'Don't lecture us, fix your own domestic problems,' Pakistan to Afghanistan

ISLAMABAD (INP): Pakistan on Monday categorically rejected a statement by the Afghan foreign ministry regarding the political situation in the country, asking the Afghan interim government (AIG) to focus on fixing its own domestic problems instead of lecturing a democratic country.

In a statement today, Foreign Office spokesperson Muntaz Zahra Baloch rejected the "frivolous" statement made by the spokesperson of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Afghanistan on Sunday calling it an "unacceptable" and "deplorable" interference in the domestic affairs of Pakistan.

"Instead of lecturing a democratic country, the AIG should focus on fixing its own domestic problems; prioritize inclusivity; and be responsive to needs and aspirations of its own people including the right to education for women and girls rather than curtailing their rights through misguided interpretation of religion," the spokesperson said.

She said the AIG should also deliver on the commitments given to the international community by denying space to terror groups which were seriously threatening peace and security in the neighbouring countries; and by preventing Afghanistan from becoming once again the centre of global terrorism.

A bloody year

A year after Hamas and other Palestinian fighters launched an unprecedented attack on Israel, the Middle East stands at the precipice of a wider, and potentially catastrophic war.

The Oct 7, 2023, events were a watershed moment in this region's turbulent history, comparable to the two intifadas or the various Arab-Israeli wars. Many in the West have pushed the simplistic and dangerous narrative blaming the Palestinian side for sparking the violence, and attracting the barbaric Israeli backlash that has few parallels in modern history.

But they forget that the suffering and humiliation of the Palestinian people predates Oct 7, and can be traced back to the Nakba in 1948, and the earlier Zionist colonisation of historical Palestine. Over the decades, the Israelis have killed and pillaged the Palestinian people with reckless abandon, and what happened in October last year was akin to an explosion of volcanic anger from a population that had been brought to its knees through a cruel siege. Using the Oct 7 attacks as an excuse to wage endless aggression on the region, Israel has crossed all red lines — not that it greatly respected the laws of war in earlier conflicts. It has turned Gaza into a graveyard, slaughtering nearly 42,000 people to date. Hospitals, schools and refugee camps have all been turned into a grim mix of blood and rubble, as Israel applies medieval methods of violence to this small strip of land.

The apparent goal at the start of the conflict was the elimination of Hamas and the repatriation of Israeli hostages; one of the world's best-armed militaries — amply supported by the US and many European states — has miserably failed on both these counts.

Along with Gaza, Tel Aviv has set its sights on Lebanon, again supposedly to destroy Hezbollah. But while the Lebanese armed group has been severely pounded, its fighters continue to resist the Israeli invaders. Meanwhile, Lebanon has said that over 2,000 people have been killed in Israeli violence over the last year. Going by UN official Francesca Albanese's sharp observation, for Israel "there are no civilians" in Palestine and Lebanon.

Along with highlighting Israeli barbarity, the post-Oct 7 scenario has exposed the hypocrisy of the Western bloc, and the paralysis of Muslim states. The West loves to hold forth on protecting human rights, but perhaps to these states the people of Gaza and Lebanon are sub-human.

The Islamic 'fraternity', meanwhile, has refused to take any meaningful action against Israel and its supporters as the Zionist state continues its genocidal campaigns.

Today, thanks to Israeli aggression, and Western appeasement, the Middle East could be consumed by an immense conflagration, especially if Tel Aviv strikes Iran. Meanwhile, the core issue of Palestinian freedom has been all but eclipsed in the fog of war.

Genocide in Gaza

Muhammad Ali Siddiqi

The motto of the Israeli Defence (IDF), according to its website, is: "Defence is our mission, security is our goal." One wonders what the connotations of the original in Hebrew are.

Israel is the one country in the world where rivers of civilian blood do not stir the rulers' conscience. There is a reason why. It wants the world to know what matters is Israel's survival. It will pursue this aim fanatically. If in the process people, communities and countries enter a vegetative state, that is not Israel's concern. Astonishingly, the world has surrendered to Israel's 'right' to target non-combatants as its official policy. Visualise, for a minute, the horrific number of civilian casualties when the Likud government attacked Khan Yunis on Dec 1 using air power, destroying 50 apartment buildings bustling with life.

