'Parliament reigns supreme,' says PM

"This is more than an amendment," says premier; calling legislation "reaffirmation of solidarity and agreement"

ISLAMABAD (INP): Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif declared Sunday a historic day for Pakistan, following the passage of the 26th Constitutional Amendment in the National Assembly.

"Today, it's been decided that parliament reigns supreme," he said, as 225 members, including coalition partners and independent lawmakers, voted in favour of the bill.

Under the judicial reforms passed during a late-night session of parliament, the chief justice of Pakistan will now be selected by a parliamentary committee and have a fixed term of three years. A new constitutional bench will also be formed.

The government

clinched 225 votes of the required 224 with the crucial support of a handful of independent candidates. PTI had refused to back the package and did not participate in the voting.

Speaking on the floor of the House, the prime minister emphasised that the amendment represents not just a legal change, but a symbol of unity and consensus.

"This is more than an amendment; it is a reaffirmation of solidarity and agreement across political lines," he noted.

Reflecting on the past, PM Shehbaz criticised what he termed "palace conspiracies" that led to the dismissal of governments and prime ministers.

Special parliamentary committee formed for CJP appointment

Four senators and eight MNAs have been nominated by political parties represented in parliament

Monitoring Desk

ISLAMABAD: A 12-member special parliamentary committee has been formed to oversee the appointment of Pakistan's next chief justice, marking a significant shift in the country's judicial selection process.

The committee, established following the 26th Constitutional Amendment, includes representation from the National Assembly and Senate, with nominees from major political parties submitted to the National Assembly speaker's office.

According to the speaker's office, four members have been nominated from the Senate. The Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam-Fazl (JUI-F) has named Kamran Murtaza, while the Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) has nominated seasoned lawyer Farooq H. Naek. The Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) selected Azam Naezer Tarar, and Barrister Ali Zafar has been nominated by the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI).

From the National Assembly, PML-N has put forward senior members Khawaja Asif, Ahsan Iqbal, and Shaista Pervaiz. PPP has nominated former prime minister Raja Pervaiz Ashraf and Naveed Qamar. PTI's nominees include Barrister Gohar and Sahibzada Hamid Raza, while the Muttahida Qaumi Movement (MQM) has chosen Khawaja Izzat Hassan for the special committee.

The Assembly Secretariat will issue a notification for the formation of the parliamentary committee shortly, following the speaker's approval.

The formation of this committee is part of sweeping changes introduced under the 26th Constitutional Amendment, which reforms the process of appointing the Chief Justice of Pakistan. Previously, the Chief Justice was selected based

Justice Mansoor Ali Shah says Question of jurisdiction to arise every day in SC following legislation on constitutional benches

ISLAMABAD (INP): On the heels of the 26th Amendment's passage, Justice Mansoor Ali Shah on Monday remarked that the question of jurisdiction would "arise every day" in the Supreme Court (SC) following legislation on constitutional benches.

In the wee hours of Monday, the much-awaited 26th Constitutional Amendment became law after approval of both houses of the Parliament, which was then given assent by President Asif Ali Zardari.

The 26th Amendment brings changes to the Constitution, most of which pertain to the judiciary. Some main reforms include taking away the Supreme Court's suo motu powers, setting the chief justice of Pakistan's (CJP) term at three years, and empowering the prime minister to appoint the next CJP from among the three most senior SC judges.

On Monday, while hearing a case related to the Competition Commission of Pakistan, Justice Shah passed a light-hearted remark, saying: "Will this case now go to the constitutional bench or can we hear it?"

"It seems now that this question will arise every day in the Supreme Court, whether the case will be heard by the normal bench or constitutional bench," Justice Shah said.

Advocate Farogh Naseem responded by saying that political cases have now become constitutional cases. At this, Justice Ayesha Malik said, "Now it's up to you and your constitutional benches."

Justice Shah then adjourned the case for three weeks, saying that by then they would have more clarity on the situation.

President signs constitutional amendments into law

ISLAMABAD (INP): The 26th Constitutional Amendment, which became law earlier on Monday after the approval of both houses of the Parliament, was given assent by President Asif Ali Zardari on Monday.

Pakistani politics saw a second "working weekend" in as many months, where the ruling coalition finally succeeded in passing the much-touted 'Constitutional Package' with a two-thirds majority in both the Senate and the National Assembly.

