Utility Stores concern

There can be little argument with the fact that many white elephants in the extensive stable of state-owned enterprises need to be privatised, as they are a huge burden on the taxpayer.

Yet some SOEs, such as the Utility Stores Corporation, although being run inefficiently, provide lifelines to millions of low-income Pakistanis in the form of subsidised groceries. In this context, reports that the state is thinking of winding up USC operations have caused concern. On Friday, addressing lawmakers at a meeting of the Senate Standing Committee on Industries and Production, the relevant secretary said that the state wanted to "get out of non-essential businesses", and that the administration had decided on the closure of the USC. He added that the stores' employees would be transferred elsewhere. However, the next day, the government appeared to backtrack on the decision, as the industries minister said that the government would be merely 'restructuring' the Utility Stores.

The USC is no model organisation. For years, the stores have been plagued by reports of corruption and mismanagement. Embezzlement to the tune of millions of rupees has been reported, while in 2021 the AGP unearthed financial irregularities in the USC worth billions. Furthermore, consumers have complained of substandard merchandise being sold at the stores, while USC staff have been accused of vending subsidised products in the open market.

However, despite these glaring malpractices, it is also a fact that millions of low-income consumers depend on the stores for groceries at prices below market rates. In a country where price-gouging and black-marketing are common, and state regulation of the market to prevent consumer exploitation by unscrupulous traders is extremely weak, the Utility Stores have provided some relief. Lines of consumers outside the stores in cities across Pakistan are proof of this, especially during periods such as the month of Ramazan, when traders tend to jack up prices of essentials.

The state needs to clarify what restructuring it plans to carry out. The Senate committee was told that "alternative arrangements" would be made, including providing cash transfers to citizens. In these times of raging inflation, low-income citizens need to be protected from the ravages of the market. If the USC is restructured, how will the state ensure that the poor consumers are not fleeced. A workable plan, therefore, is required that details how the interests of consumers will be protected while the state disassociates itself from the USC. The cash-transfer plan might work if funds are remitted to low-income households in a transparent manner. The Benazir Income Support Programme can serve as a database for this purpose.

Moreover, the state needs to improve its price-checking capabilities so that consumers who buy from the open market are not fleeced.

The way she wore

Muna Khan

On the day I sat down to write this piece about a PTI leader's objection to a woman's clothing, this paper's front page carried a photograph of doctors at Ganga Ram hospital protesting the administration's attempts to bury the alleged rape of a five-year-old girl. A member of the janitorial staff in Lahore has been arrested. According to the hospital's medical superintendent, the janitor "touched" the girl at 2am and was apprehended after she made a lot of noise. Young doctors, however, tell a different story of the girl's screams during the assault which alerted patients' attendants who helped nab the alleged rapist.

I wonder what the five-year-old girl was wearing as she slept with her mother in the hospital before she was attacked. I wonder what the mother was wearing.

A woman's clothes are responsible for all ills in society — she will be molested or raped or killed whether she is in aam shalwar kameez or covered head to toe or in a shroud in her grave. Her body is up for grabs the moment she steps out of her home, for whatever reason — to study, work, buy groceries etc. A woman's body is the topic of conversation whether she is being stripped of her right to wear the hijab in one country or forced into wearing one in another.

I bring up clothing because of PTI lawmaker Iqbal Afridi's recent comments about the "inappropriate" clothing worn by a woman executive at a power division's committee hearing. After the high-level executive gave her presentation and left the room, Afridi said she should not have attended the meeting in such an outfit and suggested devising a standard operating procedure for women's clothing.

My first thought was to wonder what she could have possibly worn to this meeting until I stopped myself. It isn't about what she was or wasn't wearing. No man should police a woman's body. When he does so, he dehumanises her and allows others to disrespect her too. Men fault women for their clothing which arms the 'she was asking for it' brigade. This is simply wrong.

Incidentally, the chair of the committee apologised for the incident but to my knowledge so far, Afridi hasn't. Neither has anyone from the party, including its women supporters, distanced themselves from his inappropriate remark. This partisanship is a real hurdle to progress in society. While elected representatives have come together to pass laws against sexual crimes, it is not enough. As this paper noted some months ago, "over 80 per cent of suspected sex offenders in the country are acquitted because of deficient investigation, weak prosecution, out-of-court settlements and pending cases in the lower courts."