Defending one's country is the right of every state, but this right is exercised within the framework of accepted international laws and usage. Israel has no concept of such restraint in theory or practice. That is one reason why we do not hear formal regrets from Tel Aviv even when civilians are killed by Israeli fire.

In fact, IDF unleashes its fire on hospitals, schools and temporary shelters notified in advance, and gets away with these crimes. The only condemnation comes from UN Secretary General António Guterres and occasionally the International Court of Justice, as well as organisations such as Reporters without Borders, Human Rights Watch, etc.

Collectively, the Jewish people haven't forgotten the trauma of their nearly 2,000 years in Europe. Despite the relief provided by modern age, their persecution continued well into the 20th century — Russian pogroms and Nazi gas chambers. These memories, besides their expulsion from Palestine in AD 70, made them cling to one idea — never again! Israeli policies are guided by this raison d'être.

A list of the civilian targets IDF has chosen to attack since the Hamas offensive of Oct 7 last year will be incomplete. Less than a fortnight after the Hamas offensive on Oct 7, 2023, Israeli bombing hit the Church of Saint Porphyrius, where 500 people were sheltering. On Nov 8, Israel flattened a Khan Yunis mosque named after the great Muslim general Khalid bin Walid. The number of mosques destroyed in November was 60, while December 2023 saw Gaza's Great Mosque pulverised. Other mosques hit included the Great Omari Mosque in Gaza City, Sayed al-Hashim, Othman bin Qashqar, Katib al-Wilaya, Al-Bukhari, Khalil Al-Rahman, Al-Ansar, Ahmed Yassin (at Al-Shati refugee camp in Gaza City) and the Al Amin Muhammad mosque at Khan Yunis. The list is endless.

Among the churches hit were the Holy Family Church, the Byzantine Church of Jabalia and St Hilarion Monastery.

In his remarkable book My People, one-time Israeli foreign minister and scholar of Arabic and Hebrew Abba Eban, calls the Jewish people's stay in the Arab-Turkish world their golden period. Obviously, the purpose behind exhibiting the carnage was to give a clear message to the world: 'this is what we do to our enemies. Is there anyone who can stop us?' There is no one.

There is a long list of Muslim and Christian religious sites destroyed by Israel; the minimum number of mosques destroyed is 378. The BBC has confirmed 72 incidents of mosques being damaged or destroyed.

Dangerous trap

Zarrar Khuhro

Last week an unusual press conference took place at the National Press Club in Islamabad. Held by the parents and relatives of youth who are languishing in jail on charges of having posted and/or shared blasphemous content online, the speakers called for the federal government to constitute an inquiry commission to probe into the activities of the 'blasphemy business group,' that they claim had entrapped their loved ones in false cases.

The existence of such a group isn't a figment of their imagination or an attempt to shield their loved ones from consequences; the term originates from a report prepared by the special branch of the Punjab Police.

In it, the special branch accuses this group of "trapping" young people in blasphemy cases in an "organised manner". This gang is, as per the special branch, the complainant in about 90 per cent of such cases reported to and registered by the FIA and the vast majority of those entrapped are Muslim boys and girls in their 20s or even younger, and who invariably hail from poor or lower-middle class families.

Several hundreds of these young people are languishing in jails across Pakistan.

Typically, the process starts by setting up Facebook accounts and WhatsApp groups which purport to be discussion forums for religious affairs. Invitations to join such groups are then sent to the targeted youth, with the invite usually coming from the account of a female gang member.

Up until here it all sounds innocent enough, but what follows is anything but: in one case, related by the father of one of the victims, his son was contacted by a woman who started an online relationship with him before sending him some objectionable content. When he questioned her, she claimed her phone had been hacked and asked him to send her the material she had posted so she would know what he was talking about. Once he did so, his father reports, the FIA showed up to arrest him a few hours later on the charge of disseminating blasphemous content.