The 26th Amendment brings changes to the Constitution, most of which pertain to the judiciary. Some main reforms include taking away the Supreme Court's suo motu powers, setting the chief justice of Pakistan's (CJP) term at three years, and empowering the prime minister to appoint the next CJP from among the three most senior SC judges.

On Sunday, the bill, which had 22 clauses, was greenlit by the Senate with a two-thirds majority. Then, during a session that began late on Sunday night and continued past 5am on Monday, the National Assembly also passed it with a two-thirds majority.

The NA-approved version had 27 clauses after incorporating suggestions made by the Senate.

Following the conclusion of parliamentary procedures, Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif, according to Radio Pakistan, sent his advice to President Zardari for his assent on the newly enacted law — titled 'The Constitution (26th Amendment) Act, 2024'. Following the passage of the bill, PM Shehbaz delivered a speech in the NA and congratulated the parliament for the "historical achievement".

Enactment of 26th constitutional amendment victory of democracy: Tarar

ISLAMABAD (APP): Federal Minister for Information, Broadcasting, National Heritage, and Culture, Attaullah Tarar, on Monday hailed the passage of the 26th constitutional amendment as a victory for democracy, one that will be etched in history.

"The approval of the 26th constitutional amendment marks a significant milestone in Pakistan's history; a new dawn has begun," the information minister stated. Tarar extended congratulations to Pakistan People's Party Chairman Bilawal Bhutto Zardari, Jamiat Ulema-e-Islam Ameer Maulana Fazlur Rehman, the members of the federal cabinet, all coalition parties, and the entire nation on the successful passage of the amendment.

He emphasized that the amendment would bring greater stability to Pakistan's constitutional and legal framework. "Extensive consultations were held to ensure as much consensus as possible on the amendment," Tarar added.

The minister noted that the vision of Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah laid the foundation for constitutional thought in Pakistan. "History will confirm that this constitutional amendment is in the best interest of the people," he asserted. The amendment, according to Tarar, will eliminate obstacles to the swift delivery of justice.

We will challenge 26th constitutional amendment in court: Hafiz Naem

ISLAMABAD (Online): JI while rejecting 26th constitutional amendment has termed it tantamount to curbing the independence of judiciary.

Addressing a press conference here Monday, JI Amir Hafiz Naem ur Rehman said JUI-F while siding with government on draft bill has refreshed the memory of PDM-3.

"We will challenge 26th constitutional amendment after consultation with the lawyers, he added. The amendment has been made to occupy judiciary in the darkness of night.

Giving powers to parliamentary committee and prime minister for appointment of Chief Justice (CJ) is tantamount to weaken the judiciary.

It is regrettable that son of Mufti Mehmood and grand son of Zulfiqar Ali Bhutto violated the constitution on Sunday.

He said that data science is the core of artificial intelligence, and its quality is the foundation of any economic theory and development in the modern world and for that, our economy needs very reliable data.

The Minister said that behind the economic development of any nation are 10 years of continuous policies, which pave the way for their development

26th Constitutional Amendment Ayaz commends parliamentary journalists for exemplary reporting

ISLAMABAD (APP): Speaker National Assembly has lauded parliamentary journalists for their outstanding reporting on the occasion of the 26th Constitutional Amendment.

He commended the discipline and responsibility displayed by the journalists, recognizing their contribution to maintaining order during the session, said a news release.

The Speaker specifically praised the efforts of the Parliamentary Reporters Association of Pakistan (PRAP) for its role in ensuring professionalism and decorum during the event. He emphasized that the press gallery is an essential part of the Parliament, playing a critical role in conveying legislative activities to the public. "The press gallery is a vital component of the Parliament," the Speaker stated. "The role it plays in bringing the legislative work of the House to the people is of great importance."

He said that parliamentary journalists have consistently portrayed the positive image of the Parliament to the public and expressed hope that PRAP would continue to uphold its commendable traditions during future legislative sessions.

Intezar Panjutha recovery case: Enough is enough, recover abductee today, present him in the court: CJ IHC

ISLAMABAD (Online): Islamabad High Court (IHC) while expressing resentment over police performance in recovery case of lawyer Intezar Panjutha has summoned IG Police Islamabad today (Tuesday).