Data about women in this country make for a depressing read. Pakistan was ranked 145th out of 146 countries in the World Economic Forum's 2024 Global Gender Gap Index, a drop from 142 in the previous year. At least 10,201 cases of violence against women were registered last year, according to a report in this paper in March. This was up by 14.5pc from the previous year.

Lawmakers' statements matter more against this backdrop. Men have policed women since forever but when they prioritise it over intelligence, skills and competence, it becomes problematic. Men cannot decide what is appropriate for women to wear and women must stand up to such bullies.

Perhaps a great example of challenging the police came in April when YouTuber Shaaila Khan shut down her interviewee who said the problem in the country was that women had strayed from Islamic values and then he placed a dupatta on her. She immediately removed it and asked "why does your version of Islam begin and end with a dupatta" before schooling him further on disrespecting her space, touching her without her permission and rejecting him calling her his sister. The best bit was when another woman spoke up in her support, saying Shaaila had the right to dress as she wanted. This was a great example of how even one person's support gives a woman courage and conviction knowing she is not alone.

Oh to see any collective action in parliament, where many women's clothing or appearance have also been the subject of censure or ridicule. Imagine if women parliamentarians ignored party positions and came together to say we will not work until this rapist is held accountable, this harasser is arrested for his crime, this man is held accountable for promoting rape culture and so forth. But women leaders seem to enforce patriarchal values in parliament, perhaps because they don't want to upset leadership and lose their seats. This is most disappointing. The five-year-old girl deserves more than our sympathy.

She must know she has advocates beyond young doctors who want to do right by her. -- Courtesy Dawn

Indo-US ties

Aizaz Ahmad Chaudhry

In the first 50 years of its existence as an independent state, India had uneasy ties with the US. India preferred in those years a close partnership with the Soviet Union. Since the dawn of the 21st century, however, India's relationship with the US has morphed into a strategic partnership, with unprecedented levels of politico-military cooperation. The primary dynamic behind this upswing is the US competition with China, a rising economic and military power. The US would like to see India as a counterweight to China, and has engaged it in its Indo-Pacific strategy, the Quad, and similar initiatives that are seemingly aimed at containing the further rise of China.

The Indo-US strategic partnership covers a broad range of areas of cooperation. Notably, the US is India's largest trading partner in goods and services, whose value has grown 10 times since 2000, and the third largest source of FDI for India. Americans of Indian origin have integrated well into American society, and are occupying important positions in the political, economic and technology domains. The relationship enjoys bipartisan support in the US Congress, where India is viewed as a fellow democracy. The India Caucus in the US Congress has over 150 members.

What has further cemented Indo-US ties is a consistent rise in the economic profile of India, which has come a long way from an inward-looking economy, facing a serious balance-of-payments crisis in 1991 to a broadly liberal economy, the fifth largest in 2024, with aspirations to become the third largest in the near term. India has also surpassed China to become the world's most populous country and emerged as a lucrative market for the US-led West. Its foreign currency reserves exceed $650 billion.

With increased wealth at its disposal, India is currently the fourth largest military spender. Its defence cooperation with the US is multifaceted, and includes a growing number of joint military exercises. Defence procurements from the US are also increasing, and major US-origin platforms are now in India's use. The two countries have signed a series of defence agreements to pave the way for access to each other's logistics, encrypted communications, geospatial intelligence, and fast-track technology exchange. During Prime Minister Narendra Modi's 2023 visit to the US, Washington agreed to the co-production of F-414 jet engines, including significant technology transfer for India's indigenous aircraft manufacturing capabilities, and an agreement to supply India with advanced drones to enhance its intel and operational capabilities.

However, the US has serious concerns about the relationship. According to the Stimson Centre, there are hurdles to taking cooperation to the next level. Firstly, India's capacity to absorb foreign technology faces many legal, coordination, and procedural issues. Secondly, the US is 'unsure' of India's political will to deter China in the Western Pacific, because India's priority seems to be the Indian Ocean region.

Thirdly, India has not blocked its trade and investment ties with China. Fourthly, Washington is deeply concerned over New Delhi's close relations with Moscow and its independent stance on Ukraine and the purchase of Russian oil. Fifthly, India is teaming up with BRICS to explore trade in currencies other than the dollar. Sixthly, the US has concerns over India's policy of persecuting religious minorities and sending operatives to assassinate opponents on foreign soil.