Similar stories could be heard from all the 40 or so families who participated in the press conference, almost all of whom point out that the FIA was ready to swing into action against their loved ones in record time, which speaks to the possible complicity of at least some of its officials in this entire case of entrapment.

As for what motivates this group, the report points to extortion and blackmail as possible objectives and recommends that the FIA launch a probe against this gang and conduct forensic examinations of the mobile phones of the complainants.

Disturbingly but perhaps unsurprisingly, the press conference got little attention in our national media (I have seen no reports on TV and only one in print) and even the original special branch report was only covered by the independent media outlet FactFocus.

More disturbingly, though unsurprisingly, even though the report was sent to the FIA, the chief secretary Punjab and also the chief minister Punjab's secretary in January this year, no action at all has been taken.

In just the last few months we have seen no less than four killings in the name of blasphemy. In May, Nazir Masih of Sargodha was accused of blasphemy and badly beaten by a mob. While he was rescued by police, he later succumbed to his injuries.

In June, Muhammad Ismail, a tourist in Swat, was accused of desecrating holy verses and lynched by a mob who broke into the police station to get to their target. In September, Abdul Ali was accused of blasphemy in Quet-ta and, after a violent mob tried to storm the police station in which he was being held, he was shifted to a more secure location where he was gunned down by a police officer who was then lauded as a hero by local clerics and activists and leaders of religio-political parties.

Then was the case of Dr Shahnawaz Kunbhar of Umerkot who was accused of blasphemy and then killed by police in a staged encounter. Following this, the local DIG and police officers were feted and garlanded by jubilant clerics.

But in a marked difference from the Quetta and Swat cases, where the families of the victims forgave the killers, the family of Dr Kunbhar demanded justice and their cries were amplified by the thousands who rallied in Umerkot in a public protest the likes of which we have never before seen in these cases.

Now, of course, the pushback is underway and the very parties who incited his murder are rallying to defend the police and justify their actions. After all, power and the impunity that power affords, is worth preserving even if it comes at such a terrible cost. — Courtesy Dawn

Jam calls for boosting rice exports, meeting EU food safety standards

ISLAMABAD (APP): Federal Minister for Commerce Jam Kamal Khan on Monday emphasized the need to increase Pakistan's rice exports and ensure compliance with European food safety standards, citing the country's 25 per cent share of the European rice export market.

He said during a meeting with the representative of the Rice Exporters Association of Pakistan (REAP), a news release issued here.

Pakistan holds 25 per cent of the European rice export market compared to India's 16 per cent. To maintain this competitive edge, Jam Kamal highlighted the necessity of collaboration between the government and exporters.

Rice exports play a vital role in Pakistan's economy, ranking second in export value after cotton. Rice exporters are a primary source of revenue and employment, with the government aiming to increase exports from $4 billion to $6-7 billion in the near future.

"We are focusing on improving our standards to meet international food safety requirements, especially in Europe," Jam Kamal added.

Recent diplomatic developments include discussions with Malaysian Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim on expanding rice and meat exports to Malaysia. A Pakistani business delegation, led by Jam Kamal, will visit Malaysia in November to explore new opportunities.

Malik Faisal Jahangir, Chairman of the Rice Exporters Association of Pakistan (REAP), said that Pakistan's rice exports face fewer regulatory challenges, with only 74 Rapid Alerts for pesticides were issued last year, compared to 264 for India.

Pakistan remains one of the lowest-risk countries concerning food safety standards.

However, Jahangir expressed concern over potential harm to Pakistan's export reputation from negative campaigns.

Jam Kamal stressed educating farmers to improve rice production quality and reduce alerts. Balochistan, despite producing a small quantity of rice, cultivates some of Pakistan's best organic rice.

He called for a joint effort by stakeholders to develop a five-year strategy enhancing Pakistan's rice export capacity and compliance with international standards.