The Chief Justice (CJ) IHC Aamer Farooq has remarked " 10 days have passed. Has earth devoured the man. Enough is enough. The man be got recovered today (Tuesday) and be presented in the court. Don't make any wrong statement before the court.

He gave these remarks during hearing of Intezar Panjutha recovery case Monday.

The CJ IHC inquired

has any progress been made.

Counsel Faisal Chaudhry said we have got footages and pictures. At present no progress has been made. You had sought IB report.

SHO said under your order we made contact. Two pictures of front have been found Give these to us.

The CJ IHC remarked investigation has to be made by you and not by them.

SHO said the vehicle is not being seen till 5.02.

The CJ IHC remarked go ahead from two minutes too. SHO said what cameras were found ahead we went to Kala Chitta airport. But nothing was found.

Will file reference against 'defectors', says Mengal

ISLAMABAD (INP) Sardar Akhtar Mengal, the head of his own faction of the Balochistan National Party (BNP-M), has announced his intention to file a reference seeking the disqualification of two senators who voted in favour of the 26th Constitution Amendment Bill, in violation of the party line. BNP-M senators Muhammad Qasim and Naseema Ehsan had voted in support of the bill, enabling the ruling coalition to complete its numbers in the upper house of the parliament.

Talking to media, passage of the amendment bill from the Senate, Mr Mengal alleged that he was expelled from the visitors' gallery and the members' lobby of the Senate by the sergeant-at-arms before the start of the voting process so that he could not meet the two party dissidents.

He said he had gone to the Senate just to have an eye contact with the two senators and in an effort to at least make them feel embarrassed, but security officials told him that he could not sit in the gallery and the lobby as per the directives of Senate Chairman Yousuf Raza Gilani. BNP-M chief claims he was expelled from Senate visitors' gallery before vote. The move appears to be part of extra security measures taken by the government ahead of the crucial vote in both houses of parliament, on Sunday.

SC dismisses PTI's review petition regarding intra-party elections

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Supreme Court of Pakistan on Monday dismissed the review petition of Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) regarding the intra-party elections. A three-member bench of the apex court, headed by Chief Justice of Pakistan Qazi Faez Isa and comprising Justice Muhammad Ali Mazhar and Justice Musarrat Hali, heard the review appeal of PTI.

During the course of proceeding, Barrister Ali Zafar pleaded that this case couldn't be heard here after the passage of 26th constitutional amendment. The chief justice remarked that he has not seen the amendments yet and not aware about the details.

The court said that it had given lawyers another opportunity but no arguments were presented before it. The court declared that no errors were identified in decision dated January 13, and, subsequently, dismissed the review petition.

26th Amendment

Has the storm passed? The coming days will tell. The ruling coalition's much-debated 'constitutional package' was finally endorsed by the Senate late Sunday evening, capping off weeks of fervent politicking and negotiation over its different provisions.

It was headed to the National Assembly at the time these lines were being written. Compared to the draft that had emerged after the abortive first attempt to bulldoze the amendments, the bill approved yesterday appeared to be a more watered-down version.

Even the PTI, which lost an important opportunity to suggest improvements in the bill by boycotting the voting process, acknowledged that it was 'much better' than the initial proposals. The party's leader in the Senate, Barrister Ali Zaffar, was profuse in his praise for JUI-F chief Maulana Fazlur Rehman for this 'achievement', even though he maintained his party's reservations on the new process for judges' selection and key appointments in the superior judiciary.

The bill endorsed by parliament included 22 amendments in all, less than half of the over 50 provisions that were part of earlier drafts. This depleted version was also almost universally acceptable, with PTI leaders saying they would have participated in the voting process if it was held at a later date, mainly because they still needed to consult their jailed party chief on some remaining items. From first impressions, it appeared that the new appointment process for the Supreme Court chief justice remained the most contentious of the proposed amendments, with the government getting an unprecedented say in who makes the cut. Given the long-running feuds and divisions, both within the apex court and between the branches of the state, and their impact on major political developments in the country, the changes being made could trigger a new stand-off between the legal fraternity and the government. How the lawyers' community reacts remains to be seen.

A fear remains that the ruling coalition may try to misuse the amendments to appoint judges of their choice to the new 'constitutional bench', or elevate a 'like-minded' judge to the chief justice's position. Perhaps the PTI's should have taken its responsibility, as the primary opponent of these amendments, more seriously. It should have presented alternative ideas or proposed changes to make the process 'fairer'. Even if these proposals were rejected during the process, it could have at least claimed to have offered other options.