This is not to suggest that the US is having second thoughts about its relationship with India. In fact, it is going out of its way to ignore the Indian leadership's tendency to assert India's 'strategic autonomy'. Although the American ambassador to India was blunt in challenging the use of the term 'strategic autonomy', his government did waive the CAATSA (Countering America's Adversaries through Sanctions Act) for India to let it buy a missile system from Russia.

Last month, Senator Marco Rubio introduced a bill in Congress calling for treating India like Japan, Israel, South Korea and Nato members, in terms of sharing advanced weaponry with it. The bill was blatantly anti-China and also echoed the Indian view of Pakistan.

The US tilt raises deep security concerns for Pakistan as it encourages the Indian leadership to act as a net security provider, ie, hegemon, in South Asia. Washington tends to view Islamabad from the lens of Sino-Pak ties, and thus maintains minimal contact with it.

It is clear that whoever wins the US presidential elections in November will continue efforts to strengthen Indo-US ties, and would be unlikely to change the low-profile trajectory of Pak-US relations, which might oblige Pakistan to explore other options. -- Courtesy Dawn

Speakers point out Current agreements with IPPs as hindrance to economic progress

ISLAMABAD (APP): Speakers at an in-house session on Independent Power Producers (IPPs) and Capacity Payment Issues in the Power Sector on Sunday pointed out current agreements with IPPs as a hindrance to economic progress of the country.

The Islamabad Policy Research Institute (IPRI) recently hosted a Roundtable Conference on "Independent Power Producers (IPPs) and the Capacity Payment Issues in the Power Sector."

The speakers at the event included Ambassador @ Inamul Haque; Former Caretaker Federal Minister for Commerce, Industries, and Production, Dr Gohar Ejaz; CEO of CPPA, Rihan Akhter; Former Chairman NDMA, Maj General Asghar Nawaz; Former SAPM CPEC, Khalid

Mansoor; Senior Partner RIAA Barker Gillette, Husnain Naqvi; Partner Orrdignam & Co., Shahid Raza; CEO Attock Oil, Adil Khattak and GM WAPDA Irfan Rizvi, a news release said.

The discussion highlighted the challenges posed by Pakistan's current energy policies, particularly the implications of the existing tariff structure is unsustainable and burdensome for the economy. The need for a comprehensive review of these tariffs was emphasized, noting that the high cost of electricity is stifling economic growth and making Pakistan's exports less competitive on the global stage.

The conversation also addressed Pakistan's continued reliance on coal power plants, a practice that has been slowly reduced in various countries. Some speakers strongly advocated for the retirement of these plants, arguing that they are economically unviable in the long term. It was highlighted that natural gas should also not be sold in Pakistan, unless absolutely necessary. A significant portion of the discussion focused on the role of IPPs in Pakistan's energy sector.

The panellists critically examined the capacity payments being made to these producers.

These payments, they argued, have placed a considerable strain on the national economy, particularly by inflating energy costs and reducing the competitiveness of Pakistani goods in the international market.

Hamas negotiators in Cairo; 50 killed in Israeli strikes on Gaza

Monitoring Desk
CAIRO: Hamas said its negotiators arrived in Cairo on Saturday to hear about the latest round of Gaza ceasefire talks from mediators after the UN reported badly worsening humanitarian conditions, with malnutrition soaring and polio discovered.

Israeli military strikes across Gaza killed 50 people on Saturday, Palestinian health authorities said. Victims of bombings over the past 48 hours remain lying on roads where fighting continues or trapped under rubble, the authorities said.

Meanwhile, the Israeli military said on Saturday that three reserve were killed in Gaza Strip the previous day.

The officers, two major generals and a lieutenant colonel, were killed in central Gaza, the military said.

The latest deaths bring the military's losses in Gaza to 338 since it launched a ground offensive in the Palestinian territory on Oct 27.

Months of on-off talks have so far failed to produce a breakthrough to end Israel's devastating bombardment of Gaza.

Israeli negotiators were in Cairo on Thursday to meet mediators from the United States, which has presented a "bridging proposal" aimed at resolving continued disputes, focused on Israel's presence in strategic areas of Gaza.