Israeli strikes batter Beirut in heaviest bombardment so far

Monitoring Desk
BEIRUT: Israeli air attacks battered Beirut's southern suburbs overnight in the most intense bombardment of the Lebanese capital since Israel sharply escalated its campaign against Iran-backed group Hezbollah last month. During the night, the blasts sent booms across Beirut and sparked flashes of red and white for nearly 30 minutes visible from several kilometres away. It was the single biggest attack of Israel's assault on Beirut so far, witnesses and military analysts on local TV channels said. On Sunday a grey haze hung over the city and rubble was strewn across streets in the southern suburbs, while smoke columns rose over the area. "Last night was the most violence of all the previous nights. Buildings were shaking around us and at first I thought it was an earthquake. There were dozens of strikes - we couldn't count them all - and the sounds were deafening," said Hanan Abdullah, a resident of the Burj al-Barajneh area in Beirut's southern suburbs. Videos posted on social media, which Reuters could not immediately verify, showed fresh damage to the highway that runs from Beirut airport through its southern suburbs into downtown. Israel said its air force had "conducted a series of targeted strikes on a number of weapons storage facilities and terrorist infrastructure sites belonging to the Hezbollah terrorist organization in the area of Beirut". Lebanese authorities did not immediately say what the missiles had hit or what damage they caused. This weekend's intense bombardment came just ahead of the anniversary of the October 7 attack by Palestinian militant group Hamas on southern Israel in which some 1,200 people were killed and more than 250 taken hostage, according to Israeli figures. The target of Israel's airstrikes across Lebanon and its ground invasion in the south of the country is the Lebanese armed group Hezbollah, Iran's chief ally in the region. More than 2,000 people have been killed in nearly a year of fighting, most of them in the past two weeks, according to the Lebanese health ministry. The ministry said on Sunday that 23 people had been killed on Saturday. The United Nations' refugee chief said on Sunday that there were "many instances" where Israeli airstrikes had violated international law by hitting civilian infrastructure and killing civilians in Lebanon.

The mosque has been here for 20 years, and the neighbourhood has displaced people, imam Ahmed Fleet said. The Hamas-run Gaza government media office said Israel had struck 27 houses, schools and displacement shelters across Gaza in the past 48 hours. Medics said an Israeli airstrike killed three Palestinians in Rafah, near the border with Egypt, where Israeli forces have been operating since May. US scientist duo win Nobel for gene regulation breakthrough

Monitoring Desk
WASHINGTON: US scientists Victor Ambros and Gary Ruvkun won the Nobel Prize in Medicine on Monday for their discovery of microRNA and its role in how genes are regulated. Understanding the regulation of gene activity has been an important goal for decades, the Nobel jury said. If gene regulation goes awry, it can lead to serious diseases such as cancer, diabetes, or autoimmunity. "Their groundbreaking discovery revealed a completely new principle of gene regulation that turned out to be essential for multicellular organisms, including humans," the jury said. Collaborating but working separately, the pair conducted research on a 1-millimetre roundworm, C. elegans, to determine why cell mutations occurred and when. They discovered microRNA, a new class of tiny RNA molecules that play a crucial role in gene regulation, which in turn allows each cell to select only relevant instructions. Their findings were published in two articles in 1993. "The seminal discovery of microRNA has introduced a new and unexpected mechanism of gene regulation," Thomas Perlmann, secretary general of the Nobel Assembly, told reporters. "MicroRNAs are important for our understanding of embryological development, normal cell physiology and diseases such as cancer," he said. Ambros, 70, is a professor at the University of Massachusetts medical school while Ruvkun, 72, is a professor at Harvard Medical School. The pair will receive their Nobel prize, consisting of a diploma, a gold medal and a $1 million cheque, from King Carl XVI Gustaf in Stockholm on December 10, the anniversary of the 1896 death of scientist Alfred Nobel who created the prizes in his last will and testament. Last year, the medicine prize went to Katalin Kariko and Drew Weissman for work on messenger RNA (mRNA) technology that paved the way for Covid-19 vaccines.

Soon after it announced he had recovered. The previous month he was admitted for "routine examinations" and left later the same day.