That said, the responsibility of building a consensus remained with the government, and if achieving buy-in from all parties meant taking a few more days or even weeks, the option should have been exhausted. Instead, the government bound itself to an arbitrary deadline, seemingly to pre-empt the upcoming change of guard at the apex court. It remains to be seen how matters will proceed from here.

Classroom change

Neda Mulji

As the world gets smaller, with knowledge-sharing across borders, the growth of AI and easy access to free learning platforms, teachers find newer ways of teaching. Many schools have addressed the need for change, collaborating within their teams to design better lesson plans, cater to students' changing learning styles and keep up with new trends.

Recent curriculum reforms have introduced student-centred pedagogy focused on inquiry-based approaches. However, the real question is whether the changes are implemented in a structured, school-wide framework, with results that are continuously monitored. Schools that have been prioritising this transformation may benefit from working backwards from their goals.

One way of doing this is to trace impact through timelines: teachers can note the list of changes they wish to prioritise and track their implementation each month. At the end of the academic year, a reflective exercise will show the results they have achieved in bringing about concrete change in their teaching approaches.

An effective way to track successful implementation of new methods would be through teaching 'mind maps' that jot down what is usually done against the new tools that teachers have introduced. The real task would be to execute the change in an ongoing, sustainable way — and not as a one-off experiment. Most teachers who try out something new also inevitably tend to fall back on tried and tested ways and 'give up' before putting in hard work to produce different or improved results. Reflection on the change and its impact is as valuable as the change itself.

The impact of embracing new ways of teaching is massive. Students start to respond with greater motivation, engage more readily with course content, and gradually learn to study more independently, thinking for themselves rather than relying on the teacher's explanations. They develop what Carol Dweck introduced as the 'growth mindset' in 2006.

The idea of the growth mindset is a change in student belief that ability and intelligence are malleable and not fixed. They can grow to infinite possibilities if nurtured with motivation and the passion to learn, with practice, reinforcement and positive feedback. Tracking progress does not merely entail monitoring grades, but also the level of effort and involvement that a student demonstrates through the school term.

Any kind of change is hard; sustaining it is even harder. However, growth lies in transformation, not in resistance to change. With an information overload and technological integration in learning, teachers are now called to action more relentlessly than ever before. Upskilling their skills calls for much more subject expertise alongside digital capability. Upgrading teaching involves keeping up with what students already know. Often this may mean they are more digitally savvy than their teachers.

Change involves not just upgrading, but diversifying the strategies and activities used to engage students in learning. The 21st century teaching calls for curating lessons to offer students new challenges, enabling them to work in collaboration, discover, analyse and communicate ideas. Students enjoy agency no matter what their age, and will often have unique perspectives to share.

This would imply keeping explanations short and crisp, while allocating sufficient time for students to work and discuss, evaluate and apply what they are taught. Most lesson plans tend to focus on one stream of work and fail to offer a 'package' of structured learning that allows them to engage, explore and explain what they know. Learners also need ongoing appreciation and acknowledgement of their efforts. When they get a chance to show-case their work or present ideas in class, the level of motivation improves dramatically. The teacher's work becomes easier when students take ownership of their learning and real change begins to surface.

Exasperated teachers, working hard to nudge students to study more, complain that students have changed massively and that they do not follow instructions like the students of yesteryear. Students have changed, both in their ways and their expectations, and the old models of teaching are no longer sustainable. Traditional teaching is being applied to students who are programmed differently, respond to vastly different stimuli, and many teachers are not yet ready to adapt.

But they can meet their students at least halfway by adapting to change, however cautiously. Often, change can start by reflecting on simple questions — what will help my students thrive? What can I do to involve them in learning? The answers are not complex for those ready for change. -- Courtesy Dawn

A death foretold

Zarrar Khuhro

Like his life, Yahya Sinwar's death was an act of resistance against seemingly unsurmountable odds. Born in 1962, in a refugee camp in Khan Younis to which his family had fled after being forced from their home in Ashkelon amidst the murders and massacres of the Nakba, Sinwar joined Hamas soon after its formation in 1987 and rose to lead its internal security wing.