But there was no sign of any breakthrough on key sticking points, including Israel's insistence that it must retain control of the Philadelphi Corridor, on the border between Gaza and Egypt.

Hamas has accused Israel of going back on issues it had previously agreed to in the talks. The group says the United States is not mediating in good faith.

In Israel, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has locked horns with ceasefire negotiators over his insistence that Israel will not pull out of the so-called Philadelphi Corridor in the south of the Gaza Strip, a person with knowledge of the talks said.

The Philadelphi Corridor, along the border with Egypt, and the Netzarim Corridor cutting across the middle of the Gaza Strip, have been two of the main sticking points in talks backed by Egypt, Qatar and the United States.

Netanyahu has repeatedly insisted that Israel will not give up control of the Philadelphi Corridor, accusing Hamas of smuggling weapons and fighters across the border with Egypt.

He has also said Israel must maintain checkpoints in the Netzarim Corridor to stop the "movement of Hamas fighters from southern Gaza into the north".

Ukraine marks 33rd Independence Day anniversary as war against Russia reaches 30-month milestone

Monitoring Desk
KYIV: A somber atmosphere pervaded Ukraine's 33rd Independence Day on Saturday, as the nation's fight to repel Russia's full-scale invasion reached a 30-month milestone. No fireworks, parades or concerts were planned and instead Ukrainians marked the day with commemorations for civilians and soldiers killed in the war. Ukrainians flooded social media with messages of gratitude and support, greeting each other and thanking the soldiers on the front lines. In the outpouring of unity, there's a shared acknowledgment that the two-and-a-half years have been tough, with fatigue increasingly setting in.

"Independence is the silence we experience when we lose our people," President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said to the nation. "Independence descends into the shelter during an air raid, only to endure and rise again and again to tell the enemy.

Egypt warns visiting US general on Lebanon risk

CAIRO: Egyptian President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi warned America's top general during a meeting on Sunday of the dangers of a major conflict in Lebanon.

US Air Force General C.Q. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived in Egypt hours after a significant missile exchange between Israel and Lebanese Hezbollah. Hezbollah launched hundreds of rockets and drones at Israel and Israel said it struck Lebanon with about 100 jets to thwart a bigger attack, in one of the largest clashes in more than 10 months of border warfare.

Indian fence sparks border tension with Bangladesh

Monitoring Desk
KOLKATA: Security forces from India and Bangladesh had a tense confrontation this week over the construction of a fence supposedly meant to keep cattle from straying over their shared border, officials said on Saturday.

Relations between both countries are fragile after the August 5 overthrow of autocratic Bangladeshi ex-premier Sheikh Hasina, who is now in exile in India after a student-led uprising toppled her.

Hasina's biggest patron and benefactor and many Bangladeshis have since been openly critical of their bigger and more powerful neighbour for backing her 15-year rule.

The latest dispute arose on Thursday, when India's Border Security Force (BSF) claimed they were stopped from erecting the fence by their Bangladeshi counterparts.

"Tension flared up after Bangladesh border guards sought to block the building of a cattle fence," BSF deputy inspector general A. K. Arya said.

China, Philippines clash in South China Sea despite efforts to rebuild trust

Monitoring Desk
MANILA: The Philippines and China clashed in disputed waters of the South China Sea on Sunday over what Manila said was a resupply mission for fishermen, the latest in a series of sea and air confrontations in the strategic waterway.

The incident overshadows efforts by both nations to rebuild trust and better manage disputes after months of confrontations, including a violent clash in June, in which a Filipino sailor lost a finger.

The Philippines on Sunday accused China of "aggressive and dangerous maneuvers" to block the resupply mission. China's coast guard, meanwhile, said it had taken "control measures" against a vessel that had "illegally" entered the waters and repeatedly dangerously approached Chinese ships. In the incident near the Sabina Shoal, the Philippine South China Sea task force said Chinese vessels rammed and used water cannons against a Philippine Bureau of Fisheries ship transporting food, fuel, and medical supplies for Filipino fishermen.

For its part, the Chinese coast guard said the Philippine ship "ignored repeated serious warnings and deliberately approached and rammed" China's law enforcement boat, resulting in a collision. It added that responsibility for the collision lies entirely on the Philippine side. China asserts sovereignty over nearly all of the South China Sea, including areas claimed by the Philippines, Taiwan, Malaysia, Indonesia, Vietnam and Brunei.

