, the Hertfordshire Constabulary said, "Since November, officers have been working hard to try and trace those involved. On this occasion, we have explored all lines of enquiry and have not been able to identify any suspects. Incidents of this nature are thankfully rare in Hertfordshire and the safeguarding of any victim remains our priority. Should any new information come to light, we will act on this accordingly." The media report also quoted an intelligence source confirming that the investigation has been closed after no suspects were found during the "dedicated investigation" marking the review of several hours of footage including the entry and exit points of the local area.