It was a position in which he excelled, rooting out spies and collaborators, whom he disposed of with often brutal efficiency. It is perhaps a testament to the efficacy of the systems he set up that, despite the devastation of Gaza and the desperation of its people, Israel was unable to uncover any meaningful intelligence on his movements, or the movements of any other prominent Hamas leader in the Gaza Strip, for an entire year. When they did kill Sinwar it was, as per Israel's own account, quite by chance.

Arrested in 1982 and then in 1988, he was to spend 23 years in an Israeli jail before being released, along with 1,046 other Palestinian detainees, in exchange for the freedom of Israeli soldier Gilad Shalit. It was likely that this experience provided at least part of the motivation for launching the Oct 7 attacks, in which some 250 Israelis were taken captive and moved to Gaza.

Prison also served as a training ground; years later Sinwar would remark to his supporters: "They wanted prison to be a grave for us, a mill to grind our will, determination and bodies ... we turned the prison into sanctuaries of worship and academies for study."

It was no idle boast: Sinwar spent his term studying Hebrew, a language he became fluent in, and also studying how Israeli security forces, and in particular the notorious internal security wing Shin Bet, worked. It was knowledge he was to put to deadly effect. On Israel's hit list for years, Sinwar remained in the Gaza Strip, cementing his status as a fighter who remains with his people by posing in an armchair amidst the rubble of his house, which had been bombed in an attempt to assassinate him.

Ironically, the video of his last moments also shows him sitting in an armchair. Having engaged with, or been engaged by Israeli forces while moving above ground, Sinwar and his three bodyguards holed out in a building as Israeli forces approached. As per the Israeli account, Sinwar targeted the approaching troops with hand grenades, managing to seriously injure at least one of them. Unwilling to enter and engage, Israeli forces then called in a tank which fired at the building, seriously injuring Sinwar and shredding his right arm. Then they called in a drone strike. His bodyguards now dead, a critically injured Sinwar sat in an armchair with his face wrapped in a keffiyeh, as the Israeli drone video shows. With his one functioning arm, he threw a piece of wood at the approaching quadcopter in a last act of defiance, a singularly human act of resistance in the face of a tech-driven holocaust.

Even then, it took a sniper shot at long range to finally kill him. In death, he also exposed many Israeli lies: for over a year, Israeli media has dutifully reported every claim of Israeli intelligence as to Sinwar's whereabouts as fact. We were told he had fled Gaza and was hiding in another country while his compatriots suffered. We were told that he was sheltering among Palestinian civilians in a refugee camp dressed as a woman, a fabrication that was also used to obliquely justify Israeli massacres. We were told that Israel had not targeted him yet because he was sheltering in a tunnel using Israeli hostages as human shields while wearing a suicide vest.

Instead, Sinwar was found on the front lines just a few metres away from the Israeli army's operational area in Rafah, and by releasing the video of his final moments, Israel has done more to ensure that the legend of Sinwar survives than he could ever have imagined. Even those with Zionist sympathies have wondered why that decision was made, but to me it stems from the fundamental Israeli inability to understand the people they have been oppressing and decimating for nearly a century. If the Israeli intention was to show Sinwar's helplessness and, by extension, the hopelessness of resistance, then they have achieved the exact opposite. If they thought that eliminating Sinwar would eliminate his movement, then that shows that they have not understood that resistance is not a function of leadership as much as it is a function of oppression; so long as the one exists, so too will the other.

As for Sinwar, this is the ending he wanted. In an interview, he once remarked "The greatest gift Israel can give me is to assassinate me ... I prefer to die a martyr from an F-16 than to die of coronavirus or a stroke or a heart attack."

Sinwar got what he desired, it remains to be seen if Israel will. -- Courtesy Dawn

Govt committed to strengthen IT, Telecom sector: Shaza Fatima

ISLAMABAD (APP): Minister of State for IT and Telecommunication, Shaza Fatima Khawaja said that innovations in data networks, cloud computing, artificial intelligence and 5G are crucial for Pakistan's economic growth and in addressing key challenges such as healthcare, education, and sustainable development. Speaking at the SANOG-42 Conference, the Minister highlighted the importance of regional cooperation in enhancing the country's digital infrastructure and in developing inclusive, secure and sustainable technologies. She reaffirmed the government's commitment to strengthening the IT and Telecom sectors through various initiatives.