US expands area in Mexico to apply for border asylum appointments, hoping to slow push north

Monitoring Desk
CIUDAD HIDALGO: As soon as she stepped onto Mexican soil this week, Venezuelan migrant Yuri Carolina Meléndez downloaded the U.S. government's app to apply for asylum appointments.

The CBP One app has been around, but as of Friday migrants in Mexico's southernmost states bordering Guatemala will be able to apply for appointments. Previously, they had to be in central or northern Mexico.

"I have to wait to see if it really works," the woman said while resting under a tree with her 16- and 18-year-old daughters along a border highway leading to the city of Tapachula this week.

Mexico has been asking the U.S. to expand the app's access to the south in an attempt to relieve the pressure migrants feel to continue north to at least Mexico City. In recent years, the Mexican government has tried to contain migrants in the south farther from the U.S. border, but the lack of work opportunities and housing in southern cities like Tapachula have pushed migrants north.

Mexico hopes that if migrants can wait for their appointments in the south they might not risk getting snagged by authorities without papers or by organized crime groups that prey on migrants travelling north. With an appointment, they could, in theory, move without interference. US ambassador to Mexico calls proposed judicial overhaul a democracy "risk" and economic threat Germin Alemán, a 31-year-old from Honduras travelling with his wife and three children, planned to register as soon as they reached Tapachula.

"We're going to apply here, we're going to wait for the appointment," he said as they walked from the border toward Tapachula.

Others, however, still felt the pressure to get farther north.

Israel stages heavy airstrikes on Lebanon after Hezbollah attack over slain top commander

Monitoring Desk
JERUSALEM: Israel launched a wave of airstrikes across southern Lebanon early Sunday in what it said was a pre-emptive strike on Hezbollah, as the group said it had launched hundreds of rockets and drones to avenge the killing of one of its top commanders last month.

The heavy exchange of fire threatened to trigger an all-out war that could draw in the United States, Iran and other groups across the region. It could also torpedo efforts to forge a cease-fire in Gaza, where Israel has been at war with the Palestinian group Hamas, an ally of Hezbollah, for over 10 months.

The Israeli military said Hezbollah was planning to launch a heavy barrage of rockets and missiles toward Israel. Soon after, Hezbollah announced it had launched an attack on Israeli military positions as an initial response to the killing of Foad Shukur, one of its founders, in an Israeli airstrike in Beirut last month. The attacks came as Egypt hosted a new round of talks aimed at ending the Israel-Hamas war. Hezbollah said it will halt the fighting if there is a cease-fire in Gaza. Iran supports both groups as well as fighters in Syria, Iraq and Yemen who might join any larger conflict.

Air raid sirens were reported throughout northern Israel, and Israel's Ben-Gurion international airport diverted incoming flights and delayed take-offs for a time.

Ji urges PML-N, PPP to tackle IPPs or face consequences

LAHORE (INP): Amir Jamaat-e-Islami's Hafiz Naem ur Rehman, has issued a stern warning to the ruling Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) and its ally, the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP), declaring that they have 28 days to address issues with Independent Power Producers (IPPs) or face serious repercussions.

Speaking at a press conference in Mansura, Hafiz Naem criticized political parties for engaging in self-serving and interest-based politics, while neglecting critical issues like electricity and gas bills. He accused the parties of focusing on personal and political gain rather than addressing public concerns.

Naem highlighted the financial burden imposed on the public, revealing that the government had allocated 2 trillion rupees to IPPs without generating electricity. He called for a nationwide strike on August 28, supported by the business community, and criticized the government's tax relief to IPPs while ordinary citizens face escalating taxes.

He also condemned the contracts with IPPs, alleging that agreements were made under false pretenses and that those responsible should be held accountable. Naem argued that the elimination of IPPs favored by the Sharif family could significantly reduce electricity costs. Further, he addressed the issue of corruption, citing a Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) report that exposed 1.2 trillion rupees in annual corruption, with tax evasion and bribery undermining the tax system. Naem drew a parallel with the situation in Bangladesh, mentioning the historical persecution faced by Jamaat-e-Islami there, and emphasized the party's enduring role in Pakistan's political landscape since its pre-independence days.

He concluded by asserting that Jamaat-e-Islami's contributions to national defense, legal reforms, and public service are well-documented.