"We have launched IT Parks in Islamabad and Karachi, supporting over 1,300 startups through our National Incubation Centers. Our Digital Pakistan Policy aims to boost e-governance, cybersecurity, and entrepreneurship," she stated.

She acknowledged the telecom sector's significant contribution to the national economy. She added that the upcoming 5G spectrum auction, scheduled for early 2025, alongside policies such as the National Fiberization Policy and Spectrum Sharing, would further accelerate growth.

The minister noted Pakistan's remarkable progress in cybersecurity, placing it among the top-tier nations in the ITU 2024 Global Cybersecurity Index. "This advancement reflects our strong commitment across all cybersecurity pillars, positioning us alongside leading countries in cybersecurity readiness," she said.

She highlighted the IT sector's thriving exports, which have already surpassed $3 billion. Initiatives such as local Chromeblock manufacturing by Google and Islamabad's transformation into a Model Digital City underscore the country's vibrant IT landscape.

"We continue to focus on training young people, particularly in cybersecurity, to ensure a skilled workforce for the future," Shaza Fatima remarked. She outlined comprehensive policies that aim to enhance access, affordability, and innovation, ensuring sustained growth and global competitiveness.

The minister also called for strengthened partnerships across South Asia, leveraging SANOG's experience for policy alignment and capacity building. "Our focus remains on optimizing Internet Exchange Points and enhancing network resilience. We invite international partnerships and investments to further drive the growth of our IT sector," she added.

Atif Ikram says: FBR's I&I notices to industries are condemnable

ISLAMABAD: President Federation of Pakistan Chamber of Commerce and Industry Atif Ikram Shaikh has said that the notices of I&I by FBR to industrialists are condemnable. The notices stated that fake sales tax invoices were taken as inputs. Scrutiny of the importers to some extent can be done by the buyer before buying the goods but a thorough investigation procedure should be adopted because what can the purchaser do if the importer refuses to accept his own sales tax invoices. We can check NTN and the genuineness of the company but FBR says that the buyer should investigate completely, it is not possible for us. Federation President Atif Ikram said that Purchaser conducts banking transactions, maintains all records, yet issuing notices is tantamount to harassment. FBR should oblige the importers to update their complete record and put it on their website. Our demand is that the government and FBR should adopt the rules of doing business so that industries can run and exports can increase. If the industries are freed from day to day inquiries then the economy can move towards improvement

Governor Kundi for permanent resolution of Kurram situations

PESHAWAR (APP): Governor Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Faisal Karim Kundi on Monday expressed concern regarding the security situation in Kurram, emphasizing that solutions should align with local customs and Pashtun traditions permanently. He said this during a meeting at the Governor's House with former MNAs Pir Haider Ali Shah and Jawad Hussain, along with Kurram tribal elders. Governor Kundi said he is well aware of the challenges facing Kurram and is actively engaging with various community leaders to find a lasting solution.

He underscored the need for a permanent resolution rather than a temporary peace. The Governor highlighted that some incite sectarian conflict between Shia and Sunni communities and urged locals to remain vigilant against such divisive tactics. He reassured the delegation that the people of Kurram are part of the broader community, and restoring complete peace in the area is a top priority for him. The delegation informed the Governor about the persistent sectarian violence that has plagued Kurram for years, resulting in the loss of thousands of lives, including children, women, and the elderly. They said that travel remains perilous, and the ongoing conflict is exacerbated by issues surrounding land disputes, which need resolution for sustainable peace. Additionally, they said that a small fraction approximately three percent of individuals are responsible for disrupting the peace, and they called for action against them. The blockade of roads has led to shortages of essential goods and medicines, while trade at the Pak-Afghan Kharlachi border is stalled, causing significant economic losses.

UN says Israel targeting UN peacekeepers' positions in Lebanon, as Gaza nightmare escalates

UNITED NATIONS (APP): The UN peacekeeping force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) has said that an Israeli army bulldozer demolished an observation tower and the perimeter fence of a UN position in Marwahin, a town in the southern part of the country. A press statement issued by the Mission, formally known as the UN Interim Force in Lebanon, said Israeli Defence Forces (IDF) "deliberately demolished" the watchtower and the fence surrounding the Marwahin site. "Yet again, we remind the IDF and all actors of their obligations to ensure the safety and security of UN personnel and property and to respect the inviolability of UN premises at all times," UNIFIL stated. The mission also reiterated that the violation of a UN site and damage to its assets constitutes a flagrant violation of international law and Security Council resolution 1701, the unanimously adopted text to end to a 2006 war between Israel and Hezbollah and chart a path towards security on the border between Israel and Lebanon. The statement went on to note that the Israeli army has repeatedly asked UNIFIL to vacate its positions along the Blue Line and has deliberately damaged UN positions. Despite the pressure on the mission and troop-contributing countries, UNIFIL stressed that peacekeepers remain in all their positions, the mission's statement said on Sunday. "We will continue to carry out our mandated tasks of monitoring and reporting," the statement concluded. Sunday's developments come after a series of worrying incidents in the past days in which a total of five peacekeepers have been injured. Just four days ago, UNIFIL issued a statement saying peacekeepers at a position near Kafer Kela had observed an IDF Merkava tank firing at their watchtower. Two cameras were destroyed, and the tower was damaged, it said.

Indonesia's Prabowo swears in cabinet of over 100 ministers, deputies

JAKARTA: Indonesia's newly minted leader, President Prabowo Subianto, officially swore in his cabinet on Monday, a team which analysts said reflected continuity of his predecessor's main policies. Prabowo took office on Sunday as the eighth Indonesian president, taking the mantle from Joko "Jokowi" Widodo. In a fiery speech to lawmakers, he promised to eradicate corruption and aim to reach self-sufficiency in food and energy. Prabowo's cabinet has 48 ministries with over 100 ministers and deputies, including re-appointments of Sri Mulyani Indrawati as finance minister and Bahlil Lahadalia as energy minister. Sri Mulyani will preside over Prabowo's main programmes, including giving free meals to about 20 million children which could cost the state budget 71 trillion rupiah ($4.60 billion) in the first year.

Japan PM facing lukewarm approval ahead of election

TOKYO (AFP/APP): Approval ratings for Japan's new Prime Minister Shigeru Ishiba have fallen ahead of an October 27 general election, one weekend poll showed, with another survey suggesting the ruling coalition could struggle to secure a majority. Former defence minister Ishiba took office this month after being voted leader of the Liberal Democratic Party (LDP), which has been in power for most of Japan's post-war history.

Ukraine attacks forced Black Sea Fleet to move warships from Sevastopol, Russian official says

MOSCOW: Russia's Black Sea Fleet has been forced to move many warships from the naval base of Sevastopol on the Crimean peninsula, which Russia annexed in 2014, due to attacks by Ukraine, a Russian-installed official was quoted as saying on Sunday. The remarks by Dmitry Rogozin, a Russian-installed senator for the Russian-controlled Zaporizhzhia region and a former head of Russia's space agency, are the first Russian official confirmation that the fleet has had to move from Sevastopol. Ukraine has repeatedly said its attacks on Russian warships in the Black Sea have forced Moscow to move ships to Novorossiisk. Rogozin told the M o s k o v s k y Komsomolets, opens new tab newspaper that Russia needed to get more serious about its drone development, the organisation of its military drone units and the development of electronic warfare and satellite positioning systems. "A military-technical revolution is taking place before our very eyes," Rogozin said of the development of drones and electronic warfare, adding that the pace of innovation was changing the situation at the front every month.

Oil-rich Iraqi Kurdistan votes, shadowed by economic struggles

ARBIL: Iraq's Kurdistan voted on Sunday to elect a new parliament for the autonomous oil-rich region, where voters expressed concern over economic struggles and disenchantment with the political elite. Iraqi Kurdistan presents itself as a relative oasis of stability in the turbulent Middle East, attracting foreign investors due to its close ties with the United States and Europe. However, activists and opposition figures contend that the region, autonomous since 1991, faces the same issues affecting Iraq as a whole: corruption, political repression and cronyism among those in power. Originally scheduled for two years ago, the vote was postponed four times due to disputes between the region's two historic parties, the Kurdistan Democratic Party (KDP) and the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan (PUK). Each party is controlled by a powerful Kurdish family—the KDP by the Barzanis and the PUK by the Talabans. Despite holding election rallies and mobilising their patronage networks, experts.

Kamala turns 60, but prefers to talk about Trump's age

STONECREST: Kamala Harris turned 60 on Sunday in the final stretch of a knife-edge election battle with 78-year-old Donald Trump, as she urged a Black congregation in Georgia to embrace compassionate values while others "spread hate, sow fear and cause chaos." Harris, speaking at a Baptist megachurch near Atlanta, did not mention Trump by name but the crowd — after spontaneously serenading her with

"Happy Birthday" — nodded knowingly to her allusions to her Republican rival. Georgia is one of the key states that are expected to decide the November 5 election. Both candidates were planning events later Sunday in another of those states, Pennsylvania, which both sides see as a must-win. With just over two weeks before Election Day, the Democratic vice president and the Republican billionaire are in a fierce race. Harris, addressing the enthusiastic Black churchgoers.

US investigates leak on intelligence about Israel's Iran attack plans

WASHINGTON: The United States is investigating the leak of a pair of highly classified intelligence documents describing Israel's preparations for a retaliatory strike on Iran, House Speaker Mike Johnson said on Sunday. The documents appear to have been prepared by the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency, describing US interpretations of Israeli Air Force and Navy planning based on satellite imagery from Oct. 15-16. They began circulating last week on the Telegram messaging app. Israel has been planning a response to a ballistic-missile barrage carried out by Iran on Oct. 1, its second direct attack on Israel in six months. Israel has intensified its offensive in Gaza and Lebanon.

Expelled Indian envoy blames Trudeau for row

OTTAWA: India's envoy to Canada, who is being expelled over what Ottawa says are links to the murder of a Sikh leader, insisted in an interview he was innocent and said Prime Minister Justin Trudeau had wrecked bilateral political ties. Both countries on Monday ordered out six diplomats in tit-for-tat moves over Ottawa's allegations that New Delhi was targeting Indian dissidents on Canadian soil. Trudeau specifically tied the six to the murder of Sikh separatist

Hardeep Singh Nijjar last year in British Columbia. Sanjay Kumar Verma, India's envoy to Canada, told CTV that Trudeau had been relying on intelligence rather than evidence. "On the basis of intelligence, if you want to destroy a relationship, be my guest. And that's what he did," Verma said in an interview broadcast on Sunday. Asked whether he had anything to do with Nijjar's murder, Verma said: "Nothing at all. No evidence was presented. (This is) politically motivated."

Its time to halt institutional disruption with full force: Senator Irfan Siddiqui

ISLAMABAD (APP): Parliamentary Party Leader of Pakistan Muslim League (Nawaz) in the Senate and Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Senator Irfan Siddiqui has strongly commended Parliament for taking a decisive step to restore balance and protect the Constitution with full force.

"The time has come for Parliament to halt the path of disruption, restore the balance of constitutional institutions, and uphold the Constitution in accordance with its oath. The 26th Amendment is a determined step by Parliament in this noble direction," he said.

In a statement posted on X on Monday, the senior PML-N leader criticized the long-standing unchecked judicial activism, which, under the guise of judicial independence, has paralyzed the other two pillars of the state, Legislature and Executive. He stated that this activism is now threatening the supremacy and sanctity of the Constitution itself.

"Some parts of the Constitution have fallen victim to the doctrine of necessity or convenience, some deemed unworthy of attention, and others being taken over under the pretext of interpretation."

Senator Siddiqui expressed concern that now the trend of rewriting the Constitution to achieve desired outcomes is becoming a routine.

FSC hails passage of 26th Constitutional Amendment

ISLAMABAD (APP): The Federal Shariat Court (FSC) hailed the passage of 26th Constitutional Amendment as a landmark achievement, reaffirming Pakistan's commitment in promoting Islamic finance and aligning the country's financial system with Shariah principles.

According to press release issued by the Federal Shariat Court, Senior Adviser Research Dr. Mohammad Matiaur Rehman said the passing of this amendment by the Parliament highlighted the collective resolve of Pakistan's lawmakers to advance the country's Islamic banking sector and contribute to the broader objective of a Ribafree economy. This amendment follows the landmark judgment delivered by the Federal Shariat Court on April 28, 2022, authored by Justice Dr. Syed Mohammad Anwer. In the judgment, the court gave a five-year timeline for the elimination of Riba from the country's financial system. Remarkably, this court decision had now become part of the Constitution, an unprecedented step in Pakistan's legislative history.

The newly amended Article 38 (f) of the Constitution now states, "Eliminate Riba completely before the first day of January 2028."
